It is astonishing how quickly depression disappears and the "star of hope" ascends; only a week ago the feeling in many places was one of extreme despair—it seemed as if the bottom had dropped out and there would be no use striving any more. Now, just one week later, men are trying to forget, all are busy cleaning up and getting back to the usual routine, prepared to make the best of it. Many of the dealers and growers suffered severely, but this is past, and all are hustling to make the most of the remainder of the season. Mild sunny weather has succeeded the wintry blast, producing quantities of cut roses and other stock. Roses are so plentiful that quantity lots are sold at very low rates. American Beauties are in full crop and some superb stock is seen. The Hadley is also in evidence—what a grand color. Killarney roses are offered at very low rates and much of it is splendid stock. Carnations appear to hang fire, the demand being anything but eager. Sweet peas have the call; the orchid Spencers are superb. They are doing well with a number of growers, and are among the best sellers in the cut flower store. The amount of Easter lilies left over from Saturday, April 17, was the largest ever seen in this market. Every store appeared to have more or less of these plants unsold, in consequence of which the price tumbled rapidly until the quotation of cut lilies was $3 to $4 per hundred, a new low record for this market. Snapdragons are now very plentiful and the beautiful spikes of bloom are much fancied by flower lovers. The great quantity of roses now coming to the market are encouraging cut price sales. All the shorter grades of roses are offered at $10 to $15 per thousand and even lower on large quantities; this stock averages about 12-inch stems. Southern daffodils are in, but do not compare with the local stock in quality. The wholesale commission men are going strong into plants. One firm handled over 6,000 pots of lilies in addition to a large assortment of bulbous and other similar stock in pots and pans. Now that Easter is over, they have orders out for certain lines of bedding stock, which they propose to furnish at the lowest market price. Eventually, the way the business is shaping up, the entire selling end will be in the hands of trained salesmen, who feel at all times the pulse of the market, who can direct what is best to be grown and predict with reasonable certainty about what it will bring. Already contracts for next year's Easter delivery have been made in several lines.

NOTES.

"George Cooper Watson, who now parts his name in the middle," says that I find fault with him in the above statement. Not I. I have too much admiration for his ability to even breathe a protest on criticism of any kind. He can attach his name any old way; most of us do not need it, his personality standing out in the lines alone. As to the "bald" feature, if George, who is an expert seedsman, would only include with a guarantee, "a la Burpee," papers of red, black or brown hair in his offerings (seed), he could soon write his name any old way to checks of four or five figures. May he live long and prosper and continue to send out the tartlets and ginger snaps that are so much enjoyed by his brothers of the craft.

The large property adjoining the Century Flower Shop, 114 South Twelfth street, with an "L" extending to 1201-03 Sansom street, in the rear, has been purchased by H. H. Battles. The assessed value of the properties is $83,000.

Robert Crawford Jr.'s Ford car was badly smashed up last week, putting it out of commission for the time of the Easter rush. His reliable Autocar was, however, on the job doing double duty.

American Beauty roses are the feature with the Leo Niessen Co., and their stock is wonderfully large and fine. Gardenias and sweet peas are also a feature.

The M. Rice Co. are getting their large selling force on the road for Memorial day. A very large business is being done with magnolia leaves for wreaths.

STATE ORGANIZATION PLANNED.

With nothing special on the program for the regular meeting, April 8, it at first seemed as though only routine work would constitute the meeting, but before the time for adjournment arrived it was a very lively and interesting one after all. The entertainment committee reported as having good grounds in view but quite a discussion followed as to what day would be most suitable. It was finally decided to hold the annual picnic at Keipper's park, Sunday, August 1. In arguing the point about the day, it was thought advisable to hold the picnic on a Sunday in order to give all the employes a chance to attend and help swell the attendance. The press committee did not, after interviewing a good many retailers, do any Easter advertising in the daily papers; everyone expected to reap a harvest without this aid, and from reports, they all did a very fine business.

The most important topic of the evening, which by the way came wholly unexpected, was the idea of having a Wisconsin State Florists' Association. While during the course of the evening it was proven that some of the club members had thought and talked about such an association for a long time past, yet never a word came before the club to that effect. But it did not take long for the seed to germinate, for it was, after due deliberation, voted right then and there that President W. R. Schroeder appoint a committee soon, to prepare and forward to all florists of the state of Wisconsin an invitation to attend a meeting the fore part of May, at our club room, for the purpose of organizing the Wisconsin State Florists' Association. No reason why our state should not have such an organization when from all reports similar associations throughout the country are flourishing, and proving to be of great value and interest to those who take up this work.

PRICES DO NOT EXIST.

While the writer of these notes is not a pessimist he will state that if the cut flower business of this city was ever in a worse condition than at the present time, it is not within the memory of living men. The market is glutted with stock, and for this week we refuse to quote prices, for the reason that there are no prices to quote. It is merely a wild scramble to unload at any price. A little good stock may be selling at a fair price, but there is four times as much that does not sell at all.

NOTES.

Traendly & Schenck, after being 21 years in the wholesale business in West 28th street, will hereafter be found at 436 Sixth avenue, between 26th and 27th streets. The well established reputation of this firm will bring them success in any location.

C. H. Totty will leave for the Panama-Pacific exposition April 26. He will spend about three weeks in California. He has been appointed a member of the international board of jurors on the horticultural exhibits of the exposition.

Walter F. Sheridan, C. W. Scott and John Miesem went to Patchogue last week, in sympathy for their friend Frank Niquet, who lost his son John of pneumonia, notice of which appears in another column.

Mention of the death of Mrs. John B. Nugent will be found elsewhere in these columns. The death of this talented and amiable woman has cast a pall of gloom over the wholesale district.

J. K. Allen expects to be settled in his new store, 118 West 28th street, by April 17. Mr. Allen is another of the "old reliables", and there is no doubt that his customers will follow him.

W. Earle Riedel, son of Harry Riedel, of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, celebrated his sixteenth birthday on April 7, and a merry party of young friends made it a joyous occasion.

James Purdy, who for 28 years was in the wholesale business in this city, but who retired 10 years ago, is yet a robust man and is frequently seen in the busy marts of trade.

Frederick H. Dressel, son of Frederick Dressel, the well known grower of Weehawken, has bought the retail store of E. Bonnot, 188 Newark avenue, Jersey City, N. J.

R. Spauling, of J. H. Small & Sons' staff, has the sympathy of his associates on account of the death of his wife. He took her body to Atlanta, Ga., for burial.

A. F. E. Hugo, an expert designer, formerly with G. E. M. Stumpp and later with John S. Nicholas, is in St. Joseph's hospital seriously ill.

The monthly meeting of the club was held in the Grand Opera House building on the night of April 12, Pres. Bunyard in the chair. The feature of the meeting was the lecture of Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., his subject being, "Among the Roses at Home and Abroad." Mr. Pyle is well known as a very clever and able man, and on this occasion he sustained his reputation. His lecture was beautifully illustrated with stereopticon views of roses and rose gardens, the world over. In these hurried notes we cannot do justice to Mr. Pyle, but will add that he was given a standing vote of thanks.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. JOHN B. NUGENT.

On Saturday night, April 10, after a week of intense suffering from pneumonia, Mrs. Nugent passed away. The sympathy of every one in the florist trade, wherever Mr. Nugent and his beautiful wife were known, is extended to him in this great bereavement.

Mrs. Nugent was universally beloved. Her friends were innumerable. Especially was she esteemed by the members of the New York Florists' Club, of which her husband was president in 1911. She was a lady of rare attainments, her musical ability giving her a national reputation. There was no limit to the generous use of her talents in behalf of others. The sunlight of her smile was a perpetual delight in her home, and wherever she was known. For years, her wonderful voice was heard at the club's banquets, and its memory will ever remain an inspiration to those who heard it. As a public singer her career was at its zenith. She had just completed a contract to sing in opera at Washington, D. C., when stricken and hope of her recovery was felt up to the end. Mrs. Nugent was 33 years of age.

Funeral services were held at 10:30, Tuesday morning, April 13, at Broadway Tabernacle, 56th street and Broadway. The floral offerings from Mr. Nugent's many friends were innumerable. Nearly every florist of note in the city manifested by his presence at the funeral, the high esteem felt for the departed. Interment was at Woodlawn. —The Tribute of a Friend.

Committees were appointed to prepare suitable resolutions relating to the the deaths of Mrs. John B. Nugent, and Simon Rodh, a member of the club. Various committees reported progress. W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., and Stephen G. Milory, head gardener for Geo. Schlegel, of Brooklyn, exhibited orchids, for which they received certificates. The house committee furnished some "eats" that were very fair.

PRICES IN LOWEST RESTING PLACE.

Pittsburgh has experienced a pleasant change to mild spring weather the past week; quite the opposite of the kind we had for the week previous to Easter, when a very cool wave swept over this vicinity. The warm sunshine has brought out the crops from all corners of our territory, and prices have tumbled down to their lowest resting place, and no doubt will remain so for some time. The warm weather has also shown its effect on flowers, especially carnations, and shipped stock does not amount to much when it reaches Pittsburgh these days. The local growers are all on full crop, but when one considers how good the Easter business was, he need not feel so blue because of the stock not moving so freely as it has been the past few weeks. Encouraging reports from all around the city were received relative to an excellent Easter, which is quite the opposite of the same day last year, and of our last Christmas. There were plenty of roses, lilies, carnations and lilacs, and the large business done is attributed to the heavy crops which kept prices down, there being very little, if any, advance in prices for Easter. Violets and sweet peas were short of supply. Glad tidings of a revival of prosperity in all

NOTES.

The opening of the new department store of Rosenbaum Co. called for an exceptionally large amount of flowers Wednesday, April 14, the bulk of the arrangement being executed by Ray J. Daschbach. To visit this store on opening day would lead one to believe that it were a new flower store, there being so many large vases and set pieces. Harris Bros. also contributed a large share of the decorations.

J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, Pa., was in the city last week and reports an entire clean-up for Easter, both in cut flowers and plants.

The window of Mrs. E. A. Williams presented a gorgeous spectacle in the array of fancy blooming plants and baskets for Easter.

E. J. Farreley has taken over the retail business of Welch & Hall, in Sharon, Pa., and will operate it under his own name.

Wm. McCauley was on the job at G. P. Weaklen Co.'s store for the Easter rush, and says he found plenty to do.

The McCallum Co. have been handling an excellent line of fancy Spencer sweet peas.

Cincinnati.

PRICES HIT BED ROCK.

The local market began to crowd up about the middle of last week and by the end of the week was in a tremendous slump. Everything was, and is, plentiful, and buyers' prices rule in the market and these of course are far from high or even ordinary. Shipping business, however, continues pretty fair. Roses and carnations have accumulated to such a point that, at the time of this writing, it seems impossible to move all of them at even rock bottom prices. The cut of both are very heavy and of very good quality, but unless the unforseen should happen many are bound to reach the ash-barrel. Monday's demand was active and took up a great many offerings, but hardly a substantial part of the receipts. Lilies, too, including Easter lilies, callas and rubrums, are very plentiful and, following the general trend of the market, have slumped decidedly in price. Bulbous stock is coming in in large quantities. Sweet peas are in a very heavy supply. Not even the best of the home grown realize a fair price.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held Monday evening at Hotel Gibson. R. Witterstaetter exhibited some blooms of his new sport of Tausenschoen. The color is a good dark pink, cerise. The consensus of opinion of the members present was that the rose should and would prove a good and welcome addition to the list of climbers.

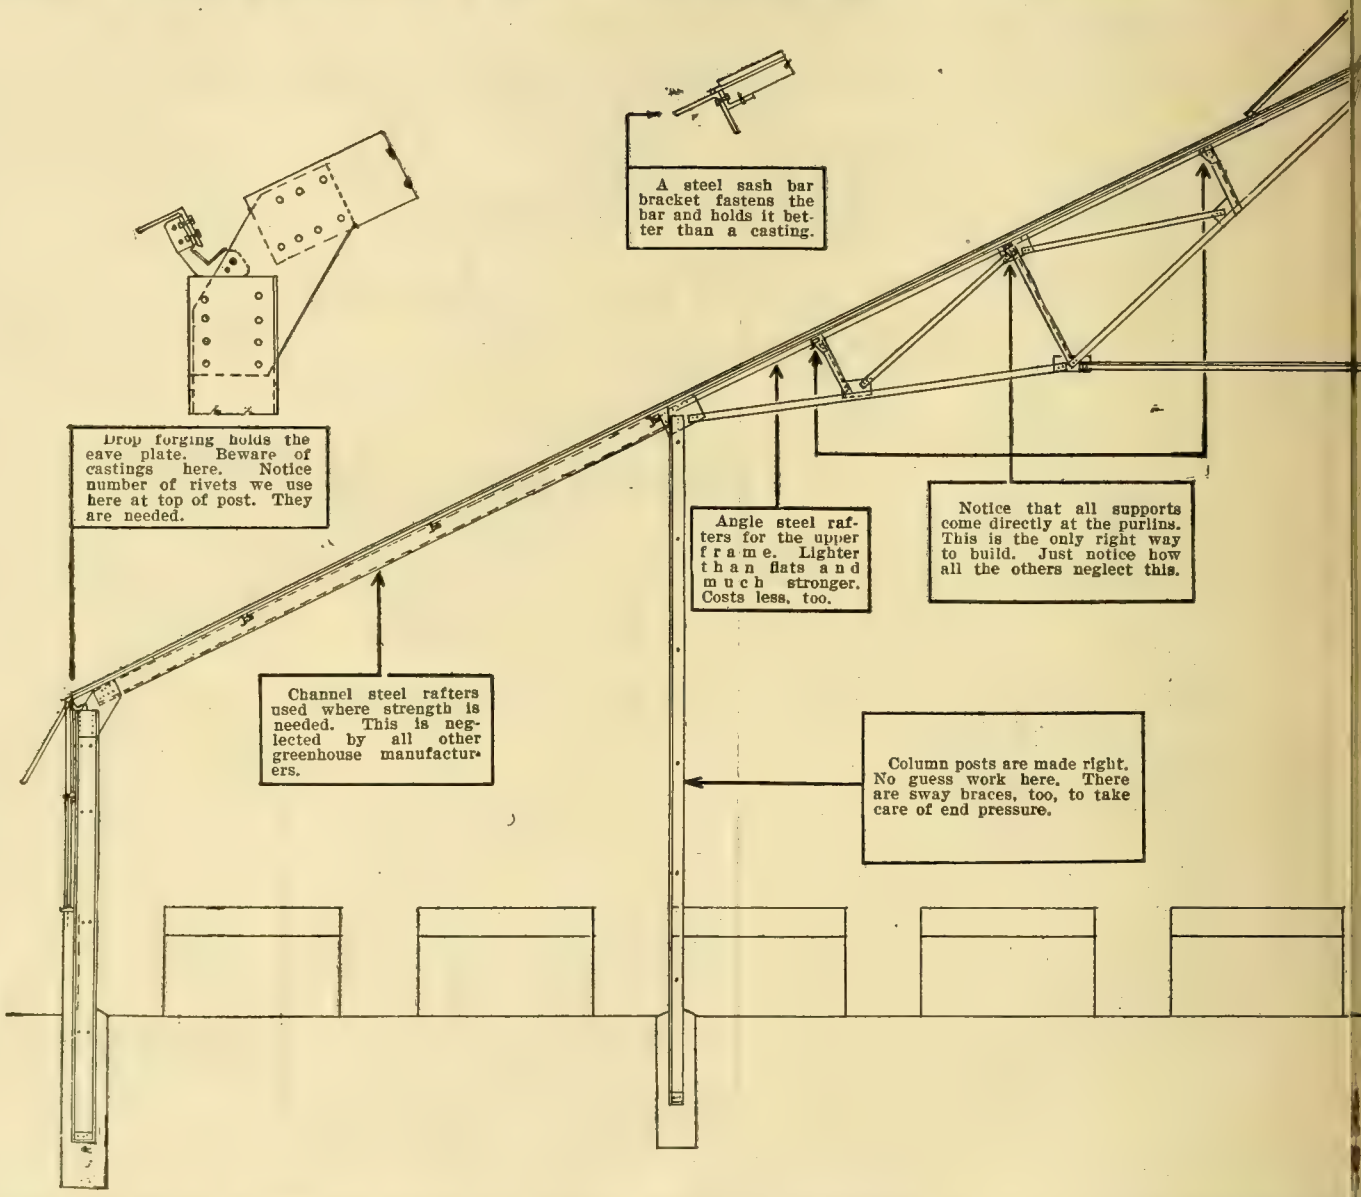
The Famous Moninger ALL STEEL SAFE AND SURE



Our All-Steel Frame is made for three SAFETY Spacings—8 ft. 4 in. (6 lights 16-

You will find so many points of superiority in our All-steel Frame houses that you will be surprised. If you are going to build a new house you can't do better than ask us to show you how to get a better house for the same money, or less than you have been paying.

There is no comparison between our new All-steel Frame and the common, every-day styles heretofore in use. It's better all the way through in every little detail. If you'll take the time to go over the matter from end to end, you'll save money and be convinced that the only safe and perfect house is the Moninger.

This new construction is different from the flat rafter, and it's different from the truss house. It's going to revolutionize greenhouse building. It's as far ahead of the old, unsafe, iron frame types as the iron frame was in advance of the old wooden types.

glass), 12 ft. 6 in. (9 lights 16-in. glass), 16 ft. 8 in. (12 lights 16-in. glass)

Notice there is not one casting used, and none are necessary. Every fitting used is steel, and they are neat and light. The eave plate is fastened to the posts with a forging—the strongest and toughest steel made. The columns are fastened to the roof with steel plates, with enough bolts to hold it there. Every bolt and every rivet has been figured to do its part, and they will do it. All guesswork has been cut out. There is no intentional corner-cutting. either.

This new type is designed by people who know what they are doing, and any first-class civil engineer anywhere will O. K. it. This can't be said of other styles. No reputable engineer will O. K. any of the other flat rafter commercial houses on the market, for they are not correctly designed nor built for strength. They are unsafe and we can prove it.

Before you put another dollar in a greenhouse, let us talk it over. We'll call on you any time or any place and show you the goods. Our salesmen know the greenhouse from A to Z. Try us out this time. You'll be surprised at how much we give you for your money. With Moninger you never get stung.

St. Louis.

PRICES SLAUGHTERED TO MOVE STOCK.

The week after Easter the market opened up with a decided glut in all varieties of flowers. The wholesalers now have big sales with little money coming in, and the retailer is "chesty" from the fact that he can sport lots of flowers with little cost. Carnations have been sold as low as $4 per 1,000. Roses also are plentiful. Sweet peas are selling at $1 per 1,000 and fancy Butterfly at $2 per 1,000. Long stem American Beauty roses are being sold cheap, the demand being very slow. Violets are about over. Jonquils are arriving soft and are unsalable, also Narcissus poeticus. Ferns, plumosus and all greens are selling fairly well. We will soon have out-door lilacs.

NOTES.

Nelson Cunleff will succeed Dwight F. Davis as park commissioner May 1. Mr. Cunleff is a native of this city, 33 years old. He was interested in park engineering at Forest park after the world's fair and served four years under G. E. Kessler. He then entered the service of the park department.

We regret to announce the serious illness of Miss Norma Bruenig, daughter of Otto Bruenig, age five years. An operation for appendicitis was performed April 12, which it is hoped will be successful. Otto is manager at H. G. Berning's.

Grimm & Gorly had a sweet pea sale, three bunches for 10 cents. The poor grower is praying for a general let up in sweet peas. His back is broken picking and bunching.

The florists' club met April 8, only a few members being present. No important business was discussed, all matters being put off until the next meeting.

Otto G. Koenig was elected by a big majority as republican alderman for the twenty-seventh ward. He was previously in the city hall as city councilman.

Ostertag Bros. have a fine display of Boston ferns and other decorative plants at their store on Washington avenue.

Alex. Siegel had a special sale of sweet peas at five cents per bunch, also carnations at 15 cents per dozen.

The Grand Leader, Grimm & Gorly and Alex. Siegel had special sales of sweet peas and carnations recently.

The warm weather will open everything for the plantsmen, the planting-out season having started.

The sunken garden in back of the municipal building is now full of tulip beds in all varieties.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. displayed over 50,000 sweet peas one day last week.

The playgrounds and other open air spaces are now opening up under the park management.

SOCIAL EVENTS SWELL SALES.

Business continues regular and quite satisfactory here; since Easter there seems to have been a sufficiency of social events, weddings, etc., to give all the florists something good to do almost every day. The bedding plant trade is also getting quite brisk, there being a steady call every day for the early spring stock, such as pansies and verbenas, particularly. Saturday bargain day sales are getting to be a feature. Saturday, April 10, Furrow & Company specialized on carnations at a flat rate of 50 cents per dozen. The Stiles Co.'s special offer was Lady Hillingdon roses. These special Saturday sales are a very commendable feature—they make flower purchasers out of bargain hunters not usually flower buyers, and they are profitable.

We have been having lots of rain—floods of it. This region in some seasons can truthfully be classed as a semi-arid region, which comes about from a deficiency of rain and dry, warm winds. So far this season we have a several inch surplus above the usual average and bountiful crops seem already assured. S. S. B.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

GLADIOLUS bulbs are selling well.

AMERICAN WONDER and Nott's Excelsior peas are in good demand.

CONTRACT bean growers in Michigan have had to advance prices to farmers.

INTEREST is being awakened among the trade in the Pacific coast convention trip of the seedsmen.

S. M. ISBELL & CO., Jackson, have issued their seasonable contract offers of Michigan garden seed stocks for the trade.

THE Stecher Lithographing Co., of Rochester, N. Y., is offering a new and very handsome set of vegetable seed bags.

AMOY, CHINA.—The cultivation of the Chinese narcissus bulbs in this district is gradually declining, owing to the changes in national customs.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Trade is better than last year and improving, according to A. J. Brown, who has been laid up some days with a weak ankle.

"CONGRESSMEN," according to the linotype man of the Chicago Tribune, "are sending out seeds, five varieties. Seeds are their substitutes for ideas."

WINONA, MINN.—According to A. B. Blair, president of the Winona Seed Company, the demand for garden seeds this year is larger to a marked degree than in former years.

TUBEROSES are likely to be scarce again next year, a number of former growers having failed to reserve their planting stock, so it is said. The cotton crop outlook has improved.

CHAS. P. GUELF, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., who recently returned to Chicago from a northwestern trip, says all the seedsmen of that territory report business good.

HAAGE & SCHMIDT, of Erfurt, Germany, writing under date of March 20, say that on account of the wet weather the sowing of flower and vegetable seeds and the planting of perennials and summer flowering bulbs has been much delayed.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Wood, Stubbs & Co. say that business for their whole fiscal year has shown about 10 per cent increase. The month of March was very disappointing, cold and very dry, with hardly more than two or three mornings when the ground was not frozen.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade April 14 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—Both counter and mail trade have been good the past 10 days with the coming of milder weather and good warm rains, both needed to move the gardening public.

THE new prison-penalty seed law, under consideration of the Illinois legislature, some sections of which are reproduced on page 695 of this issue, should be carefully considered by seedsmen and amended or replaced by practical regulations through their representatives. House Bill No. 593 is the particular bill to designate in writing representatives at Springfield today.

DENVER, COLO.—The Great Western Sugar Company, with headquarters in this city and factories in Loveland, Fort Collins, Brush, Fort Morgan, Sterling, Billings and Scott's Bluffs, proposes to carry on extensive experiments in the propagation of beet seed this year which, if successful, will result in a new industry for Colorado, and eventually eliminate the necessity of depending on Germany for seed.

Government Grass Seed Analyses.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

THE AMERICAN FLORIST, is, I understand, considered the standard journal of the American Seed Trade Association. I take the liberty of addressing you concerning a matter which has recently come to my attention.

On February 27, 1915, in its weekly news letter, the United States Department of Agriculture made the statement that 19 samples of orchard grass and 42 samples of Kentucky blue grass, secured in the open market, were found to be either adulterated or misbranded.

As a matter of information, I should like to know which of the samples in question are adulterated, and which are misbranded, and I think a good many seedsmen would also like to have this information. I know that some of those samples are not adulterated, but they may have been misbranded, and I would, therefore, very much like to know just what the term "misbranded" means in this instance. No doubt the government can give us this information, or possibly some of the seedsmen may be able to do so.

HENRY NUNGESSER.

Potato Transportation Trebles Price.

The New York Sun, in a recent issue, publishes the following:

Farmers in western New York are endeavoring to obtain 25 cents a bushel for their potatoes, while potatoes are advertised March 21 at the bargain price of 89 cents a bushel in New York city. This is considerably more than two-thirds the price of the potatoes, or 64 cents a bushel for transportation and profit from the consumer, as against the producer's 25 cents.

If this notice reaches any enterprising potato growers it will pay them to advertise their product at 50 or 60 cents a bushel, delivered in New York city. The bags and freight will not amount to more than 25 cents a bushel, probably considerably less, and a matter of a few dollars spent in advertising will bring producer and consumer together, possibly making permanent customers.

Seventy-five Million Packages Free Seeds

Washington, April 8.—Hundreds of thousands of packages of seed, provided and distributed at Uncle Sam's expense, are being poured into the mails from the capitol. Each senator and representative is shipping 20,000 packets of the seed, mostly vegetable, to constituents in his state. Each packet contains five different varieties, making a total of close to 75,000,000 packages of free seeds furnished by congress to the agricultural constituencies annually.

War Risks.

A firm of English bulb growers print the following in their new catalogue, which is in marked contrast to the position taken by the Hamburg lily of the valley growers and in part by growers of French bulbs:

Overseas Orders during the War.

In case of loss in transit, we undertake to replace all bulbs free of charge, or if desired to refund your remittance in full.

Watermelon Warranty.

D. H. Gilbert, the watermelon seed specialist, has the following in his current catalogue:

"I exercise great care in selection, and keeping pure and reliable stocks, and my warranty is that my seeds are as good as can be produced, and upon receipt of the seeds, if not entirely satisfactory, you may return them and I will refund your money."

New Illinois Seed Law—House Bill No. 593

We reproduce herewith some interesting sections of a pernicious new seed law, introduced in the Illinois legislature by Mr. Thompson, April 1, "to prevent and punish the sale or offering for sale of adulterated, impure or misbranded agricultural and vegetable seed and those lacking viability."

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the people of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That the term "agricultural seed," as used in this Act, shall include the seeds of red clover, white clover, alsike clover, alfalfa, Kentucky blue grass, timothy, brome grass, orchard grass, redtop, meadow fescue, oat grass, rye grass and other grasses and forage plants, flax, rape and cereals and any seed sold for planting. "Vegetable seed" shall include any seed sold to be used in growing vegetables of any kind.

Sec. 2. Every parcel, package or lot of agricultural seeds, as defined in section one, containing one pound or more, offered or exposed for sale in this State for use within the State shall have affixed thereto in a conspicuous place on the outside thereof, distinctly printed in the English language, in legible type a statement certifying:

First: The name of the seed.

Second: Full name and address of seedsman, importer, dealer or agent.

Third: A statement of the purity of the seed contained, specifying the kind and percentage of the impurities, as defined in sections six and seven of this Act, if the said seeds are below the prescribed standards.

Fourth: Locality where said seed was grown, when known.

Sec. 5. No person shall sell, offer or expose for sale or distribution in this State, for the purpose of seeding, any of the agricultural seeds, as defined in section one of this Act, unless said seeds are free from seed or bulbs of wild onions, wild garlic, field garlic, crow garlic, wild leek, or genus allium species vineale and canadense, or the following weeds; wild mustard or charlock (Brassica arvensis, L. ktz.), quack grass (Agropyron repens, L. Beauv.), Canada thistle (Cirsium arvense, L. Scop.), wild oats (Avena fatua, L.), clover and alfalfa fodder (Cuscuta Epithymum, Murr), and corn cockle (Agrostemma Githago, L.), cheat or chess (Bromus secalinus, L.), dog fennel (Eupatorium capillifolium), wild carrot (Daucus Carota).

Sec. 6. The seeds of the following weeds shall be considered as impurities in agricultural seeds sold, offered or exposed for sale within this State for the purpose of seeding; cheat or chess (Bromus secalinus, L.), white cockle (Lychnis alba, Mill.), night-flowering catchfly (Silene Noctiflora, L.), curled dock (Rumex crispus, L.), smooth dock (Rumex altissimus, Wood), sheep sorrel (Rumex Acetosella, L.), yellow trefoil (Medicago lupulina, L.), sweet clover (Melilotus alba, Desr., and M. officinalis, L.), black mustard (Brassica nigra, L. Koch), plantain, buckhorn (Plantago lanceolata, L.), bracted plantain (Plantago aristata, Michx.), blind weed (Convulvulus sepium, L.), smooth crab grass (Digitaria humifusa, Pers.), common chickweed (Stellaria media, L. Cyrill). When such impurities or any of them are present in quantity exceeding in their combined weight a total of two per cent of the weight of said agricultural seed, the approximate percentage of each shall be plainly indicated in the statement required by section two of this act.

Sec. 7. Sand, dirt, chaff and foreign substances and seeds other than those specified in section eight and section nine, or broken seed and seed not capable of germinating, shall be considered impurities when present in agricultural seeds. When such impurities or any of them are present in quantity exceeding the standards of purity and viability authorized in section eleven of this Act, the name and approximate percentage of each shall be plainly indicated in the statement specified in section two.

Sec. 11. Standards of purity. The following standards of purity, meaning freedom from weed seeds and other foreign seeds, and viability, are hereby fixed:

Name of Seed.	Per cent of Purity	Per cent of Viable Seed.

Sec. 12. The execution and enforcement of this Act is hereby committed to the State Board of Agriculture, who are authorized to appoint inspectors and make regulations for that purpose, which regulations shall have the force of law as provided for the execution of the laws relating to quarantine inspection, pure food, crop pests, stock feeds and other matters committed to the direction of the board. Any violation of any such regulation shall be a misdemeanor, punishable upon conviction by fine or imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 14. All seedsmen and others who sell farm or garden seeds to be used in producing crops for sale or for family use, shall be bound as guarantors that such seeds are true to kind and name, as represented at the time of sale, whether said seeds were raised by the seller or by another; and if such seeds are sold by an agent, the principal shall be bound by the representations of said agent in regard to the kind and name of the seed so sold. If any paper or package containing seed sold in this State for planting or seeding has printed or written thereon the name, kind or quality of the seeds therein, the seller shall be bound in the courts of this State by the same written or printed statement, unless it be affirmatively proven that there was some other agreement between the parties in respect thereto.

PORTERVILLE, CALIF.—H. A. Scott, former nurseryman of the Visalia district, has bought from J. F. C. Hobart a five-acre tract of land in the reservation region, just east of the city limits, paying $1,000 for the property. Scott will go in for market gardening.

HAYS, KAN.—Thirty-nine students, 15 of them girls, hope to earn their entire school expenses through the spring and summer terms at the Fort Hays state normal school, by gardening small plots under the direction of the department of agriculture. Each of the students has rented one-fourth acre, and tomatoes will be the principal crop. Prof. E. B. Matthew, of the normal school faculty, will act as manager of the Fort Hays Truckers' Association, the name adopted by the student-growers.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, April 13.—Mushrooms, 55 to 60 cents per pound; lettuce, 12½ cents per box; radishes, 35 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; asparagus, $1.00 per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 25 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.50 per dozen.

New York, April 13.—Cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 75 cents to $1.50 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $2.00 to $3.00. Lettuce, per dozen, 10 cents to 25 cents.

Summer Treatment of Greenhouse Soil.

In a bulletin under the above head, just issued by W. J. and S. N. Green, of the Ohio Experiment Station, at Wooster, we find much of importance to the greenhouse grower of vegetables and will, as space permits, reproduce various sections of the bulletin in this department. At the close of the bulletin we find the following summary:

1. The common greenhouse crops of Ohio, tomato, cucumber, and lettuce, require different soil conditions for maximum yields.
2. Lettuce can be grown continuously with safety on unrenewed manured soils.
3. Tomatoes and cucumbers are sensitive to conditions found in old soils and yields are quickly affected, demanding treatment or renewal of soils after two or three seasons' use.
4. The drying of the soil during the idle summer period seems to adversely affect the soil conditions for tomatoes but not for lettuce.
5. Summer manure mulch is recommended to check adverse soil conditions for tomatoes and cucumbers.
6. Summer mulch may not obviate the necessity of soil sterilization, but, in part, it appears to answer that purpose.

For an interval of six to ten weeks during mid-summer vegetable greenhouses usually stand idle. Indoor tomatoes and cucumbers by the first week in July are usually past their prime and outside vegetables are are so abundant that prices received for even the finest greenhouse products are relatively low. The houses are generally cleared at once of all growth, as it is no longer profitable to care for the crop, and at this stage diseases and insects are at their worst, necessitating expensive operations if they are to be kept in check.

Unlike most florists, the vegetable greenhouse man does not consider it necessary to renew his soil annually. In large commercial ranges the cost of changing the soil amounts to a considerable sum, and if it can be avoided it means a large saving.

Generally, when the vines have been removed no further attention is given, the common opinion being that the intense heat under glass during July and August, together with the dryness of the soil, will destroy all insect life as well as fungi and bacteria.

This view is open to serious doubt. If vegetation is not completely removed from the house, a few tufts of grass or weeds will support through the summer enough insects to restock in the fall. If the insects are driven or carried outside, with cooler weather and favorable conditions inside, they will some way find their way back. The various organisms of the soil do not seem, in general, to be adversely affected by the summer drying. These, when such conditions prevail, quickly go into a resting stage, and in such a state are practically immune to any degree of heat and dryness that can be attained under ordinary greenhouse conditions. No only this, but on resuming activity, they show a degree of vigor greatly exceeding, for a time, that before dessication.

We too commonly think of the soil as a mass of dead, inert material. The real condition, so far as the top layer is concerned, and it is the upper six inches with which we are mainly interested, is that it is teeming with life, having a fauna and flora of its own, microscopic to be sure, but exceeding in activity and numbers the higher forms of life with which we are more familiar.

Greenhouse soils, in particular, because of artificial climatic conditions, which are almost tropical, and because of their origin and treatment, present very complex conditions. That some greenhouse soils are richer in available plant food than the average barn yard manure suggests some of the problems with which we have to deal.

In considering these problems we must keep clearly in mind two points, first, the natural requirements of cultivated plants, and second, the soil conditions.

Considering briefly the various angles of the soil problems, we may, for convenience, divide the organisms of the soil into two classes. First the beneficial bacteria and second, the various higher forms which are injurious to the first, together with the various parasitic fungi. The beneficial bacteria are those which increase the fertility of the soil by the production of ammonia, fixation of nitrogen, etc. The injurious organisms are the protozoa, etc., which interfere with the beneficial bacteria and thus are factors in limiting the fertility of the soil. Between these two classes, under normal conditions, there is an equilibrium. Under greenhouse conditions this balance is often disturbed and the cultivated crop seriously affected.

The chemical contents of the soil present conditions of extreme complexity. In greenhouse soils are found conditions in many ways wholly unlike those of outdoor soils, and our knowledge of the latter can hardly be applied, except in a general way. One of the problems, at least, in many greenhouses is to keep the soil in a balanced condition as to fertilizing ingredients, rather than to increase any at the expense of the health of the plants. Greenhouse soils are usually made before placing in the benches, and the question of their improvement afterwards is of minor importance.

Plants are sensitive to the physical condition of the soil in the greenhouse as well as out of doors. It is difficult to separate these various problems as they are so closely interlocked. Greenhouse soils are generally made from the soil upon which the houses stand or from that of the immediate neighborhood, so that the type of soil from which they are made must be taken into consideration.

Under the subject of physical conditions must also be considered the soil moisture and temperature.

MERIDIAN, MISS.—Prices were not any better than a year ago, and the amount of business just about the same is W. G. McKinney's opinion in the matter of Easter sales for 1915. An ample supply of stock of all kinds was on hand. In plant sales, lilies, hyacinths, tulips and hydrangeas were first choice, while in the cut-flower class, white flowers of any kind sold well. All in all, trade was as good as could be wished for, but money was not as plentiful as a year ago, and less expensive plants sold best.

St. Louis Park Commissioner.

The following petition signed by a number of prominent florists and gardeners of St. Louis, Mo., has been presented to Emil N. Talkacz, director of public welfare. The florists of St. Louis started the two-in-one campaign, with a view to the appointment of a park commissioner who is also a landscape architect. The issue has aroused considerable civic interest.

We, the undersigned, florists and gardeners of St. Louis, Mo., in view of the great success in other important cities of the plan of appointing a landscape architect to the office of park commissioner, and especially in view of the city's present crippled finances, which denied Park Commissioner Davis the assistance of a landscape architect during the latter part of his term, do hereby urgently request that the next park commissioner of St. Louis be a landscape architect and do recommend heartily for that important office, Henry C. Muskopf:

L. Jules Bourdet, president St. Louis Florists' Club; J. J. Beneke, secretary St. Louis Florists' Club; Alex Johnson, O. K. Sanders, of Sanders Nurseries; Fred C. Weber, F. H. Weber, C. Middletown, N. Y.

The local Easter business was much better than we anticipated, with factories shut down or working only on partial time. The trade was never before so nearly sold out, and at the usual prices. The question is, where did the flower buyers get their money? as most of the sales were for cash, or to those who pay their bills promptly. If we do as well with bedding stock there surely will be little room for complaint. A storm bothered us to a certain extent on Saturday, starting in the morning with a heavy wind, followed by snow about 10:30 a. m., but Sunday broke bright, giving the ladies a chance to parade their flowers and Easter fashions.

Edw. Lorentz supplied his trade from his greenhouses which are centrally located, and excellent business is reported at his establishment.

Coe, the Grand avenue florist, advertised branch stores for the Easter trade in Goshen, N. Y., and Sussex, N. J.

F. X. Dienst had a branch store for the Easter trade and his force was kept busy with a very good trade.

Henry Wisner reports Easter sales fully up to his expectations.

We have received absolutely no correspondence expressing dissatisfaction on price, delivery or quality of construction.

What They Say:

Jan. 20, 1915
Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,

EASTER TRADE FAILS TO ABSORB SUPPLY.

There is a surplus in practically all features of stock, incident to heavy Easter production and a pronounced lull in trade which has come about in the past ten days. While florists enjoyed a record-breaking business during the Easter period, it did not absorb the great supply that had been created. Carnations are so plentiful as to be a problem. This condition is likely to continue up until Mothers' day. Local florists have had very little to complain of on the state of business since the first of the year, and are not pessimistic over the present dullness. Bulbous stock, which has now about reached the end of its season, had an enormous sale. This was helped greatly by the increased interest in planting brought about through the public recreation department. There is expected to be little demand from social functions during April, but the May and June wedding season looms up promisingly.

NOTES.

The Munk Floral Company has entered into arrangements with the city recreation department to supply the public with what is termed the official window or porch box. As part of a city beautiful campaign being waged, the department has guaranteed the company orders for from 500 to 1,000 boxes at the popular price of $1.50 agreed upon. The company furnishes the box, fills it with flowers and vines which are subject to a certain range of choice on the part of the customer, and delivers it for the price named. The boxes are of standard size, six feet long and 30 inches wide. By having them made to order in quantities, the florists are able to realize a small profit on box and contents. More value is attached, however, to the advertising received through being made the official medium of the recreation department. The Munk company is giving publicity to the matter by street car cards, which show up in colors the box and filling.

With more carnations in stock than could be disposed of, the cut flower department of the Livingston Seed Company turned this condition to advertising account by giving a carnation to every customer that came into the store, Saturday, April 10. Twelve hundred were handed out in this way at the main entrance and 300 at the side entrance.

Mrs. Taft—Gust Rusch, 95 points.

Ripe strawberries — Certificate of merit, A. G. Goodrich.

The meeting opened with President O. J. Olson in the chair. The speakers were Mr. Barrows, who spoke on the subject, "What Can the Professional Florist Do for the Amateur?" He was answered by August Swanson. President Theo. Wirth of the S. A. F. also spoke. Through the question box there was a discussion on the yellows in asters, and it was finally decided this disease was caused by climatic conditions. Sweet pea culture came in for its share, and A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, gave a short talk on their culture, which was well received.

Morganton, N. C.

Spring has come at last with a large and varied display of flowering plants, trees and shrubs. Crocuses have gone out of bloom. Jonquils, daffodils and narcissi are at their best. Hyacinths and tulips will soon make themselves gay with color. Jasminum nudiflorum, with its bank of gold, contrasts well with duetzia and spiræa, marble-like white. Pansies and violets are in bloom and Magnolia purpurea nearly in full bloom. Springtime has come in the orchard as well as in the garden. Peach, plum, apricot and cherry trees are in full bloom. Many plantings and sowings of vegetables have been made; cabbages were set out February 28 and early garden peas sown; beets, radishes and onions sown March 15-17; Irish potatoes planted March 24-25; sweet potatoes bedded April 6. Early snap beans, potatoes, peas and onion sets can be planted here almost any time after February 15, the earlier the better.

It is not many days hence to the time when one can confidently prepare for work outside in the flower garden, as the greenhouses soon become too warm for many plants. Work is progressing in renovating old and making new lawns, terraces and walks and preparing the flower beds and borders for planting time, some of the hardier plants being already out. Yet this spring has been a month later than common for we had snow April 3, also frost April 4. J. B. P. M.

STORM HOLDS EASTER SALES AT AVERAGE.

The local florists report a satisfacisfactory Easter trade, notwithstandthe inclement weather. Some dealers had visions of broken records, but they were put to rout by the storm of the day before Easter. The sales and the prices were about the same as other years, while there was a sufficient supply of both plants and cut flowers. All bulbous stock was popular. There was quite a demand for cattleyas, which made them scarce. Many downtown department, grocery and hardware stores carried Easter lilies, and there were a few out of town people who reaped a harvest by hiring empty stores for the week, and who pulled up stakes and departed immediately after Easter.

Mothers' Day Flowers.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST FIRST TO EXPLOIT THIS NEW FLOWER DAY, ISSUE MAY 16, 1908.

More Popular Each Year.

When Miss Anna Jarvis desired to set one day each year apart in memory of her mother, who had passed away and to also wear a white carnation, as this had been her mother's favorite flower, she did this for her love and almost worship of her mother. Later, she thought that others would like to honor their mother in this way, and finding the idea popular wherever mentioned, she soon had a large following. Then came the church observance, followed by proclamations of mayors of cities and governors of states and the action of congress naming the second Sunday in May the day for its general observance as Mothers' day. The custom has now become universal, the second Sunday in May, the day selected by Miss Jarvis, is now recognized all over the land as "Mothers' day," and flowers of all kinds are worn in honor of the best mother who ever lived—your mother.

The foundation of this floral festival day has been a great boon to the florist's business, as his products are so necessary for its proper observance. Miss Jarvis might have remembered her mother's birthday in many other ways but she chose to wear a carnation or bunch of them because they were her mother's favorite flower. While the custom has become an annual event in many places, yet it is not nearly as general as it might be made. Were the florists all over the country to encourage the observance of this day and work for it with a will, showing what a beautiful custom it is to honor the memory of mother by wearing and sending flowers, if living, and to visit and deck with flowers her tomb or grave if she has passed away, the beautiful custom would grow and increase with its own impetus until the second Sunday in May would become the greatest cutflower day of the year. How this should be done is best seen by what efforts have been made and the results obtained through the co-operative plan already worked out by the trade in Cleveland and other cities. Their full page, well written advertisements calling attention to the beautiful custom were very striking. The idea was new to the great majority of people, but that it was well received is seen by the general immediate response that came in the orders for flowers to the florists who had the courage to push the observance of the day. Were such movements as this, or appeals on similar lines, made to every community, combined with individual efforts by circulars to one's trade, calling attention to the importance of the day, there would unquestionably be a great impetus to the business and an important step forward would be taken.

Enthusiasm and belief in the importance of the day are necessary to the florist who is to be a factor in extending the custom and reaping the benefits. One must be enthusiastic about anything to give it his best attention. So it is with Mothers' day, one must have faith in it, then he will of his own initiative, as the time approaches, work it up, get his trade in line, tell them about it in a well-chosen letter, plan out an early window decoration which will attract attention and get people talking about it. Well written or printed cards used in the display will help, as will pictures of mothers' influence, as seen in the copies of the celebrated Hovenden painting, "Breaking Home Ties," and other examples that are easily obtained at the art stores. Encourage the use of all flowers in any color. It is not possible to get enough white carnations, if these flowers alone are to be used, so talk just flowers, all kinds and colors, and keep the white carnation feature in the background. See the churches and Sunday schools, quote low prices on quantity lots; each child should wear a flower, which they can receive as a gift from the church. The more general the custom becomes, the faster its observance will spread, until to be seen on the street on that day without a flower will look like disrespect to one's mother, which is not to be thought of by any self-respecting man or woman.

Since the movement has been well received by the public, the press has taken it up, and about this time give columns of interesting reading matter relative to the observance of the day. The importance of wearing flowers is a feature of nearly every article, and what this or that city or state official has to say on the subject, as well as their proclamations referring to its observance, are quoted entire. Here is an opportunity to fix permanently another great floral holiday. Many outside influences are working it up, the memory of the mother love and the delight in honoring her in this way being the main factors. Flowers carry sentiment; they are worn in honor of and bear love to the mother who can enjoy them, or are tenderly placed on the grave of the one who has passed away.

Crocus Susianus.

Although not a flower that everyone would care to grow, this charming little crocus is a great favorite with many. It is frequently referred to as Cloth of Gold, but it is necessary to see its flowers fully opened to recognize it by this name. To the writer the blossoms of this crocus are most pleasing before they open wide, i. e., just as they push up from the rather inconspicuous tuft of delicate green leaves. When in this condition the beautiful markings on the outsides of the floral segments are seen to the best advantage. These take the form of perpendicular blotches of deep glossy bronze maroon, one to each segment, and between these blotches the orange yellow basal color shows itself in a most attractive manner, according to a correspondent of the London Garden. This little crocus is a native of the Crimea, and although it has been known in this country for a long time, it does not appear to have made any great headway in popular favor. It opens its blossoms during the early part of February, and this year one plant in my garden was flowering before January had departed. It is one of the best crocuses for planting in grass, but, like all of its kin, it should be given a sunny position. Grown in shallow pans or pots in a cold frame or a quite cool greenhouse, it is a charming little plant for indoor decoration, where its rather delicate beauty can be developed to the full without fear of injury by birds or uncongenial weather. In common with most, if not all, other crocuses, it will not stand hard forcing; it should be allowed to develop under as natural and cool conditions as possible. Corms can be purchased very cheaply, and it is not yet too late to plant, though the earlier they are put in the better.

HAVERHILL, MASS.—In spit of dull times an excellent spring business is looked forward to by W. F. Abrams. Easter sales this year showed an increase of 20 per cent over the 1914 period.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—The Battle Creek Sanitarium Co. is launching three distinct and new horticultural movements, which will mean, first, the putting up of cash prizes to the amount of $100 by the sanitarium for better lawns and gardens in the west end of this city; second, the raising of flowers as a pastime and a health measure by its patients this summer, and, third, free garden plots, all nicely plowed, harrowed and all ready for planting, for its employes.

THE RETAIL TRADE

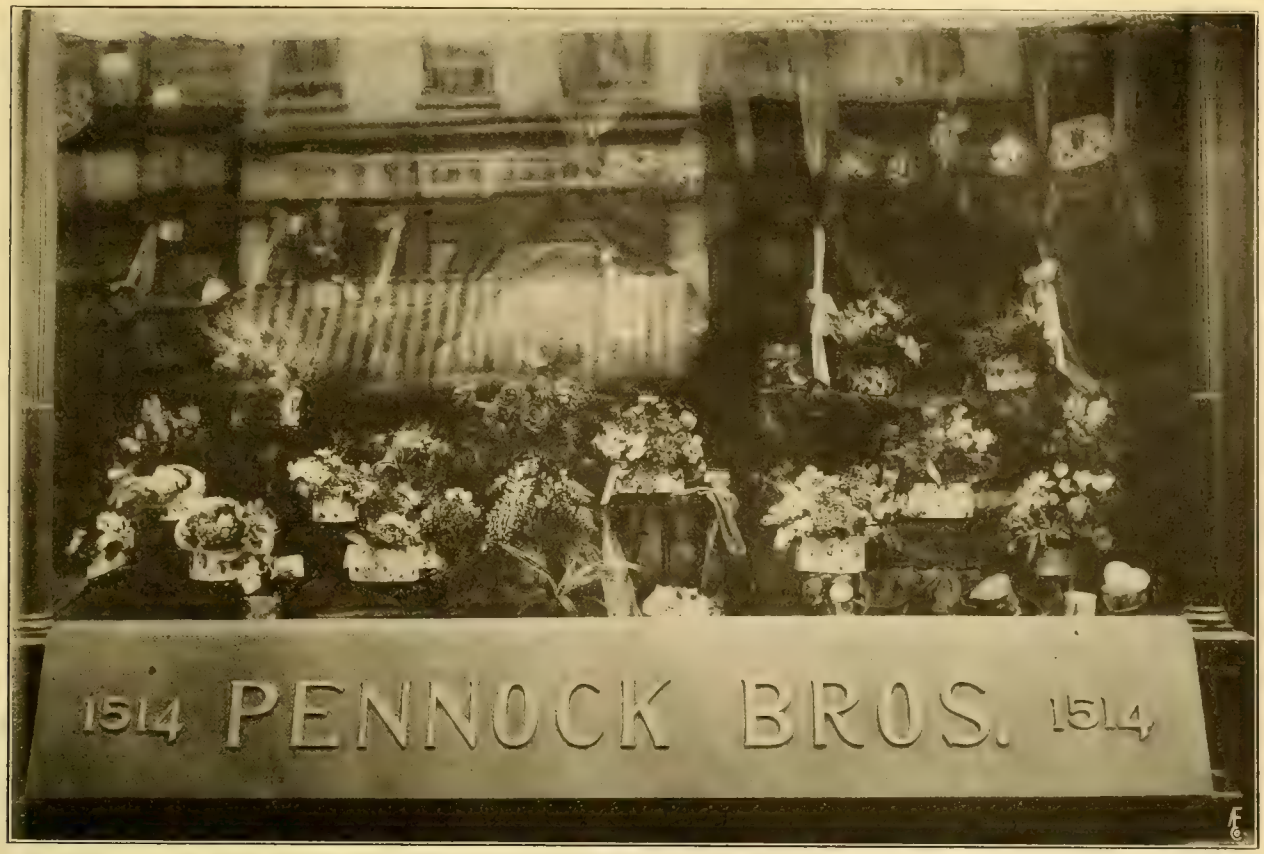
Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pennock Brothers.

This thoroughly up-to-date firm has a long record of achievement. It was founded in Philadelphia in 1864 in a small store and greenhouse at No. 10 South 12th street. A business of selling plants and trees on market days at the market houses then in the center of Market street, had been carried on for some time by Abram L. Pennock, who thought there was an opening for a store for every week day and demand enough for cut flowers, so that it would pay to carry a stock. It proved profitable from the start. Thomas Cartledge was placed in charge, and as the business grew he induced John Westcott to come over from Brooklyn to help him. Some years later, about 1870, they were given a half interest in the business, the other half being held by Mr. Pennock and his son, Herbert, who was installed as bookkeeper.

The business grew rapidly and in 1875 the property at 1514 Chestnut street was purchased and rebuilt with a commodious store and greenhouse, where the business has since been carried on. Herbert Pennock and John Westcott withdrew from the firm some 20 years ago. At his father's death, A. B. Cartledge, who had been for some years connected with the business, succeeded to his interest and Mr. Pennock retired in favor of his son, Lidden Pennock. These two live wires now comprise the firm, and under their management the business has increased wonderfully in the past few years. Improvements have been made from time to time to the building, the most notable being that of last season, when the interior was entirely refitted, the feature being a new flower case or refrigerator, that excels anything so far built for the purpose, that it is in a class by itself. It is very ornamental and eminently practical, having every improvement that the best machanics could suggest for maintaining the proper temperature. This was not allowed to interfere in the slightest with its appearance as a display case for flowers; no pipes of any kind are visible or anything suggesting the refrigerator. The case as seen in the accompanying illustration consists of nine compartments, each four feet wide, three feet in depth, and six in height. The floor, or bottom, is of Pittsburgh marble or heavy white plate glass. This has the slightest fall, or slant, towards an opening or gutter in the rear, which carries off any condensation or drip. The various compartments are divided by plate glass partitions so that different temperatures can be maintained. The varying degrees are obtained or regulated by opening or closing a door about six inches in width, which runs the length of each compartment in the rear, and top of the case at the bottom of the ice chamber. A two-ton ice machine in the basement freezes the water in the tanks which are contained in the compartment above the case. The machine is not automatic, but usually from one to three hours daily running, according to the weather, is sufficient. It is so arranged that in summer, when the whole case is not in use, any portion may be shut off. The bottom of the case is about 18 inches from the floor. The woodwork is mahogany, with marble facing at the base. In the base are three large drawers, in which are kept ferns, leucothoe and other green goods. Nickeled brass rods from front to rear, support nickeled brass shelves, which slide, so that it is possible to arrange for all lengths of flowers and also display the stock to the best advantage. The doors are all of one pane of plate glass, and made to raise; they work very easily, being balanced with sash weights. The ice chamber in the top of the box, is finished with ornamental woodwork and mirrors, making the whole a splendid example of cabinet work. Cold air from outside is admitted to the top of the case through the ice chamber when desired.

FLOWER CASE AT PENNOCK BROS'., PHILADELPHIA, PA.



PENNOCK BROS.' SHOW WINDOW, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

In the arrangement of flowers in the case, a section is given to American Beauty roses, two or more to the teas, two or three to orchids, violets and lily of the valley, one to snapdragons and others to carnations. In one is generally found made up baskets, examples of which work are always on hand ready for instant delivery. Each section is illuminated with an electric light, which is concealed in the top of the case. The store is also first class in all its other appointments. Mahogany tables with mable tops are used to display vases of flowers and examples of made up plant baskets and other work. A ladies' desk in front and a double standing desk in the rear, adjoining two closed telephone booths, are up to date in every respect. The greenhouse, the width of the store, presents an inviting view, in the rear, being always kept filled with choice flowering and foliage plants.

The floor of the store is of mosaic marble, and the lighting arrangement the latest in indirect electric fixtures. The show window, fifteen feet in length, is a most important feature, being at all times one of the show sights of the city. Plans for these displays are made weeks ahead, the firm believing this to be their most effective form of advertising. The illustration is of their valentine decoration, but does not do it justice, on account of the very prominent reflection from the other side of the street. Their delivery service is most modern, there being one Cadillac and one Winton car, both with limousine bodies; also, a Buick and a Ford, with distinctive bodies. These, with a large corps of uniformed boys, make their delivery service thoroughly efficient.

The founder of this house, Abram L. Pennock, is still enjoying a hearty old age, spending the winters in Florida, where he has just celebrated his 87th birthday. K.

Dressing Store Windows.

The importance of the store window as an advertising medium and business bringer can scarcely be overestimated. A place of business on any city thoroughfare is passed daily by thousands of people, in central shopping districts by tens of thousands, a great percentage of whom are possible customers, people that buy flowers once in a while; some but seldom when occasion requires, and others according to their circumstances, who can satisfy their desires, and who have been known to buy flowers when their attention was called to them by a beautifully arranged window. An advertisement in a paper of large circulation, from two to three hundred thousand copies a day, is seen by but comparatively few people; half the readers but skim over the headlines and take up the details of what interests them. Advertisements have to be very conspicuous to be even noticed and are very rarely read by this class. It is the same with show windows. Most of the people who pass have their minds on their journey or something else, and the window must be made especially attractve to get even a look. Once the display begins to draw, however, if it has merit, it will hold the crowd. One or two persons in front of a window invariably draw others, these move on and often carry the story with them, the telling points of which are repeated to others, thus adding to the fame of the house.

WINDOW ADVERTISING.

How to make the most out of this window advertising is a problem that deserves more attention than any other feature of the business. Here is reflected the character of the establishment; the high or low grade of its work and its class as a store is determined by the display made. The flowers, or the work that is offered to the public through this medium, determines to many whether they will find here what they want. There are no set rules to regulate the arrangement of a window, scarcely any two being exactly alike. The most desirable are those with the bottom within a foot or eighteen inches of the pavement. Such can be arranged low or made higher by the addition of moveable platforms which admit of great variety in the displays. There should always be a set of stands with good solid bases, some ornamental enough to be shown alone, and others to be covered with the velvet or other background material. A line of velvets of various lengths the width of the goods in various colors, are almost indispensable, being of great assistance in color effects and giving as well, an air of elegance to the work. While many decorative effects are made not to be disturbed for several days, it is well if possible to at all times include a priced article, a made up basket or choice plant or two, or vase of roses. The price is the silent salesman that is always working, making many a sale that otherwise would never have appeared on the books.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

A decoration featuring one kind of attractive flowers or plants, or a lot of one kind of baskets, filled and unfilled, with a conspicuous price card, always pulls. It specializes, calls attention to one thing, concentrates the mind, all the good points are seen, nothing else to attract or draw attention from the point you are making. This is good advertising. When American Beauty roses are cheap fill the window with them; a large vase full, a box or two nicely packed, an empty box or two tied up with a bow of Beauty ribbon, all of which will make an effective window. This is to be done as the full crop is coming and before the street men offer them six for a quarter.

Make a violet window, an elaborate corsage or two of violets, with gardenias, nicely ribboned, placed half out of a box, is sure to be admired. A lot of violet or corsage boxes with a few bunches of single and double violets will make a very distinctive window. When daffodils first begin to get plentiful, an inexpensive and showy window may be made with little trouble. A lot of small baskets that may be sold for a dollar, complete, together with others for higher prices, can be made attractive and profitable.

HOLIDAY DECORATIONS.

At times like Easter and Christmas the windows should be arranged for the week, not to be disturbed until possibly the stock running short on the last day, the display may be drawn on for orders. In all window display, particularly where the plant or flower or made up work is featured, a display card with a brief description and price should occupy a prominent place. Lighting the window is an important matter. The source of light should not show. Electric lamps placed high along the ceiling of the window, with the proper reflectors, are very satisfactory. Movable electric letter signs to place in the window, that flash, are very effective at night. Any word can be spelled out and the sign changed as frequently as desired. Keeping the windows illuminated after the store is closed is worth much more than the value of the cost of lighting. People have more leisure at night, and the brilliantly lighted window is much more attractive than during the day, particularly on the north side of the street. A time clock key or a watchman will turn the lights off at any hour. K.

TELEPHONE BOOTHS AND CARD DESKS AT PENNOCK BROS'., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Decorated Automobile of Malandre Bros.

The accompanying illustration shows the decorated automobile entered by Malandre Brothers, the prominent Broadway, New York, retailers, that captured the blue ribbon and medal for the best decorated car in the Tricentury celebration, New York, October 28-31, 1914. The color scheme was orange, and natural chrysanthemums were used, regardless of cost. The hood was covered with miniature oranges. On close observation it will be noted that boxes of growing oranges and crotons are on the steps. Interspersed among the flowers and foliage were hundreds of miniature electric lights.

PLANT NOTES.

Asters.

The early and midseason asters should be planted out as early as the season will allow. If the plants are hardened off for two or three weeks in a cold frame and gradually given night air as soon as safe, they will endure the outside temperature much better than those carried directly from the warm greenhouse. The land should be prepared at once, and while asters will grow on almost any piece of ground the success or failure depends much on the proper preparation of the soil. Land that was manured last fall and plowed is by far the best, and all that will be required in the spring is a shallow plowing or disking and then leveled. It is well not to level off too large a tract at once, for heavy rains occur at this season which pack the soil down hard. Before planting give the young plants a thorough watering and if in boxes or the bench cut through the rows with a knife a day before planting. Lay the field out in rows from 15 to 20 inches apart, giving the branching varieties the greater distance, with a wider space every fifth or sixth row to provide a walk when cutting the flowers, and set the plants from 12 to 18 inches apart. Plant with a trowel, for the plants set in a dibbled hole will not take hold as quickly, and with the early asters the slight difference in time taken in planting is more than made up in the early blooming; the dibble packs the soil around the plant and the roots do not grow into it as freely, and the roots are also contracted in the small hole made by the dibble. As soon as the field is planted, if possible, give the plants a good watering and then cultivate lightly with a wheel hoe to loosen up the soil.

Callas.

As the summer weather approaches the callas will cease producing flowers and will require a rest to prepare them for another year. They should be dried off gradually until they become "dust dry," when the roots will be thoroughly ripened. If watered the calla will grow all the year round, but plants grown in this way will not produce as many flowers as those that are rested. Those grown in pots can be laid on their sides in the greenhouse until all danger from freezing weather is passed, when they can be removed outdoors, still placing the pots on the side in full sunlight. Those grown on the bench can be lifted with as much soil as possible and placed under the bench, where they will dry out gradually, and later planted in the full sun outside in a dry location, and as soon as thoroughly ripened, shaken out and stored until wanted to start for another season. The yellow calla, Richardia Elliottiana, is being grown more largely and the blooms have been used the last winter in many elaborate decorations. The culture of these is in pots and similar to the older varieties.

Rambler Roses.

The rambler roses for Memorial day will demand constant attention, for at this season of the year aphis and red spider accumulate very rapidly if the conditions are propitious. It is far better to keep these insects down by proper culture than to be obliged to resort to measures to kill them. Give the plants all the ventilation possible, but drafts will often cause mildew on the soft foliage, so these must be guarded against especially, and low ventilation, such as open doors with the wind drawing through the houses. Syringe thoroughly on bright days. There is no better prevention for red spider than a good syringing that will reach the under side of the leaves, which will quickly break up the colonies of spiders that gather there. If the plants require fumigation it should be light, for often the young foliage is very tender and heavy fumigation with smoke quickly burns it. Where the pots are full of roots a watering with liquid manure or a mulch of sheep manure mixed with sifted soil will be found very beneficial and will add a lustre to the foliage and deepen the color of the flowers.

Primulas.

For plants of both P. sinensis and obconica for blooming next spring May is the best time to sow the seed, which germinates very readily at this time, but if this is delayed until June it will often be found quite difficult to get the seed to start well, and as the young seedlings grow very slowly they will require constant attention during the warm weather, for a few hours' sun when they are dry will cause the loss of all the plants. The soil should be sifted in a fine sieve as the seed is very small and they should not be covered with the soil, but sown thinly on the soil when loose and then pressed flat with a board. Watering should be done with a very fine rose on the can so as not to wash the seeds or soil. At this season of the year the seed will germinate readily in almost any greenhouse, but it is well to cover the seed pan or box with glass to prevent too rapid evaporation and until the plants begin to make growth keep the pots well shaded. Many growers wrap a piece of paraffine paper around the glass that is placed on the seed pan. This allows plenty of light to germinate the seed and will prevent the direct rays of the sun from burning up the young seedlings when they start to grow. As these young plants grow very slowly some soils will often become caked or scaly,and if this occurs the top should be carefully broken up to allow the air to enter. As soon as three or four leaves are formed pot in 2½-inch pots, not too deeply, but yet deep enough to have them stand erect. They should then be placed in a cool house and much of the success of their culture depends upon the care and watering in their early growth. They are a moisture-loving plant and should never become dry, yet they are easily over-watered and will not make a good growth if continually kept soaked; frequent and light waterings are the best. A lightly shaded frame with the pots plunged in the soil and the sash lifted at top and bottom for a free circulation of air is the best location for summer culture.

Pansies.

The sale of pansy plants will soon be at its height and there is nothing that the florist or grower sells upon which more time is wasted than in selecting a small order of pansies if the customer is shown a frame of a few thousand plants. The better way is to have boxes or baskets holding a dozen plants all made up for the customer. It is not necessary to put up more than will be required for one or two days' sale, but as fast as sold keep the stock replenished. There are many patrons who will be well satisfied with a good selection already placed in a basket who will take an hour of a salesman's time in making their choice out of a frame. Any late seedlings should be planted in the frames at once, and these will make fine plants for late May of June planting when the older plants are either sold or have become too large for bedding purposes.

Marguerites for Winter.

To have good marguerites for winter flowers the plants must have a good start in the spring. For large plants the stock should now be in 2½ or 3-inch pots and growing vigorously, but if the cuttings have not been made they can now be propagated in a cool bench and good-sized plants grown, or stock should be secured at once. Do not allow these plants to become pot bound, but shift them into 4-inch pots as soon as they require it and pot very firmly. Keep the plants pinched back that they may branch more freely and keep all flowers and buds picked off. For many years these plants were grown in the open ground, but in some localities they have been attacked with a club root in field culture and inside culture has become necessary for success. A cold frame in which the pots are plunged is the culture successfully practiced by many growers. In late summer they should be potted in large pots, 8-inch or 9-inch, or planted in the bench in good rich soil, so that they will be well established for fall and winter flowering. The plants grown in pots are more prolific in flowering and the size of the flowers can be maintained with liquid manure. Aphis should be kept down by fumigation and the leaf miner is a very destructive insect if once firmly established, but persistent spraying with strong nicotine solution will eradicate this pest.

PARTIAL VIEW OF V. BEZDEK'S RANGE, WILMETTE, ILL.

A. T. Pyfer & Co., Chicago.

The firm of A. T. Pyfer & Co. was incorporated for $5,000 on February 27, 1915, and took over the entire wholesale commission business of the Chicago Carnation Co. on March 1, and is now conducting the business under its own name at 30 East Randolph street in the quarters formerly occupied by the old concern. The officers of the new corporation are well and favorably known to the trade, and are H. E. Philpott, president; V. Bezdek, vice-president; Miss Nettie L. Parker, secretary; A. T. Pyfer, manager and treasurer, and Peter Olsem, chairman of the board of trustees. A. T. Pyfer was in the employ of the Chicago Carnation Co. for 14 years, and acted as manager for many years and up to March 1, when the firm which bears his name took possession. Peter Olsem was superintendent of the same firm's greenhouses at Joliet, where he was employed for 12 years, and later resigned to assume charge of the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette, which was purchased two years ago. Miss Parker formerly kept the Chicago Carnation Co.'s books, and is acting in a similar capacity for the new firm, in which she is a stockholder. V. Bezdek of Wilmette has a large range of greenhouses devoted to carnations and sweet peas, and H. E. Philpott is financially interested in the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette, so the new firm consists of well experienced help and is thoroughly capable of conducting the established business that it has taken over.

The entire output of the Pyfer & Olsem and V. Bezdek ranges at Wilmette will be handled exclusively, as well as a good supply of stock from other growers located in the immediate vicinity of Chicago. The Pyfer & Olsem range consists of 125,000 feet of glass and is devoted mainly to roses and carnations. White Wonder, White Enchantress, Enchantress, Gloriosa, Peerless Pink, Herald, Benora, Conquest, Yellow Prince, Pocahontas, Enchantress Supreme and Alice are the principal varieties of carnations grown and in roses Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Sunburst, Mrs. George Shawyer and Mrs. Chas. Russell. A few sweet peas and miscellaneous stock is given bench space, but the greater part of the range is planted to roses and carnations.

The Bezdek range, located a short distance from the Pyfer & Olsem range, consists of 60,000 feet of glass, and at present is planted to carnations and sweet peas. Only five varieties of carnations are grown at this establishment, which is remarkable when one considers that the entire place, with the exception of a few houses, are planted to them. Pink Enchantress, White Enchantress, Victory, White Wonder and Pink Delight are the varieties, and were selected only after a thorough test, when Mr. Bezdek decided that they were the best paying five. A large quantity of Zvolanek's orchid flowering sweet peas are grown and the crops are a great sight to see at present. Dietsch material has been used in both ranges, and it seems as if the A. Dietsch Co. is pretty well represented in Wilmette, for there are quite a number of ranges built by them located in this vicinity. While A. T. Pyfer & Co. is considered a new house, it is really an old organization as far as the management of the wholesale store is concerned, and there is no question but what their many customers will be given the same honest and courteous treatment that they have been accustomed to receive in the past.

KANSAS CITY, KAN.—Roses and lilies will bloom on the Kansas side this spring and summer. The civic department of the Council of Clubs supplied 1,200 persons with bulbs April 1, and could have supplied twice that number had they had the necessary flowers.

ALL STOCKS MOVE SLOWLY.

The trade has just experienced one of the best Easters in the history of this city. Most of the florists expected a largely increased call for Easter flowering plants and their expectations were justified, for never before has the call for pot stock been so heavy. The call seemed to be for moderately priced stock. Great quantities of ramblers, rhododendrons, azaleas, spireas, hydrangeas and bulbous stock were disposed of. The demand for cut flowers was not very brisk, but the shrewd retailers seemed to know this beforehand and made every effort to push the sale of plants. Lilies were not in over supply and brought very good prices. Roses moved fairly well, as did orchids. Since Easter, trade has taken quite a slump and prices on all stock is ruling very low at present writing. Carnations, with the exception of Gorgeous, are a glut. Roses, too, are in the same condition. There are all kinds of tulips and other bulbous stock, but bring very little. Violets are still to be seen, but their day is passed. Outdoor roses, such as Ulrich Brunner and Cecile Brunner, are coming along in large quantities. Lily of the valley is plentiful and so are freesias. Peonies are also in abundance. Since Easter, pot plants are moving slowly. Some Spanish irises are making their appearance, but like all other bulbous stock, do not meet with much favor. Orchids are about the only flower that are not in over supply. Ferns and all other greens of the new crop are abundant and cheap.

The last meeting of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society will always be looked back to as one of the most prominent ever held by that enthusiastic group of horticulturists. Lester L. Morse, president of the American Seed Trade Association, and also president of the American Sweet Pea Society, and Frank G. Cuthbertson, assistant secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society, were guests of the members. Mr. Cuthbertson read a paper on sweet peas that created a profound impression on the members. The splendid way in which he treated the subject shows him to be among the foremost authorities on this flower. After the reading of the paper he invited the members to ask any question which they might have in mind, and during the discussion which followed a great number of points were brought out which were entirely new to local growers. Mr. Morse gave the society an impromptu talk on the early days of the sweet pea in this state: Of how, from a very small beginning, it has grown to such enormous proportions as it has at the present time. It is only on very rare occasions that a horticultural society is fortunate enough to have two world-wide authorities address it on the same subject during the same evening. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the two gentlemen. The floral display was very excellent. The awards were as follows: D. Bassett, azaleas 95 points; A. Bearsly, Carnation Gorgeous, 85 points; P. Ellings, Carnation Gorgeous, 80 points; D. Y. Slade, tulips, 85 points. The schedule, as reported by the secretary, has been mailed to all for the show next month.

Miss Nettie Parker.
Secretary of A. T. Pyfer & Co., Chicago.

Peter Olsem.
Supt. of Pyfer & Olsem's Range, Wilmette, Ill.

Miss E. Worn, the junior member of the firm of the Misses Worn, passed away at the Adler sanitarium in this city last week. Before the fire the deceased conducted a store on Post street, near Kearny, and was a member of one of the most prominent firms in this city, catering to the exclusive trade. Since the fire the headquarters of Miss Worn has been San Anselmo, from where she directed her large decorating trade in this city. Miss Worn was a woman of very gentle disposition, and the utmost refinement. The sympathy of the trade is extended to her bereaved relatives.

Saturday, April 3, was "lilac day" at the San Mateo County exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition. Headgardener Andrew McDonald put up a splendid show of this popular spring flower. He had four large designs made of wire in the shape of this shrub. Each frame was six feet high and was so arranged that the branches held water tight cornucopias. When finally arranged they had the appearance of splendid specimens of the different lilacs and appeared to be perfect specimens. Mr. McDonald was the recipient of many congratulations for his unique exhibit.

A novelty to the trade in this city is the silver pink snapdragon, the winter flowering one, which the Lynch Nursery Company of Menlo Park, Calif., has been sending into this market. It has met with a ready sale as the stock is excellent. Superintendent Ellings says the chrysanthemum trade is opening up in fine shape.

This firm lists more chrysanthemums in their catalogue than any other firm on the coast and are also distributors of Elmer D. Smith & Co.'s and Chas. H. Totty's novelties.

The floral festival held by the city of San Leandro closed Saturday night after three days' duration. One of the exhibits that attracted popular attention was the very complete collection of wild flowers of this state, which were on view. It seems that no city of any pretense whatever can get along without their floral festivals in recent years. A very healthy sign which we hope they will maintain.

George A. Dennison, chief of horticulture for the Panama-Pacific exposition, announces that the space allotted the state of Kansas in the Palace of Horticulture has been given to Fresno county. The state of Kansas was unable to secure the appropriation expected so Geo. C. Roeding, "the man that made Fresno famous," is going to show what that wonderful county can do in the horticultural line.

Luther Burbank is spending a few days in this city taking in all the horticultural objects of interest at the exposition. Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, is also among us. He reports Easter business as very disappointing and not in any degree up to expectations. As Mr. Ebel is the owner of the largest store in that city, his remarks can be taken as applying to the trade in general in his town.

The postponed meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held April 10, in the Redmen's building. As several important matters were to come up, the attendance was very good. The various committees in charge of the convention in August reported much progress. There were many out of town members in attendance.

J. Fiske, landscape architect for the Hillsborough Nurseries at Burlingame, Calif., reports a very busy season. The greenhouse department of this firm, of which Martin Poss is superintendent, is sending some splendid roses into this market. The Easter lilies he supplied to the trade in this city would be hard to beat.

The window decorations of the Pelicano, Rossi Co. during Easter week were very beautiful. The windows were arched with magnificent plants of the different baby ramblers, azaleas, spireas and bulbous stock. Podesta and Baldocchi and the Art Floral Co. used roses largely, as also did Joseph.

William Eldred, for many years superintendent for William H. Crocker at Hillsborough, has resigned and gone into the landscape business. He already has several large contracts on hand. Mr. Eldred is very popular among the trade and has the best wishes of all for his success.

Eric James had the finest lot of rambler roses he ever grew for Easter. His ericas, spireas and azaleas were also splendidly grown. He reports a general clean-up all around of the various Easter plants he grew.

Kenneth S. Murray, one of our leading rose growers, advises that he is going to hold over his rose stock another season. He recently installed an oil-burning heating system and is very well satisfied with the result.

John Jack has been appointed on the landscape staff at the University of California at Berkeley. John is well known as the treasurer of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society.

The floral festival of the city of Santa Rosa, the home of Luther Burbank, will be held in May. Walter Nagle will be in charge.

Bob Neal has resigned his position as head of the greenhouse department of the exposition and has departed for Seattle. G. N.

BETTER TRADE CONDITIONS NOTED.

A better market is being experienced locally. Trade for the past nine months has been considerably behind, not only in the florist business, but in general lines, only the firms working for the war department having any reasonable business. Easter cash sales were about the same as in 1914, but big buyers and good charge accounts were few and far between. This naturally showed a decrease in the sales. The past week has shown more activity, and now that people here are becoming more accustomed to conditions, it is expected that business will again become normal. The bright, cool weather has had a good effect on the stock, and everything with the exception of violets, is of the highest quality. In roses, Richmond, Russell, Shawyer and Sunburst are producing specimen blooms and Killarneys also show excellent qualities. Carnations are the very finest, and although some growers report a short crop, there is still enough to go around. Orchids, which have been very plentiful, have now shortened up. American Beauty roses, which have been off crop since Christmas, are again plentiful. Snapdragons, irises, mignonette are all of good quality. Longiflorums are overplentiful. Very fine sweet peas, both of the orchid and Spencer varieties, with 18-inch stems, are fairly plentiful and sell readily. Glass, having advanced to $8 per box, is curtailing building operations here.

NEW FLORISTS' ORGANIZATION.

A new organization, to be known as the Ontario Florists' Association, is the latest. There will be both growers' and retailers' sections, and the aim will be towards harmony and better feeling amongst florists. There is a possibility of opening a wholesale and retail supply house, which, under the management of a man of ability, it is hoped, will facilitate the marketing of the supply. Lately, with the stock in unlimited quantities, one grower has been used against the other to get a reduction in prices. With the stock coming to a central market, this is one of the conditions which would not prevail. There has also been considerable over-lapping in several lines, and with general good feeling amongst the growers, a lot of this could be overcome. The retailer will also be relieved of his burdens, as his next door neighbor will not be able to buy stock cheaper than he does; nor will he hear the complaint from his customers that they can purchase direct from the growers at wholesale prices. There will also be a co-operative plan whereby orders can be placed jointly for the purchase of supplies and all material used in either the growing or retail end. This saving on many imports would often show a reduction of 50 per cent. H. Arnold, of Bedford Park, Ont., has been appointed secretary. The fees will be $3 per annum, and any bonafide grower or retail florist of Ontario is eligible. Suggestions and comments from the trade will be greatly appreciated. Write Mr. Arnold and these will be taken up at the next meeting.

NOTES.

At Brampton, Ont., stock is in very good shape. At the Dale estate, the young stock is very promising and prospects are excellent. Their $20,000 cold storage plant is ideal in every respect. A large number of Japanese longiflorum for the English export trade is stored here. The lily of the valley, ferns and galax are all coming out well. With the exception of a certain amount of repairs no new construction will be added this year. George W. Mullis is now managing the McIntyre greenhouses. He has an excellent stock of carnations, snapdragons, sweet peas and mignonette, and as he is a good grower, he should get the best of results from his place. At present W. Fendley's violets are over for the season, but he is cutting heavy on other lines. W. F. Calvert, who makes a specialty of violets, advises that he has had a very good season, and is now busy getting ready for his summer stock. R. Jennings, always noted for his carnations, has a good average crop, and at present his bloom is very fine. Snapdragons, sweet peas and mignonette all show good quality. A. A. Elliott is cutting some very fine sweet peas of the Spencer varieties.

Owing to high rentals and increased taxation, John H. Dunlop will move from his present location on Yonge street about May 1, having secured a building on Adelaide street, West. It will be fitted up with the most complete and up-to-date facilities. Large ice-boxes are being placed, and a conservatory will be constructed on the roof. An elevator will be installed, and it is intended to conduct both the retail and wholesale business from this store.

The executive committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association held a meeting at the Western Fair offices, London, Ontario, April 5. President H. B. Connor was in the chair. The programme was arranged for the next convention, which takes place in London, August 3-5.

TRADE PLEASED WITH EASTER BUSINESS.

The Easter trade was fully up to expectations, the volume of business done comparing favorably with that of last year. The weather was bright and frosty at night. A number of candy, fruit and drug stores opened flower stands and did a lively trade at prices somewhat lower than the regular florist stores and again the complaints are brought forward that the wholesalers supply these places at considerably lower prices than charged the legitimate florists. Lilies were never better and sold out early at the same old prices—25 cents per bud and bloom. All other plants sold proportionately well, but the limit of price appeared to be $5, and in consequence some beautiful basket arrangements were left over; also large azaleas and some splendid rhododendrons. In a way, it was the reverse of former years, when the most valuable and largest and high priced plants were marked "Sold" days ahead. This year they were left over, and plants up to $5 went into the packing room for delivery at a quick rate. The number of plants and boxes of cut flowers sold is ahead of last year; on this all reports agree, but in cash the amount will be about even. The churches, as usual, required a large amount of plants and lilies for decorative purposes; also in most cases some cut flowers. Cut flowers were in good demand and the supply sufficient, except violets. Prices ruled lower than last year, especially in the bulbous line. There were more than enough of tulips and daffodils. Delivery was made easy by the employment of autos by most stores and the roads were splendid.

At Hall & Robinson satisfaction was expressed. They sold out except in spireas. McKenna, Ltd., did a big business, everything sold but some large baskets made up for display, and two autos and six horse rigs were kept busy. Geo. Hopton & Sons had the largest sale of plants in their history. Campbell's had some splendid lilies and made up baskets which sold well. S. S. Bain was highly pleased with his business with his biggest day on Good Friday, and sold 1,800 lilies and thousands of other plants. Miss Cairns was all smiles over the result; had enough lilies to last to the end, but sold out.

The Montreal Gardeners & Florists' Club met April 5. Two papers were presented, one by R. Scott on "Hydrangeas" and one by H. Thiele on Primula obconica.

E. J. Hayward, R. Scott and J. Luck attended the executive meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Association at London, Ontario. J. L.

BEST BUSINESS OF THE YEAR.

Business now shows an increase of about 25 per cent more than at any time this winter and it is keeping everybody busy. Carnations are now filling the market and selling at a low price. Good roses can be bought at from two to eight cents, and all have a good flower and stem. Daffodils and tulips are still good, sweet peas are fine and callas and easter lilies are in top form. Snapdragon is now coming in more plentifully and is extra fine. The stores still have a few azaleas left that are good. The growers are now receiving their imports of hardy shrubs and boxwoods, and the stock is clean and of good quality.

NOTES.

Miss Florence Willard is building three new houses at her range in which she intends to grow cyclamens and Boston ferns, and later will put bulbs in these houses. She now has a large variety of plants and cut flowers, and her stock never was better.

E. E. Howard, of Auburn, R. I., has one large house of geraniums that will bring good returns on Memorial day.

G. M. Shurtleff, of Matthew Macnair's force, is back to work after a week's illness.

Olny Williams has a house of Lilium giganteum that are almost ready for the trade.

T. O'Connor had the decorations for the opening of the Keith stock company.

Matthew Macnair had 18 large pieces at one funeral the past week.

HEAVY SUPPLY CAUSES PRICE CUT.

The market for the past week has been very slow, with an abundance of stock of all kinds coming in, and prices have been cut considerably to make it move at all. The Easter business has been in most places a little ahead of last year, with plants and cut flowers not keeping up, although prices were comparatively low for Easter.

L. L. May & Co. make a big feature of their $1 box of cut flowers Saturdays and say it cleans out all surplus stock.

Visitors: A. Miller of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; N. Neilson, of Mankato, Minn. T. C. R.

The Late A. F. E. Hugo.

A. F. E. Hugo, whose serious illness was mentioned in the columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST of April 17, died Friday of that week and the funeral was held on Sunday, April 18. He had been connected with the Stumpp establishment in New York for about twelve years but, as previously stated, had recently been with John S. Nicholas, also of that city. He is survived by a wife and child. A. F. F.

FAR AND NEAR.

LOWELL, MASS.—Harvey B. Greene was elected park commissioner April 13.

CHILLICOTHE, ILL.—Hal Piper will start a greenhouse here and supply the local trade.

FULTON, MO.—Fred F. Hallows, formerly of Pine Bluff, Ark., will open a greenhouse in this city.

DAYTON, O.—The local florists and gardeners will urge the city commission to stop speculation in market stands.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—Ross Bragg Co.'s new flower store on West Zumbro street was given a formal opening March 30.

FREMONT, O.—F. P. Hummel, of Garrison street, has purchased a 12 acre tract near this city and will erect a range of greenhouses.

PORTLAND, ME.—The storm that swept the Atlantic coast Saturday and Easter Sunday was felt here, and sales suffered to some extent. Local florists, however, are generally satisfied with 1915 Easter business.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—The local trade is satisfied with 1915 Easter sales. Tipton & Hurst report stock, both in plant and cut flower classes as being equal to demand, and prices and volume of sales about the same as a year previous.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—A heavy storm, which swept this city the day preceding Easter, was responsible for a loss of about 20 per cent in sales, but with prices normal, business this year was about the same as a year ago, reports D. E. Law.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—Christmas weather prevailed at Easter and flowers had to be delivered in heated vehicles. John Reck & Son state that they lost many hundred dollars' worth of plants due to the storm. Seven autos used in delivery had to be towed in.

FREMONT, NEB.—The spring trade this year has been marked by a heavy sale of plants, Easter sales in this line in medium priced stock being especially good. Easter lily plants for the big flower day were reported short of supply by Green's Greenhouses.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Easter plants, in supply greater than the demand, and cut flowers on hand in large quantities, caused a drop in prices for the Easter trade. In some cases plants of all kinds could be had at the buyer's own price, according to G. C. Dalglish.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—August R. Baumer states that the large number of corsage bouquets worn on Easter Sunday was a matter that interested the local trade, and small flowers used in the making were most in demand. Medium sized plants of all kinds sold readily.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—An attractive full-page advertisement calling attention to the significance of plants and cut flowers at the Easter season especially, appeared in local papers, April 1, inserted by the Florists' Association of Memphis. Excellent sales are reported as a result.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—Lilies, both cut and in pots, still hold first place in popularity in the Easter flower class. The weather Easter Sunday was perfect, the supply of plants and cut flowers was ample, and business up to the the average, is the report received from Clark Bros.

PORTSMOUTH, O.—The 1915 Easter trade was a record breaker in every way, reports Mrs. J. Holzman. The demand for flowers exceeded the sales at Easter of any previous year. Everything salable was spoken for two days in advance. Roses, carnations and lilies had the popular call.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—During the busy Easter season just passed, the Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. used the "jitneys" for delivery service and reports that it was more than pleased, and the expense much less than in previous years. All florists seem happy over the good business this year.

HAGERSTOWN, MD.—Attractive window displays of Easter plants and cut flower arrangements were features of the Floracrofters shop. Manager W. R. Brewer received many compliments on them. Summer-like weather prevailed at Easter and resulted in a general clean up of stock of all kinds.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—The Easter trade this year showed an increase of 25 to 50 per cent over last year's corresponding statement, as estimated by the Avenue Floral Company. Local prices are generally high, but reduced prices this year, ideal weather and excellent stocks, resulted in highly satisfactory business.

CLEVELAND, O.—There was little to distinguish the 1915 Easter trade from that of other years, according to reports received from A. Graham & Son. Volume of business was equal to the 1914 period and prices the same. Except in the matter of choosing medium priced stock, flower purchasers expressed little preference.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Prices 25 per cent lower than a year ago did not affect the volume of business done by local florists during the 1915 Easter period. Clark Bros. report sales equal to a year ago. Lilies and azaleas were the best selling plants and in cut flowers the call was for sweet peas, violets, lily of the valley and red roses.

CATSKILL, N. Y.—The blizzard that visited this section at Easter did not interfere to any great extent with the good Easter sales among the local florists, with the exception of interfering with deliveries. Henry A. Hansen cleaned up in all lines, with violets in great demand. The day preceding Easter he sold 10,000 of these alone.

FREDERICTON, N. B.—The European war did not seem to affect Easter flower and plant sales this year, as the volume of business proved 10 per cent better than the Easter season of 1914. A snowstorm Easter morning curtailed somewhat the sale of corsage and buttonhole bouquets, but practically everything cleaned up nicely, is the report of J. Bebbington & Son.

TORONTO, ONT.—Owing to the war the residents of the Dominion are devoting all surplus cash to the cause of the relief of homeless and destitute, and those injured, with the result that the demand for flowers has shortened in proportion. The Easter trade was fair, however, but prices were 20 per cent lower than last year, is reported by Geo. M. Geraghty, manager of Dunlop's.

CENTRALIA, ILL.—According to J. W. Ross Co., sales were a little better this year than during the Easter period 1914. Prices were about the same. In the plant line everything in bloom sold out, and while cut-flower sales were not in comparison, there was a good demand for all kinds of stock. Bulbous stock in pots and pans sold out first, after which lilies and other stock cleaned up. Lily of the valley and cut lilies sold slowest.

"MOISTURE DEFICIENCY" is the up-to-date college florist's substitute for Hans Gartner's "Dam dry."

WE HAVE received from Secretary Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., copy of the American Rose Society's annual proceedings and bulletin for 1914.

CLEANING up day has been fixed as May 1 in many cities of the United States and whenever our florist and nursery friends have an opportunity they should seek to aid such a movement in their home town or city.

The Carnation Yearbook.

We have just received the yearbook of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, edited by J. S. Brunton, the contents including: "Reflections," by T. A. Weston; "The Perpetual-Flowering Carnation as a Cut Flower," by Alva J. Hall; "Carnation Growing in Belgium," by V. Bouckenooghe; "The Adaptability of the Perpetual-Flowering Carnation," by C. H. Taudevin; "Productiveness of Carnations," by Jos. H. Hill; "The Cultivation of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation," by Montague Allwood.

Canadian War Tax.

We understand that the new Canadian war tax of 7½ per cent on all imports went into effect April 15. This is said to apply to all imports formerly free of dut and is an additional impost on those already taxed. For example, fruit formerly was taxed at 25 per cent and under the new law the duty would be increased to 32½ per cent.

Agricultural Extension Work Bill Passed.

H. R. 7951, a bill to provide aid in diffusing useful and practical information on subjects relating to agriculture and home economics, was approved by Congress May 8, 1914. The act provides for the distribution of moneys appropriated for agricultural extension work carried on by state agricultural colleges in the United States. The first year's appropriation was $480,000. Each succeeding year for seven years, $500,000 will be added to the previous year's appropriation.

Society of American Florists.

SAN FRANCISCO CONVENTION GARDEN.

At the last meeting of the convention committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, Daniel MacRorie, for the committee on convention garden, reported that the commissioners of the Golden Gate park had kindly consented to allow the Society of American Florists a portion of the park for a convention garden. The site chosen is admirably adapted for the purpose. The commissioners did not limit the Society of American Florists to space, making it possible for exhibitors to make their displays as liberal as they may desire. Florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and gardeners from all parts are invited to exhibit.

The care of the convention garden will be in charge of John McLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate park, San Francisco, thereby assuring exhibits of the best of care and attention. We would advise intending exhibitors to eliminate sub-tropical plants, such as cannas, etc., as they do no thrive well in San Francisco, on account of our cool climate. Dahlias, gladioli, etc., make a grand showing when planted here the first week in May. All other plants that like a cool climate do remarkably well.

A flat rate of 10 cents per square foot will be charged for the upkeep of exhibits. Applications for space and further particulars may be had by addressing Daniel MacRorie, 432 Phelan building, San Fancisco, Calif. Address all exhibits to John McLaren, Golden Gate Park, San Francisco, Calif., express prepaid.

Radium As a Fertilizer.

Human faith in the marvelous and unusual is shown by the yarns which are being circulated and believed regarding the stimulative effects of radium on growing crops.

Professors Hopkins and Sachs of the Illinois experiment station in bulletin No. 177 explode these fables very completely.

It appears that one grain of radium costs more than most good, modern greenhouse establishments earn, net, in a year ($10,000). It further appears that if an enterprising (or fool) florist owning a place netting $10,000 per year should invest the whole year's profits in one grain of radium the increase of crop for the next year due to the radium could easily be put in the northeast corner of one of the eyes of his smallest baby and not inconvenience the child in the least

We have been pleased with the wonderful results from radium applied to the tomato-potato grafting process as recently described, but we remember to have seen some very successful results of this kind without radium. We have seen ten trials of this sort conducted under uniform conditions without radium. One a beautiful success and the other nine falling short in various degrees and in various ways. We have seen another lot of five all successful (without radium).

When the gentleman gets that "radiated" tomato seed saved, let him have Burbank, or one of his hired men, sow it and let the Luther Burbank society describe the resulting plant. Without doubt the seedling plant would produce a peck of potatoes above ground, a half bushel of tomatoes under ground and a barrel of spinach between, which would add $400,000,000 to the world's wealth, but imagination fails. Burbank and Radium. Radium and Burbank. Hellup! I feel faint.

Floral Designing at the Univ. of Illinois.

Over 2,600 people attended the third annual exhibition of floral arrangements, given by the class in floral decoration, assisted by Miss Emily Dorner of LaFayette, Indiana, Sunday afternoon, April 18, in the floricultural building. Most of the visitors were students and faculty members, but both Urbana and Champaign were well represented. A better day could not have been chosen, as the weather was ideal.

It is difficult to say which display was admired most as nearly all of them were equally good and the opinion of the people seemed to vary. Perhaps the most attention was attracted by the different table decorations, wedding bouquets, and corsage bouquets, as these seemed to be of special interest to the ladies. In connection with the wedding bouquets was staged a large doll dressed as a bride and carrying a bouquet of lily of the valley. This was an entirely new feature and was very attractive. Besides this there were many funeral designs, plant baskets, flower baskets, box and vase arrangements. Favorable comments were heard from nearly every one and it is safe to say that not a person regretted coming to see the display.

Panama-Pacific Exposition Notes.

The greatest tulip exhibit ever possible outside of Holland, two acres being devoted to these flowers, is part of the national exhibit of the Netherlands.

No plant not in full bloom will be allowed to remain upon the exposition grounds at any time during the exposition year.

More than 220 conventions, 21 of which are horticultural, will meet at San Francisco during the exposition.

STOCK MOVES BUT AT SHATTERED PRICES.

Since Easter there has been a decided change in market conditions here, as, with the warm weather and strong sunshine we have experienced the past two weeks, the markets are loaded to their utmost capacity with all kinds of flowers. Prices have been shattered, and the wholesale men are really ashamed to examine the invoices which they make out to their customers, prices are so low. When the very best long Killarney roses bring only four and five dollars per hundred, it is evident to the "greenest" person in the business that prices are at their lowest level. But it is the same with everything including fancy Spencer sweet peas, carnations, lilies, violets, daisies, and everything else that is handled by the florist. The one good thing, however, is that stock is cleaning up fairly well every day, and one can hardly complain of poor business, considering the season. As we have said, the weather has been very mild here, and we may expect it to remain so for quite a while, which condition is ideal for the street fakirs, who dispose of a lot of stock.

CLUB MEETING.

There has been no cause for complaint as to interesting meetings of the local florists' club lately, as all the members and visitors will testify that the last few meetings have been all and more than could be expected. The increased attendance and close attention paid the speakers go a great way to prove this fact. Dr. H. Phillips Rose, of the Mellon Institute, University of Pittsburgh, was the principal speaker at the April meeting. He thoroughly conveyed his subject; "Some Recent Advances in Our Knowledge of Fertilizers." Dr. Phillips is conducting experiments on a rather extensive scale at the Phipps conservatories. John Jones proposed that the club members test his compounds for themselves, so the Doctor offered two pounds to each member who would grow two plants under the same conditions, using his fertilizer on one of them, then to exhibit the two plants at the May meeting. Nearly everyone present responded to his invitation. Carl Becherer, John Phillips, and John Jones showed specimens of new tulips and hyacinths. Messrs. Jones and Phillips had an animated discussion on the advisability of freezing hyacinth bulbs, but Mr. Jones seemed to get the best of the argument when he showed the difference in the foliage of some examples he brought with him. We also expected an exhibit of the new rose, Francis Scott Key, but they failed to make their appearance in time for the meeting, as President McCallum put it: "They will be on hand tomorrow, as usual." So we did not have the pleasure of greeting the newcomer. It might be added, that at practically every meeting, an expected exhibit arrives a day late.

STOCK SELLS AT ANY PRICE OFFERED.

Business has not improved any the past week, and the mid-summer weather we are enjoying has not improved the market, as everything is still in a glut. Carnations, roses, Easter lilies, sweet peas, gardenias, freesias, snapdragons, American Beauty roses and calla lilies can be had at almost any price.

NOTES.

Geo. Lavelle sent in the first gladioli that were seen in this market, and will continue to cut for some time to come, as he has over 10,000 bulbs of some of the finest varieties to be had. He has also started in to grow lily of the valley. As there is no grower of this in this vicinity he should have little trouble in disposing of his crop.

The new retail florist association, which was started some time ago with W. W. Kimmell as chairman and Fred Leafley as secretary, will hold their next meeting at the Hotel Hudson, and then, as Wallace says: "the banquet will follow."

The Dupont Florist Co., under the management of E. Mayberry, is still branching out. It now occupies about as large a space as any of the florists in this city, and business is as good as can be expected.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving some extra fine orchids; also some good carnations for this time of the year.

Marche & Co. report business good. Decoration orders for weddings with this firm are quite brisk.

Miss Josie Formely, with Washington Florist Co., has accepted a position with G. C. Shaffer.

Geo. Cooke is always busy at this time of the year with decorations, and also outside work.

OUTDOOR STOCK INFLUENCES MARKET.

Warmer weather prevailed the latter part of last week and early planting out and landscaping are in full swing. The market is still crowded. Sweet peas have slightly stiffened, owing to the absence of violets and the decreased supply. Carnations are plentiful, jonquils are over, those coming in being soft and unsalable. Long stem American Beauty roses are also plentiful. Ferns are getting poor and brown. Lilacs will be soon in from the south. The outdoor stock in general, is greatly influencing the market for all greenhouse stock.

NOTES.

Charlie Busch was buried April 14. The floral offerings were very costly and beautiful, the family order being given to Grimm & Gorly. A very elaborate blanket of Butterfly sweet peas and lily of the valley covered the casket.

Moss Floral Co.'s store, on Jefferson avenue and LaFayette streets, makes a nice appearance and can be seen from the cars. Mrs. Moss has been in the business for years and is fully qualified.

A. Jablonsky, carnation and lily specialist, is quite a writer. His articles in the county papers on the European war, although strongly pro-German, must make all neutrals sit up and take notice.

O. Leary, the Florist, will have the decorations for one of the largest South side weddings, April 21. Several hundred lilies and other flowers will be used.

C. A. Kuehn's delivery truck is quite a swell turn-out and in perfect unison with his self-built and well-equipped wholesale house, one of the finest in the west.

The Grand Leader disposed of several thousands of sweet peas and carnations, thus saving considerable stock from the dump pile.

Otto Bruenig's little daughter successfully underwent an operation for appendicitis and is on the way to recovery.

H. G. Berning's new delivery car is a very fine outfit. It is kept busy, as is also the horse and wagon.

Cizkowski, the Cass avenue florist, is showing some nice plants and artificial floral designs.

Foster, the Florist, disposed of 35,000 carnations April 17, two dozen for 25 cents.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., will make a good mayor if elected.

Shaw's garden had a special tulip display April 17.

Sam Levine has been with us all week.

W. F.

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

April 15, 1915, will be entered in the minutes of the club as a "red letter" day if the secretary does his duty. In place of a regular meeting, the night was given over to a committee consisting of Ira B. Landis, J. Rutter Hess, Wade Galey and Chas. B. Herr, with instructions to have ladies' night, and ladies' night it was in the full sense of the term. Mine host McConemy, of The Stevens House, was the caterer; the committee and decorators, and about an even fifty of the florists and their wives or sweethearts, the guests.

The decorations were the prettiest and most elaborate of anything ever attempted in this city. The music was by Rothe's orchestra, and Mr. Savage sang several solos. Miss Katherine Seifert, of the B. F. Barr Co., sang several solos and a duet with Mr. Savage, and Miss Amanda Landis of the Millersville normal school gave a series of recitations, D. J. Keohane, of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was the only out-of-town representative of the trade with us, and the way in which he joined in with Alonzo Peters and Rudolph Nagle in singing "Heighle Heighlo," showed him to be a "good sport." Rodney Eshlemen led the singing between courses, and at the end of the banquet the writer presented the following resolution: In view of the fact that the children's gardens brought so much pleasure out of our donation of seeds for their use last season, I move that the club appropriate double the amount this season and give one-half to the children's gardens, and one-half to the public school gardens. This resolution was passed unanimously. About midnight the party dispersed with the hope that another ladies' night would be an event of the near future.

GLUT CONTINUES INTO THIRD WEEK.

The glut of last week and the week previous is continuing into this week. Receipts in all lines are very heavy, while the demand for stock is still at about the same level as at the last writing. Rose receipts of all kinds are very heavy and much more than the market requires to satisfy its present needs. American Beauty, too, are plentiful. What is reported about roses applies to carnations. Neither are bringing prices that yield any kind of an adequate return. Easter lilies are in a very heavy supply, but sell rather slowly, even at the low prices that prevail. Sweet peas are plentiful. Orchids and lily of the valley are selling a little better than they did, owing to a call for their use at weddings. Other offerings include snapdragons and callas.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell reports a good demand for lily of the valley, orchids and adiantum for bouquets for spring weddings.

Visitors: Joe Hill and Lew Knopf, Richmond, Ind.; O. Honacher, Lexington, Ky.; V. Morgan, of Lord & Burnham Co., New York., and Mrs. B. F. Hensley, Knightstown, Ind.

Build Up Your Mothers' Day Business

Mothers' Day is Sunday, May 9, 1915.

Mothers' Day has greater possibilities for creating NEW flower business than any other holiday in the year, not excepting St. Valentine's Day.

Make the Second Sunday in May, May 9th, 1915, not only a big flower day, but a profitable one by using our Mothers' Day Folder. If you have not received our Mothers' Day Folder sample, it will be sent to you with full particulars upon request.

When you appeal to a man's love for his mother you touch a most responsive heart cord. In the rush of business he may forget Mothers' Day, but a reminder from you will call it to his attention.

Promote the giving of flowers or a plant to Mothers—not just the wearing of a red or white carnation. Our Mothers' Day Folder is a masterpiece—everything about it suggests flowers as a gift to Mother.

A man may do many things to please his mother, but in no other way can his love and reverence be so truly expressed as by a gift of flowers.

Our Mothers' Day Folder, which will be used by florists in a great many cities in the United States and Canada, will do its share to build up this day in those cities.

Write us or mail order promptly if you want our service for Mothers' Day.

BIG DEMAND FOR BEDDING STOCK.

Florists report as being busy every day, social events are numerous and there has been an occasional heavy demand for funeral work. The bedding season is in full swing, and as this branch is a feature with all in the trade, it makes the flower stores seem like plant markets at this particular time, as everything in the way of flowering plants is kept on display. There is a tremendous call for seeds of all kinds, also, and the demand for nursery stock seems almost unlimited, and very little is grown here so we are dependant upon out-side growers. To any young nurseryman seeking a new field, this city offers an exceptional opportunity. Land can be purchased at a reasonable price and many kinds of stock do well here. There is a general feeling among the people of the whole state that planting for ornamentation has not kept pace with other lines of progress, and the time has arrived to make good this deficiency, consequently, ornamental nursery stock is meeting with a big demand, and it will become more so during the next few years. TRADE HOPEFUL AS MARKET RALLIES.

Business during the past week has been far from satisfactory. There has been an oversupply in nearly every line of stock. Roses are selling very slowly and bringing poor prices. Many were sold for less than $1 per 100, but good clean stock brought from $1.50 to $10 per 100. Carnations took a drop in price as larger supplies have been cut and consequently the business has been unable to take care of them. Many fine flowers were sold during the middle of the week as low as $1 per 100; between $1, and $2.50 in some instances, seems to be the average price. Violets are shortening in supply as their season draws to a close. Being so difficult to keep, they are not in heavy demand and prices not very good. Snapdragon does not seem to be as popular as in previous years, and although some very fine flowers are seen, the demand for them is light and they move slowly. Yellow marguerites are very abundant, and sales on them are fairly good, considering the general condition of the market. Prices on these run from $1 to $3 per 100. Plants as yet are not in heavy demand. Some very fine hydrangeas are seen, that under normal conditions should find a ready market.

April 19.—The retailers of greater Boston had a very good business Saturday, April 17, and succeeded in disposing of most of their stock. The result was a fairly good market today. Sweet peas took a rise in price; $1 per 100 was secured for good flowers. The whole market was in general more active than any day last week, and it is hoped that it will now turn for the better.

NOTES.

J. K. Chandler & Sons, of Tewksbury, Mass., have commenced two new greenhouses as an addition to their establishment. The largest house will be 42x250 with a connecting house 20x20 to a propagating house, 20x60. The houses will be Stearns construction. They will devote the house to carnations and yellow marguerites. At present they are cutting a fine lot of yellow marguerites in addition to carnations, violets, sweet peas and Spanish iris.

Edward J. Ahern, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., is marketing a large supply of yellow primroses at present. His yellow marguerites are also of very high quality. He has worked up a good trade on his two specialties, and now finds no trouble in disposing of his stock.

Mrs. Charles Sanders died suddenly at her home in Brookline, Sunday, April 11. Mrs. Sanders was well known to horticulturists in this vicinity, who join in extending to Mr. Sanders their sympathy upon his bereavement.

Patrick Welch is making preparations to open a wholesale florist establishment at 262 Devonshire street, next door to the Boston Co-operative Flower Market. Paul Regan will be manager of the new store.

Penn's staff was kept busy last week with an unusual amount of funeral work. Henry Penn is planning a trip to the Pacific coast where he will attend the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, Calif.

A. J. Montgomery, salesman for his father, Robt. Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., is laid up with an abcess under his arm. He expects to be able to resume his duties soon.

Donald Carmicael, of Wellesley, Mass., in addition to carnations, is cutting a good supply of extra high grade stock. F. L. W.

Newport, R. I.

The Newport Horticultural Society and Garden Association is scheduled to hold its rose show on June 23-24, on a vacant lot in Beach street, where improvements now are being made, and when these are completed space will be allotted to exhibitors with the option of planting their exhibit now or later. The recent ladies' night, given by the horticultural society, was a most enjoyable affair. The committee of arrangements, John T. Allen, Andrew S. Meikle and Frederick Carter, had much to do with making the occasion one to be long remembered. The summer colony have commenced to arrive, which is unusually early, and probably on account of no Europe to go to. J. J. B.

MENDOTA, ILL.—The Mendota Woman's Club has secured from the state university a set of slides on "Landscape Gardening" in order that members interested in the planting of trees and shrubs may have the benefit of the lessons given in these slides.

PALESTINE, TEX.—Cold weather has retarded gardening and field work this spring but is now opening with a rush, following a good Easter trade.—Mrs. M. Zincke is bringing in a nice lot of carnations and contemplates adding another house.—Mrs. W. C. Kendall reports good trade in both plants and cut flowers.—Mrs. D. H. McNaughton has worked up a nice business in funeral designs.

TRADE STILL VERY QUIET.

Business is very quiet and there has been no change in the market conditions since last week. Stock of all kinds is still very plentiful and is being sold in large lots at unusually low prices. At times during the week it appeared as if conditions would improve, but the demand stopped almost as suddenly as it started; but a change for the better may be expected at any moment, for there seems to be an undercurrent about that bespeaks of better times, and then there is the big prosperity parade scheduled to be held on Monday, April 26. There has been a better demand for roses the past few days than there has for over a week, but prices are still way down and there is a large supply of magnificent stock to select from. Carnations are selling at remarkably low prices by the hundreds and the same holds good for sweet peas which have increased in quantity the past week. Lilies are seen everywhere in large supply and so are gardenias, especially since some eastern houses have started to ship in stock. Orchids are none too plentiful and clean up well, but the prices are not what they should be, which must be expected, for the tremendous supply of other stock that is reaching the market is bound to keep the prices down. Snapdragons are in good supply, but are in good demand and clean up fairly well. Spanish iris is more plentiful and so is Ten Weeks stock. Lupines, gladioli, daisies, candytuft, violets, amaryllis, swainsona,

August Poehlmann.

Large Supply ROSES AND CARNATIONS

Carnations are in good supply with us but we are strongly urging our customers to carry all flowers for there are never enough Carnations to go around for the occasion. Roses and Sweet Peas are splendid substitutes and you will find it profitable to have a good stock on hand. We are booking orders for Carnations for Mothers' Day at the following prices: White, $5.00 per 100; Fancy Pink and Red, $4.00 to $5.00 per 100. Prices on Roses, Beauties and miscellaneous stock will be the same as quoted in our Current Price List below. Place your order for Mothers' Day as early as possible.

pansies, Narcissus poeticus, jonquils, calendulas, mignonette and other miscellaneous seasonble stock is among the offering, and to help increase the already tremendous supply, trailing arbutus, lilac, out-door tulips and out-door lily of the valley made its appearance this week. To sum up the whole market condition in as few words as possible, everything seasonable in cut flowers are for mothers' memory and selling at unusually low prices. Orders for stock for Mothers' day, Sunday, May 9, are arriving and in some instances are being refused, especially where only carnations are specified. It is impossible to state just what stock there will be for Mothers' day, but judging from the present conditions one would play safe by ordering as early as possible and thereby avoid disappointment. When placing orders the buyer would do well to take in consideration that carnations will be none too plentiful and order liberally of roses and other flowers. White flowers are for Mothers' memory and bright flowers are for mothers living, so bear this in mind when ordering. Sunday, May 9, is the day and the time to place orders is right now. Buy from whoever you please, but take a friendly tip from the writer and place your order as early as possible. The temperature has been very warm the past week, and on Monday, April 19, the thermometer registered 84°.

NOTES.

Kyle & Foerster, who have been located on the second floor of the Atlas building since they started in business about seven years ago, have leased the store on the main floor of the same building at 160 North Wabash avenue, which is occupied at present by Harry C. Rowe, and the large basement that was formerly used by the J. B. Deamud Co. as a wholesale store. They have a long lease and expect to move into their new quarters about May 15, and when all their plans are carried out they will have one of the finest and best located wholesale stores in the great central market. Neither William Kyle or Joseph Foerster, the proprietors, need any introduction to the trade for their splendid record that they have made for the few years that the firm has been in existence speaks for itself. The new quarters will give them more floor space than they have now and which is most needed. A few other changes will follow as soon as Kyle & Foerster vacate their present store, but as yet the parties interested have no definite information to give out.

Kellogg M. Patterson, who holds the position as publicity director for Wm. Hale Thompson, says all the florists are cordially invited to participate in the prosperity parade, which is non-political and is to be held Monday, April 26. A. Lange, John Mangel and others have practically closed arrangements to enter at least one floral float and this is a splendid opportunity for all in the trade to make a showing and help a good cause along at no entry cost whatever. Anyone who is desirous of entering the parade should get in touch with the committee, whose headquarters are in Room 944 in the First National Bank building, as early as possible. The trade will form in line at 1 o'clock Monday, April 26, and all gasoline machines will cross over Peck court viaduct in driving. Get busy, everybody, and show the other lines what the florists can really do.

Miss Virginia Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, has been chosen to break the bottle of wine in christening the new road at Niles, six miles of concrete construction, April 22.

Pyfer & Olsem, of Wilmette, planted their carnations out in the field, Thursday, April 22.

HEAVY SUPPLY OF ROSES

White Killarney, Pink Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Richmond and Sunburst.

Remember when ordering that White Flowers are for Mothers' Memory and that Bright Colored Flowers are for Mothers Living. Unusually large crops will enable us to take care of a large number of orders.

CARNATIONS--SWEET PEAS

Carnations always play an important part in the Mothers' Day trade, but this year Sweet Peas will have a good call, for the extra large crops of the Fancy Butterfly Sweet Peas in the desired colors will furnish a splendid substitute, for there are hardly ever enough carnations to go around on this occasion. The Mothers' Day trade promises to be larger than ever this year, so protect yourself by placing your order with us well in advance.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is booking a large number of orders for the Hughes' Mothers' day box, of which it has the exclusive agency, and some of them can already be seen featured in the window displays of the alert florists. The Hughes' box is very appropriate for the occasion and can be had in lots of 10 or more. In the cut flower department some very choice Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are now arriving in quantity and the same holds good for stock in general.

Peter Reinberg has been inadvertently advertising a seedling carnation under the name of Josie Merle, which really should be Zoe Symonds, according to W. T. Symonds of Decorah, Ia., who has registered it under that name. This seedling appears to be very promising and to avoid any misunderstanding in the future the beautiful variety will hereafter be known as Zoe Symonds.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received its first shipment of cut lilac on April 20. H. B. Kennicott says that the latest reports from the firm's peony growers is to the effect that the crops will be late and short, which is attributed to the dry summer and fall. This will not affect the Kennicott supply, for their increased acreage will easily make up the difference.

C. L. Washburn says that Bassett & Washburn have already set out over 75,000 carnations in the field, but that the planting did not start as early as last year, when it commenced on April 1. Mr. Washburn says that the demand for roses is improving and expects to see a big change in the market conditions soon.

Wietor Bros. are having a big run on rose stock, especially 2-in. Killarney Brilliant, of which they have a large supply. In speaking of the Mothers' day trade, N. J. Wietor says that there is already a demand for white carnations for this occasion and that some buyers are ordering liberally of roses as well.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering a good supply of splendidly grown Killarney Queen roses and the first Lilium candidum of the season at its store this week. Paul Klingsporn says that Michael Fink, who is his right hand man, has been on the sick list since April 18.

At Zech & Mann's store fancy sweet peas are arriving in exceptionally large quantities and the first pick of the spring blooming stock reached this store on April 20. John Zech has been bothered with a severe cold the past week, but is on the job every hour of the day as usual.

Miller & Musser are offering a nice supply of orchids at their new wholesale store at Lake street and North Wabash avenue. The daily receipts of roses at this house include a good supply of Perle which have not been seen in any great quantities in this market for a long time.

At J. A. Budlong's store lily of the valley is in good demand for wedding work and cleans up fairly well each day considering the general market condition. Inquiries regarding stock for Mothers' day are numerous and several nice orders have already been booked.

R. J. Windler, who is engaged in the trade in St. Louis, Mo., will remove to this city May 1, having leased one of the places owned by his father-in-law, Adam Zender, in Rogers Park. He will grow flowers for the market.

O. A. Tonner says that snapdragons have been in good demand right along, notwithstanding the large supply of other stock that is reaching the market. Spanish iris is now seen in large supply at this store.

USE Budlong's Blue Ribbon Valley.

The George Wittbold Co. has just received a second importation of boxwood and bay trees. The landscape department has about all the work that it can conveniently handle and is taxed to its utmost.

Percy Jones is having a special sale on spirit netting this week. This firm is handling a large supply of carnations and are booking a large number of orders for same for Mothers' day.

The Garland Manufacturing Co. of Des Plaines booked a nice order this week for a new greenhouse to be delivered to a florist in Iowa.

A. E. Hunt & Co. are cutting a good supply of daisies and lupines, which clean up well at their wholesale stand each day.

George Reinberg has had a good demand for American Beauty bench plants and is all sold out in this variety.

Chas. L. Huffert has a beautiful window display of rambler roses at his store at 4053 West North avenue.

V. Bezdek of Wilmette has just bought a new seven-passenger Moline-Dreadnaught touring car.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is showing the first trailing arbutus of the season this week.

Jens Jensen is conducting a Home Garden and Farm department in the Examiner.

President Rudd, of the Horticultural Society, calls attention to a joker in the park consolidation bill now before the legislature, citing article four, section five, which he says plainly provides that the city council by a three-fourths vote "may discontinue any parks or any part thereof," and may "dispose of the land." "If a portion of Lincoln park had been 'discontinued' and 'disposed' of, the armory could have been erected. This section should be stricken out or at least a strong referendum provision should be added."

Peter Reinberg, president of the Forest Preserve Commission, says no action will be taken in forest preserve matters until the constitutionality of the law and the validity of the bond issue have been tested. These questions will probably be decided at the June term of the supreme court.

Eugene B. Bowen is well pleased with trade at his new store at 108 East Fifty-first street, which he opened a few weeks ago. He was formerly in the employ of Zalinger & Hirsch, who operate the store in the rotunda of the Insurance Exchange building.

A. L. Vaughan, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., is the proud owner of a new Moline-Knight touring car. Mr. Vaughan is particularly pleased with the Knight engine and selected the Moline-Knight on this account more than anything else.

P. J. Foley's family is planning to spend the summer at Lake Geneva, Wis., and the head of the house expects to indulge in his favorite sport of fishing there as frequently as he can get away from business.

Frank Ayres, of the Chas. W. McKellar force, has been troubled more or less the past week with malaria, which he contracted in Cuba while he was serving as colonel in the United States army.

It is stated real estate agents are negotiating with one of the down-town florists for the lease of Huyler's store, 35 South State street, that candy business moving to Michigan avenue next month.

N. I. Stuart, who has charge of the store known as the Flower Market at 6 East Monroe street, likes the florist business first rate and always has a nice showing in his window.

A. Lange says the first week's business of his new flower booth in Chas. A. Stevens & Bros.' State street store was quite satisfactory.

The proprietors of the Kaiserhof hotel are reported anxious to lease one of the new stores to a florist.

SPRING FLOWER SHOW.

Owing to the wind storm of April 13, the Pasadena flower show instead of being held in the large tent on Hotel Maryland grounds, was held down town in a business block. Luckily the wind occurred the night before the show was to open, consequently not many exhibits were in place. Perhaps the severest individual damage was done to the exhibit of the Clemence Nursery of Pasadena. Mr. Clemence had nearly completed construction of a handsome summer house, in which he was to make his exhibit. The wind blew the tent down and wrecked his summer house, costing him in the neighborhood of $100. The Pasadena people all went "to the bat" and opened the show as scheduled in the town quarters. The Los Angeles County Horticultural Society accepted their invitation to visit the show, going over in a body, Friday evening, April 16.

Under the circumstances, taking the show as a whole, it was indeed a rare treat for all visitors. Among those exhibiting a few words of pleasant comment may be said of the following exhibits:

In the writer's opinion the best individual exhibit was that of the Edward H. Rust Nurseries, of South Pasadena, Calif. He selected a corner, and displayed the larger varieties against the wall, working down a scale to the small annuals and perennials. Among the most notable varieties shown were: Clematis Henryii and Sieboldi, in bloom; Pyrus spectabilis and the double flowering cerasus; Acacia saligna in bloom, and a new deep red rose, called Francaise Crouse, among many others.

The rose display by Henry Turner, of Montebello, Calif., was indeed striking, not for the number of different varieties, but for the splendid blooms of the following varieties: Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, September Morn, J. L. Mock, Killarney Queen and Prince D'Arenberg.

The Germain Seed Company's exhibit which consisted of rare pot palms, bay, box and others, was in a class by itself, as was the display of Dieterich & Smith.

The tropical fruit exhibits of the West India Gardens, of Altadena, and C. P. Taft of Orange, Calif., were both interesting and educational, taking the time and attention of many of the visitors.

The tulip display by John H. Teekamp of Pasadena and the iris exhibit by the Dean Iris Gardens, of Moneta, Calif., should in no way be passed without favorable comment, for both contained well grown blooms and were artistically arranged.

An elegant show of cinerarias was on display, but no name of the exhibitor could be found.

Many small displays of roses and other flowers took much time of the visitors. The General McArthur seemed to predominate and was highly praised.

NOTES.

Howard & Smith's trade mark was practically destroyed on the afternoon of April 13 by a severe wind storm which swept the city. This trade mark, and also a land mark, was the Eucalyptus citriodora tree, which was planted more than twenty years ago when it was a slender wisp, scarcely 18 inches high. Before its top was laid low its height was estimated at more than 135 feet. The lowest branches were about 120 feet from the ground. The wind snapped off the top 56 feet. The base of the tree is only a foot in diameter, smaller, it is believed, than that of any other tree in the country that has reached as great a height. Two years ago a steeplejack placed a pulley and flag rope about 100 feet from the bottom of the tree. It is planned to keep what remains standing as a flagstaff, and to give the tree treatment, calculated to cause it to put out new branches.

Theo. Payne says business is picking up. He has just sold to the city several hundred specimen of Chamaerops excelsa to the city, which are in concrete boxes and placed at regu-

Frank Lewin, of Hawthorne, has just entered the rose field. On a recent visit here, he brought in a basket of well grown buds of the newer sorts, and if he continues to grow such blooms, his success is certain.

Miss Sadie A. Thomas, noted chrysanthemum grower of Pasadena, has just issued a very neat catalogue listing nothing but her late introductions, and is looking for a banner year for the 'mums.

Staiger & Munwiler are having a splendid display of azaleas at their show rooms on West Washington street.

The firm of Roeding & Wood report an excellent year on roses, having sold out practically all bare roots.

PLANT SALES BULK OF EASTER TRADE.

Without an exception all the florists had a good Easter trade; plenty of flowers of all kinds with the possible exception of good roses. Easter lilies were in over-supply; yet prices were held firm, although never before has the demand called for so many, all churches being nicely decorated with plenty of them, and the great abundance of narcissi, tulips and hyacinths, brought in from outside blooming, made a great display. Saturday and Easter day were almost ideal as to weather, and that of course made handling easy, with safe perfect delivery of plants and flowers. Practically no cover or wrapping was needed to insure good condition when a delivery was made.

Pot roses and azaleas were just about equal to demand, but the crimson rambler was not to be found anywhere. Some well grown Dorothy Perkins were to be had, but did not sell because cheaper plants were asked for.

The violet supply from California is about over for this season and shipments were not so good upon arrival. Taken all around, Easter business showed a gain, but never before did half so many good flowers remain unsold. Pot plants were sold quite extensively, especially cheaper priced plants, and the question now comes up—What will be the net profit when all the extra cut flower losses are counted up? We suspect last year's Easter trade will show the most profit.

Never before have we enjoyed a more beautiful, advanced springtime, and the call for bedding stock has begun, so from now on the bench spaces will be relieved and contents of the safety deposit boxes increased—maybe.

SUPPLY HEAVIEST IN HISTORY OF TRADE.

The past week has been a nightmare to the wholesale men; never in the history of the business has there been so many flowers thrown on the market at one time. The weather has been bright, but cool, fine for handling and keeping stock. At the same time business has been poor, nothing particular going on in the social world. Quite a number of the stores, owing to the low prices of flowers, are running "specials," offering roses, carnations and other stock at prices away below the normal; this relieves the situation somewhat, but is too spasmodic. That a much larger amount of stock could be moved in this way is certain, provided it was kept up long enough for one's customers and the general public to find it out. Such selling in retail stores that cater to the better class of trade, is an innovation, which, to be successful, should be conducted with system. A concise circular should give the reason for the low prices, and a stock worth while carried during the time of the special sales. A lot today and none tomorrow is too haphazard on which to build up a trade. The Wanamaker department stores are increasing their space for the sale of cut flowers. Mr. Earnshaw, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., who is furnishing the stock, says they handle 200,000 flowers a day. This is sold on the 50-50 basis, half of the proceeds being taken by each of the concerns. Any waste is unaccounted for. This should open up a great outlet for the surplus; prices rule low, but are probably all the stock is worth. The stand or stands present a very mussy appearance, as is natural under the conditions. The space used is in a center aisle in the basement, with no protection for the stock, which is mauled over by the purchasers and much of it damaged in this way. It is not boxed and must be carried away by the purchaser. Methods such as these seem very crude and no credit to either party concerned. The quality of the stock coming in, considering the great quantity, is very good. Some of the roses are a trifle mildewed, but nothing serious. Snapdragon is probably the greatest overstocked article and very fine spikes go "a begging" at any old price, selling as low as $1 to $1.50 per hundred for three to four foot stalks. Buyers' prices prevail on all other stocks and the cold storage facilities are taxed to the utmost to handle it. It was said on Saturday night, April 17, that the worst was over and there would be a shortening up and general stiffening of prices for next week.

Mothers' day will soon be here and it is up to the trade to make it a floral event of importance. Let every one boost Mothers' day—talk it up, make a fuss about it, believe in it, get enthusiastic over it, and something will surely come out of it to crown your efforts. The florists of other cities have pulled together on this issue and have built up a wonderful trade. Why not make this city, the birthplace of the idea, a leader? The sentiment is here; it is only waiting to be awakened. Get together, boys, and arouse it.

NOTES.

Henry A. Dreer is getting a spring rush on that promises to eclipse all other seasons and is prepared for it with an enormous stock in all lines. Pot roses, a specialty at this establishment, are seen by the hundred thousand.

The Robert Craig Co. is filling the spaces in their houses made empty from the Easter stock with bedding plants, which are sold here by the thousands.

Edward Reid relieved the situation at his crowded house by large out-of-town shipments, his southern trade coming to the rescue at a very opportune time.

The Jos. Heacock Co. is sending in some very fine Lady Hillingdon roses, 1914 EASTER SALES ECLIPSED.

Although some days have passed since the Easter rush, both retailers and growers of this city have not yet quite recovered their breath from the rush of business that fairly overwhelmed each and every one of them. The weather, while cold, was bright and sunny, ideal for deliveries, and the stock that was offered the public was the best of recent years. Plants of all kinds were in the pink of condition and consequently this was undoubtedly a plant Easter, though cut flowers had a remarkable sale. Lilies are gradually sharing honors in popularity at this season with the more showy and colorful azaleas, rhododendrons and hydrangeas. In fact, all sorts of plants sold in a very encouraging manner. Large pots of tulips in red, white and yellow were disposed of in great quantities. Rambler roses were more wanted than ever before. Cut flowers, especially those that adapt themselves to the making of corsages, were in strong demand. Violets were easily favorites and the supply was not equal to the demand. Sweet peas were also fine sellers, as were roses and carnations. A large amount of funeral work was turned out at the same time and helped materially in increasing business.

NOTES.

Miss Helen Patten was one of the florists who worked all night to take care of her patrons who wanted corsages for Easter Sunday. She says she is immensely pleased the way business turned out.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman reports one of the best seasons that she has ever enjoyed. Her window, always attractively trimmed, was especially beautiful during Easter week.

Metz & Bateman, Madison avenue florists, have been doing a remarkably fine business of late. This popular firm has been kept busy with funeral work.

Schramm Brothers had to engage three extra delivery autos in order to promptly deliver all the flowers and plants bought at this popular flower shop. K.

SPECIAL STOCK MOVES BETTER.

For the past week there was some improvement in business. Saturday, April 17, and Sunday following being a fair day, there was considerable trade in the forenoon, so stock was pretty well cleaned up but at low prices. Monday opened very quiet with a rather lighter supply, but plenty of stock. Lily of the valley has been somewhat off crop and advanced in price. Lilies are plentiful and hard to move, and the same may be said of carnations. Southern jonquils are here in quantity, but it is hard to see how enough can be got out of them to pay the expressage. American Beauty roses did not rise above $25 per hundred, and few bring that. The general run of tea roses are cheap, some special stock moving better.

April 20.—This was the hottest April 20 on record, the temperature being 80 degrees in the street. The cut flower trade is much depressed but the seed and plant lines are fine.

NOTES.

G. E. M. Stumpp, of Fifth avenue and 58th street, is going to open a store at Southamption, N. Y., this summer. This is one of the most fashionable resorts of Long Island. Mr. Stumpp's well-known ability is sure to make this venture a success.

Richard Vince, lately superintendent of a large estate at Savannah, Ga., is spending a few weeks in this city and vicinity. He will accompany C. H. Totty to California, and later intends to visit Australia.

It is understood that P. J. Smith, successor to John I. Raynor, will soon remove to 131 West West 28th street, the store just vacated by Traendly & Scheneck.

The throwing into a receivership of the Greenhut department store affected some of the wholesale florists but it is hoped that they will eventually be paid.

Peter F. McKenny had recently a fine decoration at one of the country clubs in an up-river town. The details were attended to by Arthur Merritt.

Traendly & Schenck are now well established in their new store, 436 Sixth avenue, and trade is following them.

There will be a meeting of the stockholders of the New York Cut Flower Exchange, May 1, to select directors.

M. A. Bowe had five or six wedding decorations in Easter week as well as much other good business.

J. K. Allen is now in his new store, 118 West 28th street, and business has started out well.

A. F. F.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—C. H. Hollied, florist, of Eldora, Ia., has purchased property in this city. He has been offered the position of landscape gardener for the public park system, and will probably establish his home here.

BOSTON, MASS.—Beginning Thursday, April 22, and continuing every Thursday afternoon at 3 p. m. until July 1, the management of the committee on gardens of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold a series of meetings at the Arnold Arboretum.

STORM FAILS TO STOP EASTER TRADE.

Reports on Easter trade are encouraging. On the whole the returns show that the volume of business was equal to a year ago, and here and there an enthusiastic report is to be had, that it was even better. A snowstorm which broke over the city about 5 p. m. the day before Easter put a severe check to the retail trade for the evening. On the following morning, about 9 o'clock, the snow was pretty well turned into rivulets, and people came out to patronize the florists. In the plant line red and pink azaleas were in the lead. Stock was well cleaned up with the exception in some stores of expensive plants that retailed for $5 each and upward. There was a good demand for first-class crimson ramblers and roses of that type of newer varieties, but only one or two retailers had enough stock to supply the demand. In the cut flower line, the demand for violets was even better than a year ago, and many of the retailers sold out on Saturday and orders for additional supplies were telephoned to Rhinebeck and other near-by places. Corsage bouquets sold well, and hundreds were made up by the retailers. Combination bouquets made up in lily of the valley, sweet peas and orchids sold well. Competition for Easter business this year was keener than ever. A number of small stores were opened to catch trade during the week, but notwithstanding the number catering to the demand the sales of the regular retailers showed no curtailment. On Sunday morning the demand for automobiles and wagons for delivery service was heavy.

NOTES.

During the week of March 29-April 3 the garden committee of the Albany Woman's Club took charge of the sale of one cent packets of seeds to the school children. The seeds were supplied by Louis H. Schaefer & Son, 102 Hudson avenue, whose facilities were at the disposal of the committee for the week. The club has divided the gardening competition into 16 classes to include, individuals and schools, plants, flowers and vegetables. In July Miss Virginia Hastings, superintendent, will visit each child who bought seed and in August she will visit each garden. In September a committee of three from the club will visit the gardens selected by Miss Hastings as the most promising and from these the committee will select the prize winners. The sale of the seeds, it has been decided by the club, shall continue through April.

Where is Louis Caranzales? This is the question that several wholesalers and growers in this section are asking. Louis disappeared from the city at noon on Easter, owing the growers and one wholesaler from $50 to $204 each, hence the anxious questioning.

Caranzales a few days before Easter rented a vacant store at 8 South Pearl street and was able by his plausible arguments about being backed by his father, to secure stock on credit. He did business, for he sold azaleas for which the other retailers were getting $4 and $5 apiece for $1.25 and $1.50. He was anxiously sought on Sunday, but could not be found and has not been seen hereabouts since.

Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, reported that sweet peas, orchids and American Beauties led in the cut flower line with him. Of lilies the trade took 1,000 pots and the stock of 400 azaleas was cleaned out in short order. The storm of Saturday evening brought a sharp halt to the demand from the retailers.

John M. Tracey, brother of Edward P. Tracey of the Rosery, and Thomas F. Tracey of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, has opened a retail store at 6 Clinton avenue. Mr. Tracey was formerly gardener at the executive mansion.

H. E. Van Wie, who conducts a retail store at 121 Northern boulevard, will retire from business on May 1. No successor is announced.

CITY BEAUTIFUL CAMPAIGN OPENS.

With Middlesex hall crowded to its capacity with visitors, numbering in thousands, inspecting a floral display never equaled in this city, the Lowell Board of Trade and the Middlesex Women's Club opened the local campaign for a city beautiful. The exhibits of flowers were magnificent and the display of nursery stock extensive, far exceeding the most sanguine expectations of the promoters, and the exhibitors have practically agreed to make plans at an early date for another flower show next year on a much larger scale. A feature of the evening session was an illustrated lecture by S. Wales Dixon, superintendent of recreation for the city of Hartford, Conn., his subject being, "Recreation in Hartford." In showing his lantern slides, nearly 100 in number, he presented the growth of the park system in that city, not only for the recreation of children, but also the enjoyment of the grown-ups.

The exhibits were numerous, varied and of uniform excellence in both quality and arrangement. Among the exhibitors were the following:

Florists and growers—John T. Gale, Tewksbury; Whittet & Co., Lowell; J. L. Kenney of Whittet & Co., Lowell; Frank P. Putnam, Pleasant View Gardens, North Tewksbury; Backer & Co., Billerica Centre; Albert Roper, Tewksbury; Morse & Beals, Lowell; Harvey B. Greene and his gardener, Francis Moriarty, Lowell; L. E. Small, Tewksbury; Patten & Co., Tewksbury; J. K. Chandler & Sons, Tewksbury; Robert P. Christofferson, South Lowell; John S. Haynes estate, Lowell; Shepard's Gardens Carnation Co., Lowell. Nurserymen — James J. McManmon, Brookside Nurseries, Dracut; George B. Wright, Robin Hill Nurseries, Chelmsford. H. T.

GREEN BAY, WIS. — The Meier-Schroeder Co. will move May 1 to more commodious quarters at 119 North Washington street.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, with President P. A. Chopin in the chair, was held in the Association of Commerce rooms, Thursday, April 15, and plans were made for the flower show which will be held in the Athenaeum, May 6-9, these dates being decided upon following a conference with women connected with the home garden movement of the Federation of Women's Clubs. President Chopin explained to the women that the florists were willing to give the show, provided they found that there was to be co-operation by the public. He promised the help of the florists to the home garden movement in the way of advice regarding planting and said that the object of the flower show is to help the city beautiful movement. Persons dealing in articles to hold flowers, such as hanging baskets, and other articles used in decoration, may participate in the show. H. Mische, who took space, stated that he desired to permit the children at Thomas J. Semmes school to use it for their exhibit. He was given permission and President Chopin stated that the florists were especially anxious to interest the school children and will set aside Saturday of the exhibition period for their attendance at the show. Mrs. J. Michaelis, president of the ward clubs of the home garden movement, pledged the co-operation of the women. A special meeting will be held April 29 at headquarters, Association of Commerce hall.

NOTES.

This city never looked gayer than at the present time. After a long, steady, cold winter, just above freezing point, vegetation having received a good rest, the warm weather came on, and roses and geraniums put forth their flowers by the thousands, pansies, phlox, and verbenas, with other annuals vying with each other to share in the honor of making the "Crescent City" a garden of flowers.

Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., and the Kenner Street Railway Co. came to an amicable arrangement over the right of way through the former's property.

FUNERAL WORK HELPS MARKET.

The demand here the past week has been spasmodic; some days good, and others very quiet. There has been quite a lot of funeral work which used up considerable stock, and weather being so fine that it created a good demand for corsages. Violets are about gone with the hot weather. Tulips and daffodils are in good supply at two cents, roses vary from two to six cents, and carnations bring from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Some fine snapdragon is in and brings from five to eight cents, but it finds very slow sale.

NOTES.

L. S. Donaldson Co.'s greenhouses are filled again with ferns and bedding plants after the Easter rush.

The greenhouses at the outskirts of town have put on a spring appearance with bedding and blooming plants.

Cal Rice, of Rice Bros., has returned from a fishing trip to Knapp, Wis., with 42 "speckled beauties."

H. B. Whitted has attractive window displays and has been very busy with other work.

F. B. Sargeant, successor to W. S. Hall, Osage, Iowa, called on the trade last week.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

VISITED CHICAGO: William Emerson, of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade April 21 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.

MT. PLEASANT, MICH.—Harris Bros. Seed Co., although less than one year in business, report orders to the number of 42,000 since January 1, 1915.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., has opened a branch at 706 Hennepin avenue, in charge of E. J. Kiekenapp and O. V. Sherpy.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS has been set aside by the Canadian government to provide seed grain for settlers in those districts of Alberta and Saskatchewan where crops were a failure this year.

A BILL has been introduced in the Kansas legislature providing for scales on sidings at stations on all railroads where 100 or more cars of seeds have been shipped annually during the last five years.

THE 1914 Canadian alfalfa crop occupied 90,315 acres and yielded 218,560 tons, valued at $3,095,600. The clover and hay crop occupies eight million acres, giving a yield of 10 million tons, valued at $145,999,000.

NEW YORK.—All the seed stores are now very busy and nearly all of them working over time. Wet and cool weather for a time retarded business, but conditions are now more seasonable. There is quite a demand for hardy shrubs.

LEWISTOWN, MONT.—The Barteldes Seed Company, Lawrence Kan., has brought suit against the Montana Hardware Company to recover $750, representing the profit it alleges it would have made if the defendant had fulfilled a contract to ship a carload of timothy to that city last year, the agreed price being 5 cents per pound.

As predicted in these columns a couple of times, the onion set market went all to pieces. From the south, where business is over, trade prices as low as 50 cents per bushel have been made and some retail seed stores are running big daily paper advertisements offering red sets as low as 10 cents per quart.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—The rapid growth of the Rudy-Patrick Seed Co. is evidenced by the fact that its present floor space is approximately 100,000 square feet, with facilities for loading and unloading four cars a day, as compared with a floor space of only 13,000 square feet at the time of its incorporation in 1911.

MAYSVILLE, KY.—The erection of a warehouse here is contemplated by J. C. Everett & Co., seedsmen.

LARIMORE, N. D.—B. Ford has purchased the M. & M. Seed Company, formerly owned by J. H. Magoris.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—W. J. Wood and E. Beasley have formed the Wood-Beasley Seed Co., succeeding the Diamond Seed Co.

LEXINGTON, KY.—The Goodloe Seed Co., organized by G. C. Goodloe, formerly connected with the Central Kentucky Blue Grass Co., is specializing in field seeds.

Japanese Bulb Freight Rates.

The following prevailing rates on lily bulbs from Japan via Seattle are the same as they were in 1914: All rail, New York Central delivery, running time about 14 to 16 days. Carload rate, $1 per 100 pounds. The A. H. S. S. Co. quotes a rate of $2 per 100 pounds, via Panama Canal direct to New York. The running time via the canal is reported to be 21 to 25 days.

Illinois Seed Law.

Curtis Nye Smith, commenting on the proposed Illinois seed law, house bill 593, to which reference was made in our issue of April 17, says this bill is a copy, with certain added features, of the old Iowa type of law which has been discarded in recent legislation. Moreover, the law contains some provisions which are so entirely impossible and unreasonable that it can not be enforced, making the bill clearly unconstitutional. The bill has been improperly drawn, there being serious conflict between various sections. The agricultural committee of the house ought to report this bill unfavorably without the slightest hesitation. Mr. Smith also urges Illinois seedsmen to rally to the support of George S. Green, Illinois State Correspondent of the American Seed Trade Association, in presenting arguments before the committee. This bill, he continues, must have attention, even at the expense of the seedsmen's time and trouble.

Mr. Smith further calls attention to the "Principles of Seed Legislation," which the legislative committee of the Association of Official Seed Analysts has just issued, copy of which can be secured from Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., chairman of the legislative committee. These principles absolutely contradict the unreasonable provisions of the Illinois bill and much forceful argument can be made of them if properly brought out.

Warranty and Liability in Sale of Seed.

The weight of authority seems to be, the Court of Civil Appeals of Texas says, in American Warehouse Company versus Ray (150 Southwestern Reporter, 763), that where seeds of a certain family are sold and represented to be of a certain variety of that family, which would in their natural development produce crops of greater value than would seeds of the same family which were delivered, that the purchaser can recover not alone the difference between the value of the seeds delivered and those contracted, but the difference between the value of the crops produced from the seed delivered and the value of the crops that would have been produced from the seed contracted. The rule would obtain whether the warranty was expressed or implied. "A dealer who sells an article describing it by the name of an article of commerce, the identity of which is not known to the purchaser, must understand that the latter relies upon the description as a representation by the seller that it is the thing described; and this constitutes a warranty." In the case before the court the law implied a warranty from the representation of the seller that the seed were of a certain kind, and that implication could not be set aside by testimony of a custom and usage of trade, which was not known to the buyers. It would present a singular proposition of law if a dealer in seeds should contract to deliver one kind of seed and should actually deliver an entirely different seed, and then escape liability on his implied warranty by proof that dealers in seed had adopted a rule or custom not to be bound by any implied warranty. Such a custom would be in contravention of law and justice, and would be null and void.

J. L. ROSENBERGER.

New York, April 20.—Cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 70 cents to $1.35 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 15 cents to 20 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00. Lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to 75 cents.

Champion Tomato Raiser of Northern States

Washington, D. C.—Miss Eloise Parsons, of Clarinda, Ia., is the young woman whose record in the department of agriculture's garden and canning clubs was the best of the thousands made by members in the 33 northern states. Miss Parsons obtained a yield of 5,18 pounds of tomatoes from her tenth-acre plat. Her costs were $15.61, and her net profits were $115.57. Her costs cover every item of expense in raising the crop, including rent of land, her own time (estimated at 10 cents an hour), fertilizers and sprays.

Pots and Earth Bands.

Intensive gardening requires the use of either pots or earth bands for plant production. The earth bands are crowding the old clay pots pretty hard in some sections. There is no question that earth bands have advantages. To those who never used any, it may be sufficient to say that earth bands are either round or square paper divisions, placed either on a greenhouse bench or hot bed bottom, and then filled with earth to receive the plants. When the real bands are used, which are bottomless, a bottom of building paper or newspapers are laid first and the bands set up on this bottom and filled with soil. The round or square paper pots have their own bottom, but at first it pays to furnish even these a separate paper bottom to prevent plants rooting down through too easily. Where very heavy plants are desired, no doubt the square forms are better, as they contain so much more ground to feed the plants than the round patterns. Cheapness of first cost is the main attraction. Second is the saving of time in the field—no carting back of pots as the papers are either planted with the plants or torn off and destroyed.

For very early tomatoes there is nothing better than some square form. We have used thousands of old sorted strawberry baskets for this purpose. They have just the right size to produce a heavy plant in bloom and some fruit set. However, for melons and cucumbers, we prefer square sods to anything else. We get better results. These plants can stand no disarrangement of their roots, hence, must not be disturbed. Next to sod we prefer clay pots. Given a sunny day, the last of May or first of June, one hour in the field will tell the story of success or failure with melons. If, after planting, they resist one hour they are "all right," if they wilt they are worthless. We have never failed with sod, but we have seen patches out of wooden boxes and paper bands go down completely in trying weather. As before stated in these notes we rely a great deal on shallow plant benches and a stout knife. The plants are set check-rowed, and cut into square blocks before they interlock, and that way most of our hardier subjects are produced more cheaply than any other way.

Soils and climate vary greatly and so do operators in different parts of our country and each man must experiment to some extent for himself and adopt a system adapted to his needs.

MARKETMAN.

Summer Treatment of Greenhouse Soil.

However much authorities may differ as to the cause of decreased yields of cucumbers and tomatoes under intensive greenhouse culture, the trouble is always associated with high organic and water contents as well as high temperature of soil, and usually such a decrease is certain, according to W. J. and S. N. Green in Bulletin 281, issued by the Ohio agricultural experiment station, Wooster, dated January, 1915.

Reports obtained by investigators tend to show that the cucumber is as sensitive as the tomato to the conditions prevailing in old well-manured greenhouse soils, if not more so. Haskins* attributes the decrease in yields, after the first two or three seasons, to some physiological cause brought about by mal-nutrition or over-fertilization, and believes it to be directly due to an accumulation of soluble plant food, rather than to fungus or bacterial troubles. Extremely heavy applications of manure and commercial fertilizers were given soils under investigation, with the invariable result that trouble soon resulted if the soil was not renewed for the cucumber crop. The water soluble constituents of abnormal soils are shown to be three times those of normal hot house soils. To remedy this trouble, thorough drainage is recommended and the replacing each year of a third to one-half of the old soil with fresh.

In an article in the Journal of Agricultural Science of October, 1912, Russell and Petherbridge conclude that the sickness of greenhouse soils, as effecting the cucumber crop is due to low bacterial efficiency as well as to accumulation of insect and fungus troubles. The treatment recommended is partial sterilization by steam or antiseptics, which by destroying protozoa, facilitate the activity of useful bacteria.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

GOVERNOR WALSH of Massachusetts has designated Saturday, April 24, as Arbor day.

KOSHKONONG, MO.—The Co-operative Orchard Co. is developing 2,300 acres of land near here for the purpose of peach growing.

THE centennial celebration of the Stark Nurseries and Orchard Co., Louisiana, Mo., established by Judge Hart Stark in 1816, will occur next year.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Arbor day was celebrated Friday, April 2, and 100 trees were planted at Fairground park by the North St. Louis Businessmen's Association.

VISITED CHICAGO: Henry B. Chase, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, Chase, Ala., who reports a good volume of business with prices too low.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—The board of trustees of Missouri Botanical Garden applied to the circuit court for leave to use $100,000 of funds in its hands to erect a planthouse in Shaw's Garden.

BOISE, IDA.—Instructions were given the state horticultural inspector, April 10, to immediately go into the field and commence the active work of inspection, by the state horticultural board.

MADISON, WIS.—Members of the state board of agriculture appeared before the assembly committee on agriculture, April 1, and spoke against the administration bill creating a state department of agriculture to take over the functions and work of the state boards of agriculture, immigration, live stock sanitary department, office of state inspector of apiaries, and office of state veterinarian.

COLUMBUS, O.—Establishment of a municipal nursery is proposed by Councilman William J. Lucks, who will introduce an ordinance in council authorizing the organization. Its purpose will be to cultivate trees and shrubs for city streets and parks and municipally-owned property. It is proposed to appropriate $5,000 for maintenance of the nursery, which, Lucks suggests, be started on the workhouse farm southwest of the city. Workhouse prisoners will be employed.

Diseases of Evergreens.

The diseases of evergreens are comparatively few, and, as a general rule, mostly confined to a few species, and restricted probably to certain conditions of atmosphere and soil, according to A. H. Hill, Dundee, Ill., in a talk given before the North Shore Horticultural Society, Lake Forest, Ill., January 15, 1915. A common source of disease is that of an imperfectly drained soil. To be sure, evergreens have some insect enemies, but these are few indeed compared with the myriads of insects preying upon our deciduous trees and shrubs. The most common of the pests usually found upon evergreens in this locality are bagworms, borers, plantlice and scale insects. Most of these pests can be easily controlled through the use of proper spray mixtures, such as kerosene emulsion, whale oil soap and nicotine washes, applied at the proper season. Insect injury is most apparent and severe following a hot dry season like the summer just passed.

Nursery Stock Freight Rates.

We are advised by the Interstate Commerce Bureau Co. that the freight rates on nursery stock will be advanced 25 to 30 per cent, effective June 1, 1915. It is suggested that the advance should be protested as the transportation companies are likely to make a further advance next year, being disposed to take advantage of interests not protected by competent traffic managers as are all important branches of trade like the packing and steel industries. The interstate commerce commissioners and classification committee consider the following factors when making a decision:

1. Value of the commodity as a rate basis.
2. Competitive commodities.
3. Different stages.
4. Non-competitive commodities.
5. Market value of commodities.
6. Social considerations.
7. Cost of service as a rate basis.

Hill's Specimen Evergreens For Landscape Planting

THESE trees are all perfect specimens, having good roots owing to frequent transplanting. Always freshly and carefully dug. No extra charge for Ball and Burlap. To satisfy the increasing demand for trees to give quicker results, a large portion of our Nursery is devoted to growing of Specimen Evergreens to be handled with Ball and Burlap. This stock is all grown in wide rows with plenty of room to develop both root and top. Each tree is staked to insure symmetrical growth and at regular intervals throughout the growing season trimming and pruning is done by men of long experience in this line. We keep this stock on the move also, transplanting every two years, as a root system can be developed in no other way, an in Evergreens roots are the basis of success.

Window Boxes - Hanging Baskets

The Window Box.

The filling of boxes with growing plants for the decoration of the window ledges or balconies of city residences is an important branch of the business, and one that should receive earnest consideration by the florist. It is a business that can be worked up and grows with its own impetus as it becomes general, two or three houses decorated in a block, inducing others to follow. Every new box helps the work along, Mrs. Smith sees Mrs. Brown's windows decorated, gets interested, and probably follows suit. Many persons who have the matter put up to them in a proper way, an appeal being made to their civic pride in helping to make the "city beautiful," will order the work done. While most people agree that boxes are things of beauty and give life and color to the city streets, yet they hesitate to do their part in the work on account of the expense or because of the trouble of watering and keeping the plants fresh while they are away in summer. Most of these objections can be met and overcome by explanation; medium priced boxes are suggested, with a system of watering and caring for plants by the month at moderate price, whether the house be closed or open.

Those who keep boxes filled the year around, are rapidly changing from the wooden receptacle to the more expensive, and at the same time permanent, terra cotta and concrete boxes, which are furnished in a number of sizes and designs that are of themselves very ornamental. They are quite heavy, but after being once placed, can be filled in position without rehandling. Some galvanized iron boxes, with false bottoms which contain a reservoir for water that is fed to the roots of the plants through sponges, are said to require little attention, and are found very practical.

On account of its low cost, the wooden, bark covered box is most favored. This should be at least six inches inside measurement in width and the same in depth, in sizes up to three feet in length; larger sizes should be seven to eight inches in width and depth. It is best when boxes are to be six feet in length or over, to fill the space with from three to four foot boxes, which when in place look like one long box. Boxes that flare out at the top, the front board slanting out, making the width from two to three inches wider at the top, give much needed additional room for a row of small plants or vines. The matter of drainage by providing holes in the bottom of the wooden boxes is not considered necessary, for as a rule the plants suffer for lack of water, rather than too much.

Good rich soil is essential to success in these window gardens, where plants are so crowded together that they are apt soon to become rootbound. Bone meal in generous measure, mixed with soil, provides nutriment as the plants exhaust the manure and other foods. Liquid manure, or water in which manure has been soaked, is beneficial when the plants become rootbound.

The filling of these boxes requires quite a little knowledge, and is best trusted to one who has had considerable experience. Almost any one can plant a few geraniums and vines in a box, send it home and let it go at that. To give satisfaction and get the best results, however, such orders should be looked into carefully. Some customers express preference for this or that plant or wish their boxes filled like Mrs. Brown's, where the situation is full sunshine nearly all day long, while their's is the shady side of the street. It is best to explain this and get the order with permission to use your best judgment.

Where customers want to be first and last, and do not mind the expense, start with pansies about April 1, follow on May 15 with geraniums and vines or with marguerites in the back and geraniums in front. About the first to the middle of August, when the geraniums are nearly bloomed out, plant Scott ferns with centers of Dracæna terminalis. With good rich soil these will make a splendid growth until the frost, when it is time for the boxwood or evergreens for the winter campaign. As a rule the best effect in using geraniums for the sunny situations, is to keep one color to a box. A double row of small plants is better than the use of larger stock, as they produce more blooms, and do not become as straggly as the older larger plants. Ivies or periwinkle (Vinca variegata), are the best vines; other soft-wooded plants, such as German ivy (senecio) glechoma, or ground ivy, and Kenilworth ivy, are also useful, but are not so robust or hardy as the English ivy or perwinkle. Ivy-leaved geraniums, with their trailing habit are also good. The best geraniums are Alphonse Ricard, orange scarlet; S. A. Nutt, crimson; Beaute Poitevine, salmon pink, and the Double White La Favorite.

WINDOW BOX, CHICAGO OFFICE BUILDING. 1914.

For the shady side of the street, or to follow the geraniums when they have bloomed out in mid-summer, particularly in the hot city streets, there is nothing that will prove as satisfactory as the Scott ferns in connection with dracænas or highly colored crotons and bushy variegated vincas or English ivies for vines.

Boxes for the porch or veranda, which are so popular in the suburban streets, can be made larger than for the narrow window ledges. They should rest on strips of wood on the porch floor outside the railing. Much the same stock as for the window boxes will do well, but room is allowed for greater variety. In connection with Scott or Boston ferns are Pteris argyræa. Asparagus Springeri is very graceful with its long drooping sprays. Tuberous begonias also bloom splendidly in shady places, lobelias and sweet alyssums brighten with their wealth of bloom over the edge and Begonia rubra is splendid with its coral blossoms, and attended with the white striped Pandanus Veitchii the color effect is fine.

In planting boxes, as said before, the best of compost soil should be used and firmly packed about the plants, leaving a half-inch to an inch from the top of the box for water, which will soon settle to leave two inches. Watering should be faithfully attended to, as neglect that will permit a drying to the point of wilting, will cause damage that will require weeks to recover. All window boxes should be looked after for a week or so after delivery, just to see that they are getting the proper attention. Many of those who are delegated to water, do not know how much to give, or water at the wrong time. A good soaking in the late afternoon or evening is best when the moisture is taken up by the plants, rather than evaporated by the hot sun if watered in the morning.

The Hanging Basket.

There is a charm all its own about a hanging basket of graceful growing plants. Suspended in a window or arch, or in the center of porch or veranda openings, with sufficient space for the spreading plants and vines, it presents a most pleasing picture and adds greatly to the decorative effect.

There are many kinds of receptacles used as hanging baskets. The round wire dish form being probably the oldest and most frequently seen comes in various sizes from 8 to 12 inches, or even wider, in diameter. It is painted green or galvanized, and being of large mesh, has to be lined with green sheet moss to keep in the soil. When filled with plants and vines it makes a very pretty ornament. This form is much used for cemetery lots.

The terra cotta log suspended with brass chains was popular years ago. This represented a hollowed out log of wood, which was painted to represent, as much as possible, the natural wood. There are many other basket patterns of terra cotta and clay which are very practical. Rustic baskets, ornamented with laurel roots and branches, over wooden boxes, make very acceptable baskets. seeming to be so in keeping with the plants. Large conch shells, fitted with chains, make unique baskets. as do the armadillo shells. Made to order baskets in form and shape to complete and carry out certain decorative effects are now made by the florists' supply men; green willow, whole and split rattan and reed are the materials used, which are stained or painted any desired color. These have zinc linings to prevent drip. Metal baskets of zinc or galvanized iron, with self watering devices, are ornamental and practical, and much is claimed for them.

Much of the success of the hanging basket depends on the filling; the soil should be of the best and the space for plants as roomy as possible; don't attempt to crowd in too many or put rank growing stock with plants that are slow to mature. An even growth is to be desired so that the basket may be uniform and symmetrical.

A list of all the plants that are available for this purpose would be very long; a few of the best are as follows: Vines—English ivy, glechoma or ground ivy, tradescantia, Kenilworth ivy, parlor or German ivy (senecio), saxafrage, vincas, green and variegated, nasturtiums, ivy geraniums, etc. For the center and body of the basket, ornamental foliage is often more serviceable than blooming plants, as when out of flower they are often unsightly. Dracænas, with their brilliant colorings, Pandanus Veitchii and some of the crotons are good centers, together with Scottii and other ferns; for blooming plants, geraniums, petunias, nasturtiums, begonias, verbenas, neurembergias, lobelias, sweet alyssum, etc.

If baskets can be kept in the greenhouse a week or so after filling, the plants become set and receive the necessary amount of water, which might not be their lot if sent home immediately after filling. The hanging basket that suffers from the want of water is not long an object of beauty. Where they can be suspended in pairs to one rope run over small pulleys, they balance; by pushing one up the other comes down to be plunged into a bucket of water. It is then raised a foot above to drain and the other goes through the same process.

WINDOW BOX, STATE BANK OF CHICAGO, 1914.

WINDOW BOX, TRIBUNE BUILDING, CHICAGO, 1914.

In this way the work is easy and there is little or no drip. Baskets filled only with Scottii ferns, if kept well watered, become very symmetrical and are much admired. All English ivies, as well as all tradescantias make very effective baskets. By judicious pinching they are kept within bounds and trained to any desired form. K.

Shasta Daisy.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please give treatment of Shasta daisy for winter bloom.

Ohio. AMATEUR.

I have not seen the Shasta daisy flowering very early in the winter months. The stools require a period of rest and freezing before they can be brought into the greenhouse; then they should be allowed to start out in a cool temperature so that they will commence their growth gradually. The temperature of the carnation houses is all these plants will stand. The best results that I have been able to obtain with perennials, is to start from seed. Sow the seed in July, transplant the seedlings as soon as large enough to handle, then when large enough, prepare the beds and plants the same as mignonette and treat the same as you would this plant, maintaining a cool temperature and keep them a little to the dry side. C. W. JOHNSON.

DOUGLAS, WYO.—The state has leased 40 acres near Sheridan for a demonstration farm. An expert horticulturist will be employed.

TAMPA, FLA.—Among the prominent visitors who attended the convention of the Florida Horticultural Society, in this city, none were better known than Dr. H. Nehrling, of Gotha, and his son, Werner Nehrling, of Orlando. Dr. Nehrling has a range in Gotha which covers several acres and his specialty is caladiums. He has over 3,000 different varieties of these plants. Werner Nehrling is superintendent of the city parks in Orlando and is one of that city rising young men.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Undesirables.

In the last few years we have heard a great deal about undesirables, especially applied to emigrants and foreigners, and very often, or too much so, is this expression applied to people who do not deserve such treatment. Some of your most undesirables have built your railroads in this country and have done a great deal to help develop this great country.

I now find that this same expression is applied to a good many retailers who absolutely do not deserve it. Just because they are not the oldest or largest retail florists' concerns does not mean that they will fill orders in poor shape or forget to pay their bills promptly. I can make a correct statement and say to you that these younger concerns in a great many cases are more businesslike and can see an opening for a new field quicker than others, as the other florists think they "have enough business, what is the use of looking for more," and send trade away from their stores, but these very same concerns are willing to receive all the orders from out of town correspondents they can get.

They sometimes wonder how the new concerns can get these orders, but they also forget that this new concern has let the public know that orders for out of town can be delivered. It was enabled to send orders all over the country and naturally retailers it sent orders to have reciprocated, for which you can neither scold nor blame them.

Remember that even you, who own the largest and best equipped retail flower shop, may have been at the start, the same kind of undesirable and yet if somebody had called you that, you hardly would have taken it good-naturedly. Of course, I realize that there are exceptions in all cases, but please do not use the word "undesirables" unless you can make good and prove something which may justify you in using your criticism.

Will someone kindly write an argument to these few lines, as I am willing and only too glad to hear what my brother florists have to say?

Enthusiasm.

There are men and women active in their sphere, whose presence is always welcome; they brighten up the atmosphere of the place, their bright cheerful faces ever beaming gladness; they are full of enthusiasm and the joy of living.

Success in any undertaking, without enthusiasm, is very doubtful, for this is the power that keeps up the pressure and has the machinery going constantly. "He's so enthusiastic," is often heard of this or that man, who doubtless was fairly bubbling over with his love for the business, and whose work was a revelation in consequence of this force. To work half-heartedly is to do little, and that not very well. To get the best results one must be in love with the work and must like the atmosphere of the shop. He is always planning to do better, to make it his best year, to get new customers and how to hold them. This spirit of enthusiasm is always to be found in the successful florist, be he grower or retailer. In working among and with the flowers, he finds so much to admire, so much in which there is sterling merit, that he cannot help being enthusiastic—"What a beautiful color, such a perfect flower in every respect—I will devote a whole house to this next season." New things, about which great claims are made by the introducers, are looked into, the urging spirit says try them, and their care and culture is watched with great interest. All the workers about a successful grower's establishment are full of enthusiasm. It is based on success, it is contagious, and in the spirit of the place, where the men are proud of their work, their success makes them enthusiastic.

Those sportsmen who succeed in certain lines, are great enthusiasts for their particular sport; the good bowler almost sleeps on the alleys; the gunner is always ready for the traps; the golfing expert thinks his game the best of all. Such enthusiasm, put into the game of selling flowers, will produce wonders, as it keeps a man's mind in his work, and he is always striving to get together the best, or to offer it in the most salable condition.

WINDOW BOX, AUDITORIUM HOTEL, CHICAGO, 1914.

Enthusiasm is the secret of success in selling. The clerk, who has a fancy or love for certain plants or flowers, will sell more of these than others of his stock; they come first to his mind, he points out their particular good qualities and is so full of their merits that he convinces his customer, and the order soon follows.

Success in this or that undertaking, the result of well planned and close application, is most gratifying; it was hard work, but the results more than justified the efforts. It is these achievements that build up the business; it makes men enthusiastic, and they take hold of the opportunities as they come along, or meet them half way or more. Enthusiasm leads men to greater things; it opens their eyes to the many improvements that can be made. For example, an auto car succeeds the wagon, while a new car supplants an old one, and so on in every department —nothing is too good, no expense too great, for the increasing business must be given every encouragement.

Practically, there are no obstacles to the enthusiastic man, for he is so filled with the spirit of advancement, going ahead by sheer force, of his former successes, that what would deter the timid or half-hearted man, is brushed aside by his faith in himself and his business.

To the man who finds pleasure in his work, much reward will come in the knowledge of what has been accomplished, and in the inspirations that are, most often, the working of a mind trained to observe. K.

THE ROSE.

Starting the Summer Houses.

Perhaps by the time this article goes to the press the growers will be jubilant over the Easter returns. We truly hope so. After reading last week's reports, it strikes us that we are in a fair way to pull off one of our real hustling business-like Easters that leaves the grower with a nice balance for a rainy day. Even if things do not turn out or come up to expectations, we do not want to lose our grip on the things that count, but to keep right on plugging and striving to have still better stock to offer and plenty of it.

Now is a good time to get the summer houses started up. Some growers find that it pays to rest up Maryland, Kaiserin, Russell and perhaps a few other varieties after the cut by running the houses cool and starting them up about April 1. The treatment for the above varieties is practically the same. We advocate rather hard pruning, and the thinning out of all small growth, leaving nothing but good, clean, strong canes. One-year-old stock should be pruned about a foot from the ground on an average; of course there may be good branching wood that would be sacrificed if one was to be exact, and prune every plant down to 12 inches; here and there a plant will naturally range a little higher, and here is where the judgment of the grower must be used to good advantage. If the beds have been run only one season, it will only be necessary to remove just a little of the surface soil, first pruning and tying everything in snugly to be out of the way. Then apply a good two-inch mulch of fairly well rotted cow manure and give the plants a good soaking. The temperature should not go below or exceed 40 degrees for a week or so, allowing plenty of air during the day at a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. No artificial heat should be used, unless the temperature should threaten to go below the figures given. On the other hand, should a warm spell of weather come, do not be afraid to air day and night. We have found that our plants have done much better letting them come right along according to the season outside; that is, a gradual increase of the temperature without the fire heat, except as stated on especial occasions. The maintaining of the proper temperature will require careful handling, especially through April and part of May north of Philadelphia; farther south, where the season is perhaps from two to three weeks earlier, and also away from the coast, the plants will be much easier to handle. One will have to fumigate frequently and syringe every bright day. Keep the mulch stirred or rubbed over, except when the growths are about an inch in length, for at this stage many growths would be broken off working around the plants. The soil should be kept fairly moist, but never soggy.

After the first heavy watering, the plants seldom require more than syringing until they begin to make foliage. Stock that has been carried over for two or more seasons should be given some fresh soil to work in. Remove about three inches of the old soil and renew with good fresh sod soil, two parts soil to one of good cow manure, with the addition of some good bone meal, allowing a handful to each square foot of surface. This topping should be turned several times before taking it into the houses, and should be packed quite firmly. Remember there will be lots of feeding roots exposed when removing the old soil, so the mulch should be prepared ahead of time in order that no time is lost in refilling. Use as much help as possible to wind up this work quickly. If the soil is found to be baked, or hard to remove, it can be loosened up with light crowbars. We have found a handy tool for this purpose, is to take a five-foot length of one-inch steam pipe and have a blacksmith weld a hard point on one end; it is light and one can easily loosen up the soil all through the beds without injury to the plants or roots, removing the loosened soil by hand and leveling the surface with small hand cultivating tools. It is well to make a note of it though, that the most harm done to the plants is in allowing the roots to stay uncovered or exposed too long.

Usually after Easter the plants have a general cut-down appearance, especially if cropping has been the rule. It will be found much easier to tie a house in this condition than after the new growths are started, so don't let this get by you. And during the changeable weather, usually at this this time, look after the ventilating very carefully; it will keep one on the go to head off the sudden drops and rises of the temperature inside. Another thing of great importance at the change of the season is the banking of the fires as early as possible, and to keep ahead of the green fly, which is worse at this time than at any other during the season. Only the most careful watching from now on will enable the rose grower to bring his plants through in good shape by the time firing ceases. If they should be soft and weak then there will be breakers ahead. E.

Siebrecht in California.

Perhaps one of the most notable visitors, in the interest of horticulture, to visit California in late years was H. A. Siebrecht of New Rochelle, New York. Mr. Siebrecht's mission to California was to plant the grounds for the New York state building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. He came to California a short while before Christmas and worked hard there for three months seeing that everything was done right to give the correct setting for his state building. Having satisfied himself that everything was doing nicely he came to make a short visit to southern California on his return homeward. He stopped in Los Angeles three days and spent one day at the exposition in San Diego. While in Los Angeles he was shown the different nurseries, greenhouses, etc., at Eastlake Park, and large gardens, by G. E. Elster of the Roeding & Wood Nursery, and the writer. One afternoon was spent at Busch's sunken gardens, at Pasadena, which seemed to be of great interest to him. At no time of the year could Mr. Siebrecht see the gardens in finer display. The orange trees were in full bloom, as were many other trees, and the roses, many annuals and perennials in gay colors made the landscape of especial beauty. He was quite taken with the magnificent blooms on the rose bushes right out in the open. In some instances he stated that they could do no better in the east under glass. The illustration shows Mr. Siebrecht on the left and Mr. Elster on the right, looking down into one of the sunken gardens.

Accompanied by G. E. Elster (on right) of Roeding & Wood Nursery Co., Los Angeles at Busch Sunken Gardens, Pasadena.

The nurseries visited included those of Roeding & Wood, Howard & Smith, H. W. Turner, and Ed. H. Rust. He had nothing but words of praise for the different concerns as to their variety of stock, the methods of handling, shipping and the propagating. We all hope to see Mr. Siebrecht back in California in the near future.

RULES OF THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

The Society of American Florists, through its executive board, shall control all features of the trade exhibition and the secertary, shall act as superintendent of the exhibits, and with an advisory committee of three, shall have general charge of all details of the annual exhibition.

Exhibition space shall be designated in square feet. The charges for space shall be as follows:

Minimum charge $20.00
Flate rate, per square foot....40 cts.

Exhibition space shall be limited to six feet six inches above the floor, except for plants, greenhouse structures or other exhibits which necessarily extend to a greater height. Plant and cut flower exhibits may be also built up to any height authorized by the superintendent. All exhibits, except as above specified, which extend above six feet six inches in height, shall be charged 20 per cent. additional, on the exhibit. All signs must be kept within the space limit. Where tables are against the wall, wall space up to six feet six inches above the floor and of the length of the table, will be furnished the exhibitor without extra charge. Wall exhibits extending above this height will be charged for the additional space, at wall space rates. Signs on the wall or elsewhere, shall not extend higher than six feet six inches above the floor in any exhibit.

Wall space, without floor or table space, or when exceeding in dimensions the amount allowed with the exhibition space, shall be charged as follows:

Minimum charge $8.00
Flat rate, per sq. foot.....15 cts.

Wall exhibits shall not project over one foot from the wall.

Exhibition classes to be arranged as follows:

A.—Plants.
B.—Cut Blooms.
C.—Boilers and Heating Apparatus.
D.—Greenhouse Structures.
E.—Florists' Supplies (including fancy earthenware).
F.—Bulbs, Seeds and Garden Requisites.
G.—Miscellaneous.

Exhibitors showing novelties or other improved devices which they wish to have examined by the judges for such special notice or award as they are deemed worthy of, shall make an itemized entry thereof with the secretary in advance. Firms or corporations desiring their exhibits considered for award must state the name of a member of the firm or company who is a member of the S. A. F.

For exhibits deemed worthy thereof, diplomas of three grades may be given as follows: Certificate of merit, honorable mention, highly commended.

No distinction as "first," "second," "best," or "largest," or other mention indicating comparisons with other exhibits shall be made.

No award shall be made covering the quality of seeds, fertilizers, paints and other articles of such a nature on which an intelligent opinion cannot be had without a practical test.

None but flower pots conforming to the society's standards will be considered for award by the judges.

No award shall be made to exhibitors who are not members of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

All protests and complaints must be presented in writing before the close of the exhibition, and complaints or protests not so made will not be considered.

Exhibits not in position before 1:00 p. m. of the first day of the convention, may be excluded from mention in the superintendent's report or consideration by the judges, and all articles exhibited must be left in place until the close of the business session of the convention which shall be 10 o'clock p. m. on the third day.

The selling of goods by persons not having engaged space shall be prohibited unless such person or firm shall have secured a permit or license from the secretary, the same to cost not less than twenty dollars ($20).

When more than one exhibitor joins in the same space there shall be an additional charge of $20 for each additional exhibitor.

A copy of the floor plan, a reproduction of which is given herewith, showing arrangement of space for the exhibition's classes, together with complete set of rules relating to the trade exhibition. can be had upon application to John Young, superintendent of trade exhibition, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York; after July 15, in care of Daniel MacRorie, 430 Phelan building, San Francisco, Calif.

THE CARNATION.

Care of the Young Plants.

The young plants for next season's planting will need considerable attention to keep them in a good growing condition so that they will be strong branching stock when the time comes to plant them out in the field.

The earliest propagated plants that are now well rooted in 2¼ or 2½-inch pots should be potted up into 3-inch to carry them along until planting out time. This extra potting may seem like a lot of extra work, but it is necessary, and one is well repaid for it by having a nice lot of vigorous growing plants, instead of hard, woody weaklings.

P. W. Peterson.

Every day from now on will bring increased sunshine, and during the next six or eight weeks left for the young plants to remain in the greenhouse, is a period of very rapid growth; so much so that plants now in 2½-inch pots, if not shifted on, will become altogether too hard and stunted, and will be a long time in starting into growth again after being planted out in the field. Topping is one of the very important parts of the work in caring for the young plants at this time, the habit and productiveness of the plants later on, depending largely on the careful attention given to this work while the plants are young. The aim should be for well branched plants before setting them out in the field. Allow the young plants to stretch out a little, so that it will not be necesary to top back too close to the soil; leave about three joints above the soil for the first breaking, and it is very important that the topping be done evenly, so that the growth of the plants will be even throughout the season. See that the young plants are kept free of weeds; clean them out before they have a chance to choke the life out, and start up the disease among the plants. Any propagating still to be done should be attended to without any further delay. Two or three weeks from now the weather conditions may be such that it will be very much more difficult to get a good stand of cuttings, and as soon as the cuttings are rooted, pot them up into 2½-inch pots. Cuttings taken from the sand now and potted into 2½-inch, will not need to be potted again before planting out.

The routine work in caring for the flowering plants needs close attention right along. The soil in the beds is now heavily matted with roots, so that the plants will be greatly benefited by a light mulch of well rotted manure and soil, but do not mulch heavily at one time; put on enough to cover up the roots that are pushing through the top of the soil, and when the plants have taken care of this, a dressing of pulverized sheep manure can be put on. Then if it is the intention to carry the plants along into the hot weather, a later mulch can be put on. It is very much better for the plants, to mulch lightly and often, than it is to put on a very heavy mulch at one time. The plant growth in the spring of the year is very rapid, and a heavy mulch will cause the plants to make a heavy grassy growth at the expense of flowers. Overfeeding will also cause the flower stems to be brittle so that they snap off at the joints with the least touch.

Now that we are getting more sunshine, and the plants can be given more air, they should be given an occasional syringing to keep the red spider in check, for if this pest is permitted to get a firm hold on the plants, it means the ruination of both the plants and flowers, and they increase very rapidly as the weather becomes warmer. The plants being heavy in growth, it is necessary to syringe early in the day to give them a chance to dry out again before night. Ventilating the houses is one of the important parts of the routine work, especially so at this season of the year when sometimes we get several different kinds of weather in one day. Be careful not to allow the temperature to rise above the mark before opening up early in the morning, nor allow it to drop too low before lowering down in the afternoon. Most nights from this time on will be moderate enough to allow for a little crack of air to be left on with the steam heat.

To make room for the young stock, some of the flowering plants may have to be sacrificed. Select those that are falling in crop, and for which the demand is not strong. There will be a very limited call for red after this date.

C. W. JOHNSON.

J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., practically doubled the size of its glass area when it took possession of the old Chicago Carnation Co.'s greenhouses on March 1 which it has leased for a term of years. The Thompson range consists of 125,000 feet of glass and will hereafter be known as Plant 1 and the old Higinbotham place only a short distance away is practically the same size and will be known as Plant 2. Chas. W. Fisk is manager of the Thompson company and P. W. Peterson is the superintendent and will hereafter attend to both places with the assistance of William Kellson who is employed at Plant 2. The entire 250,000 feet of glass is devoted to cut flowers principally carnations and the varieties grown at this establishment are Beacon, Commodore, White Enchantress, Enehantress, White Wonder. Champion. Rose Pink Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Matchless, Princess Dagmar. Enchantress Supreme, Philadelphia, Gloria, Peerless Pink, Gloriosa, Pink Delight, Shasta, Superb, Vera, Comet, Hero and Aviator. The five last named varieties are all new seedlings that appear to be very promising and will be disseminated next season. Superb and Vera are both of a pleasing light pink color, while Comet is white, Hero, dark pink, and Aviator, intense scarlet.

A few orchid flowering sweet peas are grown and one variety in particular that is attracting much attention and of which the seed is being saved is the color of the American Beauty rose and everyone that has had the pleasure of inspecting it has been most favorably impressed with it. About 35,000 gladioli are grown and are doing nicely and Mr. Peterson expects to have a big crop of America, Mrs. Francis King and Augusta for Memorial day. Chrysanthemums are grown on a large scale also, and there are several large benches of fine healthy rooted cuttings in all the best commercial varieties on hand for their own use and for sale at wholesale. While quite a business is done in the sale of chrysanthemum cuttings and plants, the propogation of carnations is and always has been the main part of the firm's business. A visit to this establishment will find a large stock of fine rooted cuttings on hand ready to ship out as well as a nice supply of plants in the soil. Mr. Peterson says that the demand did not set in for cuttings as early as last year, but orders are very numerous now, and more are continually arriving. Plant 2 will be remodeled as early as possible, and new Kroeschell boilers will be installed this summer, and no expense will be spared to place the range in the best condition possible. The entire output of the two places is sold at wholesale direct from the greenhouses where all modern conveniences are had and a glance at daily order sheets show that their customers are pretty well distributed throughout the western and southwestern states. Superintendent Peterson is always glad to receive visitors and no matter how busy he is he always manages to show one around besides seeing them safely to their train in his new Overland automobile.

Houston, Texas.

Plans for landing the 1916 annual convention of the Society of American Florists for Houston were discussed and set in motion at a regular meeting of the Houston Florists' Club Monday night. The invitation to the national organization will be extended through the Texas State Florists' Association and an effort will be made to make it an entire Texas state affair.

A large delegation from Houston will attend the annual convention of the Society of American Florists, at San Francisco next August. Previous to that date the matter will be put before the Texas florists at the Texas convention at Fort Worth, July 12-13. Houston will ask for both the 1916 annual state convention and the 1916 national convention. T.

OBITUARY.

Andrew Washburn.

Andrew Washburn, founder of the firm of A. Washburn & Sons, florists, Bloomington, Ill., died at his home in that city, April 21, after an illness of only a few days. He was 77 years of age. He was born in New York City in 1838, but in the spring of 1866, he removed to Illinois and established the foundations of a business that has grown to large proportions. He had quite a reputation as a violet grower about 20 years ago when Marie Louise was grown so extensively in his section. For the past three years he had taken no active part in the business, the details having been turned over to his three sons, Frank L., treasurer of the Illinois State Florists' Association; George A. and Edwin. Three daughters and his widow also survive him.

Mr. Washburn was an unassuming and straight-forward man in all his dealings, and was the soul of honor in his business life. His death at a ripe old age was the rounding out of a typical career of honor and usefulness.

The Late Carl Hirsch.

Carl Hirsch.

Carl Hirsch, proprietor of Hillsdale Floral Park, Hillsdale, Mich., landscape gardener for the New York Central lines, in charge of the gardening of that railroad between Toledo, O., and Chicago, and former president of the American Association of Railroad Gardeners, having been elected to that position at the second annual meeting of that organization at Niagara Falls, N. Y., September 9, 1908, died at his home in Hillsdale, April 23, aged 50 years. He was taken seriously ill at Chicago with intestinal trouble, while on his way to Darlington, Ia., to attend the funeral of a relative, and although physicians at Chicago wished to operate, he refused to consent until he reached his home. Gangrene had set in by that time, however, and three operations failed to save his life.

Carl Hirsch was a native of Chemnitz, Saxony, and was educated in his native land, learning the art of landscape gardening there. He worked at his trade in Leipsic, Nuremberg and other European cities, removing to the United States in 1888. He had lived in Hillsdale for 20 years, and during 19 years of that period conducted a greenhouse there. At the time of his death his range comprised about 30,000 square feet of glass, and is one of the most modern and prosperous in southern Michigan. A nursery to supply shrubs for the railroad plantings was also located at Hillsdale, and under his supervision. Owing to his duties as gardener for the railroad, his wife has been of great assistance in the successful management of the greenhouses, and both she and a daughter, Pearl, have the sympathy of a host of friends in their bereavement.

Mr. Hirsch belonged to the Masonic order, the Odd Fellows, the Foresters, the Knights of the Maccabees and the Knights of Pythias. Funeral services were held Tuesday, April 27, and the number of floral tributes at his bier bore witness to the high esteem in which he was held. J. H. E.

NO COMPLAINT ON BUSINESS.

Business last week was good. Design work kept us all busy and cut flowers and corsages seemed more in demand than usual. Carnations are still filling the markets. Outdoor daffodils and tulips are now coming in and are selling well. Baskets of pansies, English daisies, and forget-me-nots are being sold by all the small stores.

NOTES.

The Providence Cut Flower Store opened at 356 Westminster street last Saturday, selling cut flowers at very low prices.

Bourgaise & Sons of the Hoxie Nurseries, have a crop of 150,000 daffodils to dispose of. These are all outside.

Henry Patrie is on the sick list.

Visitor: H. Kurth, of Reed & Keller Company, New York. H. A. T.

Joliet, Ill.

A. C. Rott reports that business is as good as can be expected, and that he has been quite busy with funeral work. A nice business has been established during the seven years he has been located here, and new customers are being steadily added to his list. Mr. Rott has rented one of the Thompson greenhouses for his own use, where he keeps his palms and other decorative stock that he uses in his large decorations.

Mrs. Joseph Labo has about 30,000 feet of glass devoted to roses, carnations and bedding plants, the output of which is sold at retail direct from the greenhouses and the store down town. Heaton Nichols is acting as manager, and everything is going along nicely and business is as good as can be expected.

P. W. Peterson, superintendent of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., is sporting a new Overland touring car, which comes in handy in making the trips to and from the greenhouses. The writer is indebted to Mr. Peterson and Mr. Rott, who so kindly escorted him about the city during his recent visit.

Larson & Goranson have about 10,000 feet of glass devoted to carnations and bedding plants, and a new concrete office building now adorns the premises. Mr. Goranson has not been feeling very well of late, but is up and around as usual.

The Carter Floral Co. always has a nicely kept establishment, and the store and conservatory set back some little distance from the street as it is, presents a very pretty and inviting appearance.

The Joliet Nurseries are having a splendid season, and Heaton Nichols and his associates are working overtime to keep up with the orders.

FICUS ELASTICA, the good old fashioned rubber plant, seems to be coming into new popularity with retail buyers.

WE have received from C. W. Johnson, secretary, proceedings of the thirteenth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, held at Indianapolis, Ind., November 6-8, 1914.

THE Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, shipped two of its well-known greenhouse boilers to Lowe & Shawyer, Uxbridge, London, Eng., April 23, each of 48,000 square feet heating capacity. A similar shipment by the same firm was made last fall.

BEACON, N. Y.—Benjamin Hammond, the well known manufacturer of insecticides and other florists' specialties, has an interesting article in the Fishkill Standard of April 17, on "New York City Fifty Years Ago," about the close of the civil war.

The Peony Crop.

Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Nurseries, Western Springs, Ill., says peonies are about 18 days earlier than last year.

Wm. A. Peterson, of Peterson's Nursery, Chicago, advises that his peonies are just 14 days ahead of last year as to the period of growth.

W. A. Rieman, Vincennes, Ind., reports that peonies in his section will be in about a week ahead of the usual time with a full crop, unless weather conditions change materially.

Sarcoxie Nurseries, Sarcoxie, Mo.—The peony season is about normal here with the outlook promising.

Proposed National Dahlia Society.

A call has been sent out by Richard Vincent, Jr., of R. Vincent. Jr., & Sons Co., for a meeting to be held at the Grand hotel, Broadway and 31st street, New York, the object being to discuss the advisability of forming a National Dahlia Society, which if organized will include in its membership, amateurs, professional gardeners and others who may be interested in dahlia culture. Among others who have signified their intention of giving their support to such a society are the following: J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; Geo. W. Kerr. of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; C. Betscher, Canal Dover, Ohio; Head's Nurseries, Bergenfield, N. J.; Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Colo.; Geo. H. Walker, North Dighton, Mass.

Women's National Agric. and Hort. Ass'n.

A very interesting conference has been arranged by the Women's National Agricultural and Horticultural Association to take place Friday, May 7, at the Museum building in the Bronx botanical garden, under the auspices of the New York Horticultural Society. Among the speakers who have already accepted are George T. Powell, president of the Agricultural Experts' Association of New York city; Arthur Dean, of the state department of education; Mr. Jarvis, of the United States bureau of education; Maurice Fuld, vice-president of Knight & Struck Co.; William C. Leming, secretary of the Northern Nut Growers' Association, and Samuel Fels, president of the Philadelphia Vacant Lots Association. The conference is to cover an interesting variety of subjects, such as vacant lot gardening, children's gardens, agricultural and horticultural training for women, some important requirements in the back to the land movement, the possibilities of nut growing in the east, perennials. roses, direct selling, etc.

An interesting feature of this year's conference will be an exhibit of members' work, ranging from garden photographs and pottery to butter and eggs and honey. Mrs. S. A. Brown, of New York, is in charge of this exhibit. The association is formed to bring together people interested in any form of agriculture and horticulture, to act as a clearing house for information on these subjects, and to help and encourage women who desire to make a living in these lines of work. Any one interested in these subjects is eligible for membership, and the association, though little more than a year old, is growing rapidly, with members ranging from Maine to California. The Bronx botanical gardens will be at their loveliest, and it is hoped that many will avail themselves of the invitation to attend the conference, which is extended to every one interested.

MISS HILDA LOINES, Chairman.

Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Trust deeds and a trust mortgage covering all of its property has been turned over to the Grand Rapids Trust Co., by the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., of that city, for the benefit of creditors. Under the direction of the trust company the business is being continued, the trustees, believing that all claims will be satisfied in full, if sufficient time be allowed to turn real estate holdings to advantage.

June Bug Warning.

The United States department of agriculture has issued a warning that May beetles, also known as June bugs, may be very destructive this year, especially in northern Iowa, southern Michigan, northern Illinois, southern Minnesota, and part of the east.

New York to San Francisco.

The transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club have arranged with Thomas Cook & Sons, tourist agents, to handle the transportation details of the club on its trip to the S. A. F. convention at San Francisco, Calif., in August. The rate is $156 round trip and includes the following service:

Pullman service New York to San Francisco as per itinerary below and hotel accommodations at Banff, Lake Louise, and Seattle as specified. Pullman reservations, going, (one-half section) and hotel accommodations will be arranged in advance. Pullman service returning, San Francisco to New York, will amount to about $20. Dining service returning will depend on what one wishes to eat.

Anyone wishing to go via the American Rockies and through Yellowstone park, can arrange for this trip which will take five days at a cost of $53.50. This includes all expenses during the five days—park hotel accommodations, buses, etc.

The entire trip New York to San Francisco and return, including the trip through Yellowstone park, will take 34 days, and will cost approximately $300 per person. Any further information will be furnished upon application to R. J. Irwin, secretary of the transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club, 108 West 28th street, New York.

"Red Devil" Manual Training Contest.

The Smith & Hemenway Co., Inc., 170 Chambers street, New York, have announced a unique prize contest. This company, after conferring with a number of manual training educators, felt that enough attention was not being paid to the possibilities of glass working, and prizes will be awarded for the largest number of articles and designs made with the aid of their "Red Devil" glass cutters. As the contest closes May 31, it is requested that enrollments be sent in promptly.

NOVELTIES ONLY IN DEMAND.

Contrary to expectations, the market during the past week was exceptionally dull. Nearly every line of stock, with the exception of a few novelties, sold slowly at low prices. Roses picked up a trifle from the previous week, but prices remained about the same. Carnations move very slowly at from $1 to $2.50 per 100, the latter price only on fancy varieties. Good Spencer peas have been in fairly good demand. Not much difficulty is experienced in disposing of them at from 75 cents to $1.50 per 100. Bulbous stock continues to be abundant, and prices are far from satisfactory. Callas move very slowly at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. English primroses and yellow marguerites are in ample supply and the prices are dropping. Mignonette is scarce, and those who have it sell it readily at from 25 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Gypsophilla elegance is being cut by a few growers and the demand is good for it, as it is rather a novelty. Pansies sell poorly. A limited amount sell for 25 cents per 100, and the rest are sold for almost any kind of an offer. The plant trade continues dull, hydrangeas and Dorothy Perkins rambler roses being about all that is now being sold for flowering plants.

NOTES.

Stephen Solari, brother of Fred Solari, of Solari and Archi, on Hanover street, died Thursday, April 22, from a combination of pleurisy and pneumonia. Mr. Solari was very popular among the tradesmen at the markets, and as a token of their sympathy a large standing wreath of Easter lilies, red roses and lily of the valley was sent by them.

John Barr, of South Natick, Mass., has built a concrete wall with a cement storeroom at the end, in order to make a grade for future construction. He is as yet undecided as to whether he shall widen the house that now stands upon the location or build two houses, each 25 feet in width.

Julius Snyder will leave the employ of Henry M. Robinson & Co. and enter as a partner with his brother, B. A. Snyder, at the wholesale florist establishment of B. A. Snyder & Co. in Devonshire street.

Saturday, April 24, was flower day at Hyde Park for the benefit of the local hospital. J. M. Cohen, salesman at the Boston Co-operative Market, supplied 25,000 carnations for the occasion.

The recent forest fire in Burlington, Mass., burned 25 cords of wood owned by Norris Comley of that town, and seriously threatened his large establishment.

Perry Green, of Quincy, Mass., is cutting very fine ixia and ranunculus, as well as a very fine strain of pansies. F. L. W.

New Wholesale House in Boston.

Patrick Welch, of Boston, Mass., will open a new commission house at 262 Devonshire street, Winthrop Square, May 3, 1915. This store is favorably located, next door to the Co-Operative market and across the street from the Exchange.

Mr. Welch has been requested by certain growers to handle their product, which he has consented to do. He will at the same time retain his interest in the Welch Bros. Co. at 226 Devonshire street, of which he is president. The business under his personal management will be conducted absolutely as wholesale. No goods sold at retail. He will be assisted by experienced salesmen whose knowledge of the wholesale cut flower business is well established. Special attention will be given to the shipment of orders on the early morning trains out of Boston, and the supply at all times of the novelties in cut flowers for which this market is famous. Store will open at 6 a. m. Telephone Main 2698.

Mr. Welch will be treasurer of the new concern and Paul Regan manager.

RETAIL CUT FLOWER MARKET DULL.

Early and profuse development of pot plants in the home, under highly favorable weather conditions, is having its effect upon florists' trade. The retail market is dull in the matter of cut flowers. Carnations are still a drag, owing to over-supply. They are being sold at 40 cents per dozen ordinarily, the choicest commanding only 65 cents. Easter lilies are said to have never been so plentiful, prices ranging from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Sweet peas are abundant, a handsome bunch costing from 25 cents to 35 cents at the leading florists. Roses and practically all other flowers are in excess of demand and prices are low. Growers in the wholesale trade report a good business, stimulated by bedding requirements both in and out of the city. Stock for Mothers' day is coming along well, and it is believed that there will be no lack of supply. It is estimated that last year between 25,000 and 30,000 carnations were sold in Columbus for this event, about half of which were grown locally. A larger business is anticipated for this year. The funeral demand remains good.

NOTES.

The Livingston Seed Company has a novel and attractive window showing a miniature house in duplicate, with rear yard exposure. One house and yard gives an object lesson in ugliness of premises that receive no care in a horticultural way. The other illustrates how the same can be made beautiful and profitable with flowers and gardening. The display as a whole is ingenious and life-like.

Plans for a seven-story office building by L. E. Stanhope, of Chicago, to be erected here for the Peters Realty Company, call for flowers boxes at the window ledges, in which flowers and vines will be grown as ornaments to the building. The improvement is estimated at $400,000, and will be the first in central Ohio to have this feature.

Ohio State University is advertising for bids on three new greenhouses to be located on the university farm, Columbus. The dimensions of the houses are: 35x76, 20x103 and 20x76. The estimated cost, after plans prepared by J. N. Bradford, the university architect, is $15,000. Bids will close May 18.

Frank S. Miller, manager and one of the owners of the Columbus Floral Company, is at a health resort in Pennsylvania, taking treatment for stomach trouble. C. C. J.

STOCK AFFECTED BY WARM WEATHER.

Very warm weather has set in and the effect on stock shows itself this early. Sweet peas are shortening up and stiffening in price. Carnations have been plentiful all week, especially the light colors. Trade among the retailers is quiet. The next event on the programme will be Mothers' day, and white carnations, it is expected, will be sold at five cents. American Beauty roses are selling at fair prices. The flowers in medium and short grades are poor in most cases. Lilacs have made their appearance but will be of short duration. Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri are selling well. Snow balls and peonies will be next.

NOTES.

Vice-President Wells of the florists' club is busy at the grounds of the Washington university. He has full charge there. Landscaping and specialties in planting out keep him very busy.

Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney had the decorations at the opening of the Lindell department store. Several thousands of carnations were given away all day to the visitors.

The parks are looming up in great shape. Planting out and everything connected therewith seems to be early this season.

It is expected that the publicity committee will see that the papers and other channels advertise Mothers' day.

The Moss Floral Co. is painting and fixing up things in general at its store and hopes to build up a good trade.

Foster, the Florist, continues his special $1 boxes and Saturday sales. He has a very attractive window display.

August and George Hartman, of Kirkwood, are still cutting some fairly good sweet peas and carnations.

Alexander Generus has given up the store known as the Metropolitan Floral Co., on Grand avenue near Olive.

Geo. H. Angermueller is selling a large quantity of his hanging baskets.

Some very good Minnetonka roses were seen at H. G. Berning's.

OUTDOOR PLANTING ON IN EARNEST.

The weather for the past week has been regular summer weather with the thermometer up in the "eighties" all the time. Bulbous stock of all kinds has been forced in and prices dropped accordingly. Roses of all kinds are in oversupply with prices ranging from one cent to six cents and very little demand. Carnations are in bad with other stock and range from 75 cents to $2 per hundred. Sweet peas bring 35 cents to 75 cents, lilies 6 cents to 10 cents and snapdragons $1 per dozen. Lily of the valley is quoted at four and five cents and in fair demand. Very few American Beauty roses are to be had at present. Outside tulips and daffodils will make their appearance this week. Arbutus is plentiful and sells at 25 cents to $2 per basket of 25 bunches. Green goods are in good supply and fine quality. Boston ferns are very scarce and in big demand at good prices. Funeral work has been very good and fairly divided with most of the florists with a few large weddings for variety. Several of the large department stores are planting their window boxes and the landscape men are all busy and using many extra men both in town and at the lakes.

HEAVY CUTS OVERCROWD MARKET.

The market is still glutted with all kinds of stock. The heavy cuts of roses, carnations and lilies continue to come in strong. The hot weather, however, is beginning to tell on the flowers. Sweet peas, too, are plentiful, but have been greatly affected by the hot weather. Bulbous stock is about out of the market for the present, but out-door lily of the valley and out-door lilacs have come in to take its place. Other offerings include callas, lily of the valley and orchids, marguerites and a few gladioli. Snapdragons have a very poor market.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell has been getting in some excellent out-door lily of the valley and lilacs.

BULBOUS STOCK DRUG ON THE MARKET.

The weather the past week has been as favorable as could be wished for, consequently, all stock has been plentiful. The bulbous supply has been a drug in the stores, and sold at all prices and in every conceivable arrangement to make them attractive and fascinating to the buyer with only fair results. Roses, carnations, sweet peas of all qualities, and in fact any kind of flowers were obtainable at almost any price. Society of all kinds is rather quiet now and everyone is thinking of moving, spring cleaning, or garden work, not giving any thought to festivities, and only funeral work, which has been rather active, has helped the store men to get rid of a portion of their stock and assist the greenhouse in clearing out all Easter surplus, enabling them to do necessary work in getting things in shape for spring trade and get the geraniums and other bedding stock ready for the call that will come about May 1 and keep them busy until July 1.

BOWLING.

The florists of Buffalo arranged among themselves to spare a few of their men to journey to Batavia, N. Y., April 21, with the bowling team and roll the final games with the Rochester florists, to see who should have the Lord & Burnham Co.'s trophy as a permanent prize. About 25 "rooters" marshaled by S. A. Anderson, made the trip and met a like number from Rochester, marshalled by George Hait, to try and keep the prize in Rochester. It was as finely a contested series as has been played on any alleys in many a day. The first game was easy for Buffalo. The second was won by Rochester by a small margin, and then the third game which was won by Buffalo by one pin, showing beyond any doubt that the two cities have very evenly matched teams and the trophy was well earned. The teams were as follows:

Rochester—W. Glenn, H. Glenn, Boland, Wyman, Allie Salter.

Buffalo—Sanford, Streit, A. Vick, R. Scott, Stuntz, Wallace.

Scorers—L. H. Neubeck and J. Thoman.

The bowling of Allie Salter for Rochester was marvelous, and his ending with 200 in the third game was what almost cost Buffalo the prize. For Buffalo Joe Streit covered himself with glory. The teams and their followers arrived in Batavia at nearly the same time, and after a dinner at the Hotel Richmond, proceeded to the alleys for the game. Rochester was cheered on by "Megaphone" Kramer and a good lot of husky followers, while Buffalo had S. A. Anderson to lead them, he having two positions, manager of the team and master of ceremonies. Charlie Vick and George Hait were the Rochester stand-bys, the absence of the "only Mike Keller" —had he been there with that cheer of his, the result might have been different. Some of the Buffalo delegation left Buffalo at noon, going to Corfu and visiting the greenhouses of David Scott, Wm. Ehman and the other growers, and going by auto from Corfu to Batavia, calling on L. H. Stroh & Sons at Batavia, who have a fine up-to-date range of glass and a fine stock of marketable flowers, well grown, and just what is wanted in a hustling little city. At Corfu they had a chance to see Scott's mammoth snapdragons and Ehman's wonderful sweet peas, which are having ready sale in Buffalo and Rochester, both growing for the trade and doing no retail business.

Visitors: Arthur Zerkman and Chas. S. Ford, both of Philadelphia, Pa.

BISON.

DETROIT, MICH.—The Norwood Rosery, 1509 Woodward avenue, will be open for business by Chas. Maynard on or about May 1.

FREEPORT, ILL.—Damage estimated at $2,000 was caused April 14, by a fire of unknown origin which destroyed several buildings on the property of John Bauscher, in the Arcade addition, in proximity to the costly greenhouses, which fortunately were saved from the flames. The greatest damage was to the stock of supplies that had been stored, consisting of floral designs, pots and seeds. The damage is fully covered by insurance.

APRIL SETS RECORD FOR HEAT.

The month of April, according to U. S. Weather Forecaster Henry J. Cox, has broken many records and upset all precedents. First, it is the hottest April recorded here, second, it is the dryest April we have had in many years and then again it is one of the rare Aprils which have seven days of temperature over 80 degrees. The warm weather has brought in the crops and stock in nearly all cases has shown the effects, especially roses. Stock, the opening of the week, was more plentiful than ever, and there was practically no business whatever to speak of. American Beauty roses are in good supply, but the better grades are in good demand at fair prices. The supply of Mrs. Chas. Russell roses is very large, and magnificent stock is now to be had at very reasonable figures. Hadley, Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, Milady, Richmond, Sunburst, Prince de Bulgaria, Double White Killarney Brilliant, Killarney Queen, Rhea Reid, Prince de Arenberg, White Killarney, Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward and My Maryland are among the offerings and no scarcity is noted in any of the varieties. Cecile Brunner or Sweetheart rose, as it is sometimes called, is more plentiful and in good demand. Carnations are arriving in large quantities and are still being sold in large lots at bargain prices, although red and dark pink at times during the week have brought fairly good prices. Lily of the valley is plentiful, but orchids are still scarce. Lilac is arriving in good supply but finds a ready market. Snapdragons of fine quality are reaching the market in large quantities and the same holds good for Spanish iris. Tulips, jonquils and Narcissus poeticus are to be had in large lots at reasonable prices but the supply does not appear to be quite as heavy. Sweet peas are seen in tremendous supply but are selling fairly well when the present market conditions are taken into consideration. Gladioli are more plentiful and some especially fine Mrs. Francis King and America are being offered. Baby gladioli made their appearance this week and are quite plentiful. Gardenias are in good supply but fresh home grown stock is none too plentiful. Lupines, daisies, candytufts, stocks, amaryllis, swainsona, pansies, trailing arbutus, calendulas, mignonette and other miscellaneous stock is seen in good supply at nearly all the stores and there is a large variety of stock to select from at very reasonable prices. Green goods from the south, especially from Florida, have suffered considerably during transit and consequently had to be sold in some instances at reduced prices. Business during the month of April will be far behind that of the same month last year but some of the dealers are inclined to think that the sales during May will be considerably better. There is a big demand for stock already for Mothers' day, especially carnations, which will be scarce, and the buyers should remember that roses and other stock will sell just as well and should order accordingly. The wise florist will place his order for stock for Mothers' day well in advance, for there promises to be a big demand and it is a question whether there will be enough stock to go around or not. Many of the dealers are refusing orders for carnations already, where roses are not included, so protect your supply by placing your orders as early as possible.

NOTES.

John Zech, senior member of the firm of Zech & Mann, was operated upon for appendicitis at the Columbus hospital, Saturday, April 24, and the last reports are that he is not out of danger but is doing as well as can be expected, which his many friends are pleased to learn. Mr. Zech was feeling none too good all last week, but was on duty at the store up to Friday morning, when he finally consented to go home and consult the family doctor, who found that an immediate operation was necessary. Allie Zech is in charge of the store during his father's illness and business is going along uninterruptedly.

Adolph Nielson, superintendent of Gullett & Sons' greenhouses at Lincoln, was a visitor at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove on Saturday, April 24.

Philip C. Schupp, the able manager at J. A. Budlong's store, got a tip from someone that he would very likely find some Indian relics if he searched for them in a certain place in Indiana, so he made a special trip down there last Sunday, April 25, and came back with three copper axes, three copper spears, and a flint 16 inches long. Mr. Schupp was pretty well pleased with his afternoon's work for the find was a valuable addition to his already large collection of relics. The writer had the pleasure of inspecting his collection and one would be surprised to find how large and varied it really is.

Percy Jones is handling large quantities of cut lilac this week in addition to his regular line of seasonable cut flowers. This hustling house is receiving a large supply of carnations and filled an order this week that called for 57 large shipping boxes of stock. This firm will have a large quantity of carnations to offer for Mothers' day, but H. Van Gelder is not worrying about how he is going to sell them then, but he and his storeman Fritz Simons are busy locating customers for the stock that is arriving now.

Eric Johnson, manager of the A. L. Randall Co.'s cut flower department, expects to experience a shortage of carnations for Mothers' day, May 9, as in former years, and goes so far as to say that if all the growers in this vicinity were in full crop, there still would not be enough flowers to supply the demand on this occasion.

The bowling team, which has been representing the trade in the North Chicago league, consisting of Allie Zech, John Huebner, Fred Price, Wm. Lorman and Peter Olsem, are scheduled to roll in the state tournament now being held at Bensinger's West Randolph street alleys, Thursday evening, April 29.

D. Andrew Papatony, proprietor of the Briggs Floral Co., 228 West Madison street, is enjoying a good transient trade, according to Steve Notes, the able manager. Mr. Papatony is still conducting the store in the Briggs House, which he recently acquired and which was formerly owned by Trefon Argeson.

President Peter Reinberg, of the county board, removed the last shovelful of dirt covering with a silver shovel when the new road at Niles, six miles of concrete construction, was christened by Miss Virginia Poehlmann with a bottle of champagne, Thursday, April 22.

George Reinberg has replaced all the old benches in 26 of his greenhouses with new ones, using concrete posts and pecky cypress in the construction. Otto Benthey and his men are busy planting the roses and are already pretty well along with the work.

Chas. Grabig, 1043 Irving Park boulevard, says that business last week was very good, and that the week's business was the best that he has experienced since Easter.

Supt. Kanst, of Lincoln park, says that with continued warm weather and some rain the spring bulb display should be in good condition for inspection this week.

Hoerber Bros. report a brisk demand for Mrs. Francis King and America gladioli. The stock they are cutting is extra fine and deserving of immediate sale.

Wm. Graff, of Graff & Dressel, was discharged from the Columbus hospital this week, where he recently underwent a successful operation for appendicitis.

W. N. Rudd is at Urbana this week delivering a series of lectures to the students in horticulture at the state university, his subject being cemetery work.

CARNATIONS

MOTHERS' DAY

Sunday, May 9.

Carnations have always been our leader, but this year our supply exceeds that of any previous year. You can get what you want here in White, Pink and Red.

Erne & Klingel were the first to offer baby gladioli this season. Cut lilac is now seen in large supply at this house, but cleans up nicely each day.

Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Nurseries, reports peonies about 18 days earlier than last year.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. will soon be in nice crop with roses, especially White Killarney and Killarney Brilliant. In speaking of White Killarney, Peter Olsem, who grows the roses for A. T. Pyfer & Co. says that Wietor Bros. have an exceptionally fine strain and that the stock Pyfer & Olsem are now growing came from them. Louis Ancaro, formerly with Hoerber Bros., and later with the Bohannon Floral Co. joined the A. T. Pyfer & Co. store force this week.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving a good supply of American Beauty roses, and their steadily increasing shipments show that their grower is again coming in crop. The demand for stock for Mothers' day promises to be quite large this year for inquiries are numerous and the orders seem to be considerably larger than formerly. This firm has a limited supply of fine display cards for Mothers' day on sale now.

C. W. Johnson, of Mt. Greenwood, has a large supply of bedding stock in the usual fine condition for the May business. Young carnation plants are ready for the field.

A German lady florist visiting friends here last Sunday says one can find out whether it is hot in this city by walking around Lincoln park in the sun.

E. G. Hill, of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., is spending a few days calling on the trade here this week.

Chas. W. McKeller says that the cherry and apple trees on his farm in Niles township are now in full bloom.

Jimmy Anderson has returned from a business trip to Terre Haute, Ind., and Cleveland and Dayton, O.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a fine grade of American Beauty roses and a visit to this establishment at Morton Grove this week, when August Poehlmann and Adolph Poehlmann guided the party through the mammoth establishment found the stock in exceptionally fine condition. The Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are a sight to see and the same holds good for Killarney Queen and Milady. Milady has made good at this establishment and so has Ophelia and will be given more bench space than formerly. Hoosier Beauty is one of the new roses that is being grown this season and the baby rose Cecile Brunner or Sweetheart has been given considerable bench space. In speaking of the demand for young rose stock, August Poehlmann says that it could not have been better and that orders were being refused on some varieties every day and that is impossible for them to fill the demand. This firm has been busy planting their carnations out in the field all week and are now pretty well along with the work.

Sidney Buchbinder, of Buchbinder Bros., has returned from Davenport, Ia., where he sold a complete set of store fixtures including a Buchbinder refrigerator to Forber & Bird of that city.

Fancy home grown Mrs. Francis King and America cut gladioli have been bringing $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen on the market the past week.

I. W. Peterson, with J. A. Peterson & Sons, Westwood, Cincinnati, O., called on the trade here this week.

Joseph Ziska & Sons made up a number of odd wire designs for the prosperity parade held this week and the inaugural ceremonies at the city hall. One piece was a large wire circle fully twelve feet in diameter with a seven-foot horse's head in the center. It was a clever piece of work, considering that it was a rush job, and the piece attracted much attention after it was made up by George Wienhoeber, who delivered it to the office of the new Chief of Police Healey.

Wietor Bros. are planting their carnations out in the field this week, and are also pretty well along with the planting in the houses. They are cutting a nice supply of roses and carnations now, and expect to have a good supply of the latter for Mothers' day. N. J. Wietor says that orders for carnations for the occasion are numerous, but orders that include roses are given the preference.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg and Sinner Bros. have leased the store at 158 North Wabash avenue together and expect to move into their new quarters which is a ground floor location about May 1. Their new store is directly next door south of Kyle & Foerster's new quarters, so they will be in good company.

Miller & Musser have bought a new automatic ticket machine that is a dandy and a big improvement over the old one. N. P. Miller would have no complaint to make if orders came in as fast as tickets could be made out on the new machine, for he just loves to work.

Philip L. McKee, of the John C. Moninger Co., has returned from a business trip to Detroit, Mich., where he secured a nice contract for some new houses.

Elmer Olson is back on the job at A. L. Randall Co.'s store, after being on the sick list for several days.

THE LEO NIESSEN CO., 12th and Race Streets, PHILADELPHIA. Centre Street, BALTIMORE. 1214 H Street, WASHINGTON.

The prosperity parade held on Monday, April 26, was a big success, and the number of people in line counted by an adding machine was 15,559. It took the parade over three hours to pass the reviewing stand and the parade, which was over 11 miles long, was witnessed by over 250,000 people. It is estimated that there were over 50,000 visitors from out of town, who spent approximately $250,000. The cost of the parade is estimated at $46,785, and the profit to the city is said to be something like $203,115. W. H. Kidwell, Bohannon Floral Co., John Mangel, Chas. Samuelson, Anton Then, A. Lange and a few other florists had neatly decorated cars in the parade which made quite a hit. Wm. Hale Thompson certainly was given a great reception, but his many friends evidently did not realize what an awful wallop they handed Dame Prosperity, as far as the florists are concerned, when they would not permit flowers to be delivered to the city hall on the same day. It is a fact that the florists lost several thousand dollars on this account, for one party had a $500 decoration that was cancelled for this reason, and this is only one of the many cases that have been reported.

Kyle & Foerster are busy getting their new store at 160 North Wabash avenue in shape, and when the alterations are all completed, they will have a pretty nifty place. Two new ice-boxes and entire new set of fixtures will be installed. John Kruchten will occupy their store as soon as it is vacated and has bought all the fixtures including the large ice-box that Kyle & Foerster formerly used. An important announcement in regard to the Kruchten change will be made later.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a nice supply of roses and carnations and some especially fine Belle Washburn carnations are now among the offerings. This variety is making many friends and in bringing better prices than any other carnation on their list. In speaking of the hot weather that has prevailed in this vicinity the past week, Mr. Washburn says that it was 92 degrees in the shade at Hinsdale one day last week.

Peter Reinberg is offering a good supply of My Maryland and Ophelia roses this week in addition to their regular line of roses and carnations. Felix Reichling says that his brother Emil Reichling, superintendent of the Reinberg greenhouses, is busy planting out carnations this week. Miss McNulty has been busy answering inquiries for stock for Mothers' day and it is surprising what a demand there is for carnations for this day.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is looking forward to a busy season as soon as weddings become more numerous for dainty cut flower baskets are being used more and more on these occasions. The special $15 assortment of cut flower baskets for Mothers' day is in good demand and orders for same are still arriving.

Weiland & Risch have filled a large number of orders for grafted rose plants of the new variety Mrs. Charles Russell, and only have a limited amount left to offer.

MARKET MENACED WITH OVER SUPPLY.

The feature of the market is the over supply, which is still a menacing problem. Many lines are badly over stocked, and yet in spite of the very unfavorable returns, the supply keeps coming in, the growers no doubt hoping that things will take a turn for the better. In an effort to move the stock, a number of retail men who have never favored cut price sales, have been induced by growers and commission houses to take a flyer. One retailer who had never tried it before, sold over 1,200 short Killarney roses in one day in a half price sale. Another sold about the same quantity of Mrs. Ward roses and has arranged to run them every Friday and Saturday during the spring season. The department stores and the 10-cent stores appear to handle a lot of flowers, but at low prices. A number of out of town dealers are ready whenever they can buy to advantage, and arrange "specials," which they claim are a great boost in advertising their business and securing new trade. The best sellers in the market are the Spencer peas; the quality of much of this stock is fine. There is plenty of lily of the valley, but for some reason it is not up to standard, seeming to lack stamina. Carnations are very draggy, except at prices that will hardly pay the freight. Although roses are so plentiful that all the outside avenues are over supplied and men are seen walking up and down Chestnut street selling long stemmed American Beauties at 10 cents each, yet on Saturday night a retailer who tried to buy one dozen medium Beauties could not get one, the market having shortend up to that extent in a few hours' time.

NOTES.

We have not heard of any concerted action by the trade relating to Mothers' day. Here is a great opportunity, one that will amply repay any expenditure that could be used in giving publicity to this beautiful custom.

fore the craft of this city, who are going to work with a will to do their part in making it a success. Committees on advertising, publicity, securing exhibits, decorations, and other features have been appointed. A meeting to go over the matter with the national chairman, George Asmus, of Chicago, is scheduled for April 28.

Ophelia roses will be added to the list of the Jos. Heacock Co. the coming season. Hadley will also be grown, both of which varieties have been given a trial the past season. Hoosier Beauty will also have a chance to demonstrate its fitness.

George Burton was operated on for appendicitis, Thursday, April 22. He is in the Chestnut Hill hospital. His condition is reported satisfactory, and it is hoped he will soon be about again.

Edward Reid is strong on American Beauties, orchid peas and carnations. The surplus of the past two weeks has bothered him, but he has kept on top and says the worst is now over.

James Higgins, of Mrs. E. A. Williams' staff of Pittsburgh, Pa., was in town last week. His was a sad errand, as he came to attend the funeral of his mother.

The M. Rice Co. have a novelty in ostrich feather fans, which, when decorated with flowers, are just right for the corsage, the fan acting as a shield.

American Beauty roses are the leaders with the Leo Niessen Co. Corn flowers and Spencer peas are also handled in quantity.

STOCK IN IMMENSE SUPPLY UNMOVED.

All nature smiles. The trees are well in leaf; the apple blossoms, the dogwoods and many other blossoms of hardy growth are much in evidence and in crossing Madison square it was noted that a lawn mower had already been at work. There are also smiles in the wholesale cut flower district of this city, but, they are different from those of Dame Nature. The past week opened fairly well and that is the best that can be said. Before noon of April 19 the mercury began to climb. It was hot that afternoon, but "Old Sol" was merely preparing for a field day. April 20th the temperature was 80° on the shady side of streets as late as 3 p. m., probably later in some localities. The net result has been that an immense amount of stock has ever since been pouring in, and much of it is showing the effect of such unseasonable heat, particularly roses, carnations and violets. As for the violets, they are about done for and little more need be said about them until next fall. As buying has been light, it follows that the market is glutted. Though some of the stock has deteriorated there is yet plenty that is good, but it is impossible to clean up. Special American Beauty roses have sold as low as $6 per 100 and other roses in like proportion. There is always a little fresh stock that brings better prices, but the bulk of it goes for a song, providing it goes at all. As an instance, the writer has just seen gardenias with good flowers, and stems a foot long, sold on the street for 10 cents each, or 3 for a quarter, probably they have sold for less, for when flowers go on the street it is a reasonable conclusion that they can be sold at most any price, with a profit to the seller. We do not recall ever seeing so much good stock hawked about the streets of this city as at the present time. Gardenias, roses, sweet peas and various other stocks in quantity are in the hands of the street men. Turning from this dark picture to a brighter one, it can be said that the plant trade is active. Window-box and vase work is well advanced and much of it is very handsome. So far as we can learn, the retailers who do landscape work and planting are all fairly busy. The plant auction houses and plant stores in general, seem to be doing an immense business. Many very finely flowered geraniums and other bedding plants are seen and we believe that they are selling well. It may here be added that it does not seem reasonable that the glut in cut flowers can long continue. Much of the bulbous stock will soon be gone and with such hot weather other stocks will have to rest.

April 26.—A heavy supply of stock is arriving to-day. April 25 was a very hot day; the mercury, at 11 a. m., was up to 88° and remained there for several hours. At 7:30 p. m. a breeze sprang up, which increased to the proportions of a gale, and it is now much cooler. Indications point to a heavy supply of stock throughout the week and the market, being full of southern lilac, there is no prospect for an advance in prices on anything.

April 27.—The market today is greatly overstocked and demand stagnant. The heat is intense, the thermometer registering 92° at 3:00 p. m.

NOTES.

Horace E. Froment is now well settled in his large new store, 148 West Twenty-eighth street, having removed from No. 57 on that street. No. 148 is well down toward Seventh avenue and as a new subway is being constructed under Seventh avenue, it would appear that his move will turn out all right. As a New Yorker, to the manor born; as an able and clever business man and a gentleman, he will have the good wishes of many friends, wherever he goes.

G. E. M. Stumpp was in Southampton, L. I., the latter part of last week in connection with preparations for the opening of his new store. He was accompanied by Carl Kamman, one of his staff who will be with him after the store is opened, as it is understood Mr. Stumpp in person will be in charge. Alexander Fogg, of Mr. Stumpp's staff who has been with him for eight months will soon go to his home, Portland, Maine, for the summer, returning in the fall.

The lecture committee of the New York Florists Club feels especially privileged in being able to announce that Ernest H. Wilson, assistant to the director of Arnold Arboretum, Boston, Mass., will address the members at the next meeting, May 10, upon the subject of "Gardens and Flora of Japan," illustrated by original colored photographic slides. Mr. Wilson has recently returned from a year's explorations in Japan.

At the Hotel Vanderbilt, Park avenue and 34th street, we have noted a very fine display of window box work. The boxes cover all the windows on the Park avenue front and 34th street side and placed end to end would measure in length 125 to 150 feet. The boxes are of decorated stone, and filled with English daisies and English ivies, and the effect is beautiful. The work was by Charles A. Dards, Madison avenue and 44th street.

Satow & Suzuki's Nippon Garden, 259 Fifth avenue, is a very interesting place to visit. It is well stocked with dwarf trees, and cut flowers are also sold. We recently noted a novel collection of little turtles. They were from one to one and a half inches in length. We could not say they were as lively as crickets, but they were quite lively for turtles. S. Nishijima is manager.

At Alexander McConnell's store, Fifth avenue and 49th street, we note a very clever arrangement of boxes and pans, placed near the wall outside the store. In front there is a long row of mountain phlox, a mass of bloom. Along the side the boxes are filled with wallflowers and English daisies. At this season these outside decorations go far toward enhancing the beauty of a store.

One of the heaviest buyers in the wholesale district of New York April 23-24 was Jack Trepel, buyer for his brother, Joe Trepel, who has a chain of retail stores in Brooklyn. Though brothers to C. C. Trepel of Bloomingdale's and proprietors of a dozen stores in Manhattan, they are not connected with him in business.

A flower market, similar to those in Paris, is to be inaugurated in this city by the Woman's Municipal League. Sheridan and Christopher squares in the Greenwich village district have been chosen for market places.

Samuel C. Gilbert, formerly with Charles H. Brown, who a year and a half ago went into the wholesale business at 275 Columbus avenue, has built up a nice trade, and now has an automobile for delivery.

The plant market in the old Fulton fish market, foot of Fulton street near Fulton ferry, seems to be a success. This supplants the market formerly under the Queensboro bridge.

The store at 57 West 28th street, just vacated by H. E. Froment, has been taken by C. C. Trepel. He will use it as a supply depot and headquarters for his buyers.

Thomas F. Galvin, Jr., of Boston, has taken charge of the retail store of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., Fifth avenue and 46th street, this city, and will remain here permanently.

Armstrong & Mackie are two enterprising young men who recently opened a nice retail store at 671 Eighth avenue, and they seem to be doing a good business.

Geo. Hauser, son of J. W. Hauser, the Madison avenue retailer, came all the way from Florida, where he is in business, to assist his father with the Easter trade.

THE SEFTON MFG. CO., 1333 W. 35th Street CHICAGO, ILL.

A meeting of the flower show committee of the New York Florists' club was held at the office of Harry A. Bunyard, April 24. Plans were discussed for the spring show of 1916.

Geo. D. Nicholas, the popular retailer of Seventh avenue and 123d street, has recently purchased a handsome automobile for his delivery service.

Max Schling, in addition to his large cut flower trade, is now very busy with window-box and vase work, and outdoor planting.

John Mallon, of James Mallon's Sons, has been seriously ill with grippe but is now recovering, and is able to visit their stores.

S. Masur was busy as usual. Since removing to his new store his facilities for turning out work are greatly improved.

Chas. F. Dailey, late of the flower shop in the Hotel Plaza, recently opened a retail store at 358 Madison avenue.

We found John V. Phillips busy in his store, and he had a force of men out doing landscape work.

James Conlon is having quite a trade in plants, vines and various outdoor stocks.

A. Muller is now the clever and efficient florist at the Hotel McAlpin.

Visitors: Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Wm. J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.

BOWLING.

An interesting event of the past week was the bowling match on the afternoon of April 22, on Thum's alleys, between the Tuxedo Park and New York Florists' Club bowling teams. New York won two of the three games. W. P. Ford, literally the heavyweight of the New York team (he must weigh nearly 250 pounds) did much to win the game. John Miesem, Joe Fenrich, Harry Riedel, Charlie Scott and Pete Jacobson, all likewise showed up in good form. There are good bowlers in the Tuxedo Park team and they defeated New York the previous week on the Tuxedo Park alleys. The standing of the teams is therefore now even. While we do not know just why it should be so, providing one set of alleys are as good as another, it appears to us that most bowlers do better work on their own alleys. After the bowling was over the New York team entertained the visiting team at a supper in Thum's restaurant. That was but returning the compliment as they were royally treated at Tuxedo Park. The Tuxedo Park team is largely composed of private gardeners and they are a fine lot of men. The scores follow:

Retail Florists

Your business can be easily increased by creating more and bigger sales with your present customers, and by creating new flower buyers through EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING.

Write us for our sample folders, cuts and slides for advertising:

Mothers' Day — Fall Announcement
Spring Planting — Thanksgiving
Memorial Day — Christmas
Social Occasions — St. Valentine's Day
Fall Planting — Easter

If you are not satisfied with the results of your advertising, or if you would like to begin advertising and to have plans drawn up for you and estimates given for your individual business and city, write us for particulars about our advertising system, a system that increases business.

Hundreds of leading florists throughout the United States and Canada are using our service successfully—florists in the great metropolitan cities and florists in small cities and towns.

We are the largest concern in the world specializing on advertising plans for RETAIL FLORISTS.

STREET MEN HELP MOVE HEAVY STOCK.

The flower market has had its ups and downs the last few weeks, with downs leading with perhaps a slight margin. Stocks of all grades and varieties are abundant to say the least; much of it is sold to the street fakirs, and prices are low. Snapdragons of excellent quality, and all colors are plentiful with a fair demand, while carnations, roses, sweet peas, calendulas, tulips, daffodils, Easter lilies, callas, swainsonas, daisies, poeticus, violets and forget-me-nots are also part of the stock from which to select. Irises in all colors and mignonette meet with a fair demand. Sweet peas have supplanted the violet for corsage bouquets, and the sale, for adiantum is very good. Asparagus has shortened in supply. Boxwood for funeral work still meets with a good call. Inquiries for Mothers' day look like it will be a record breaking day for florists. Advertising for Mothers' day will be out very soon, and help to boost the day.

NOTES.

J. Prentiss Baldwin, chairman of the executive committee, representing the Ohio Horticultural Society, The Cleveland Florists Club, and the Cleveland Garden Club, spent the past week in New York in the interest of the Cleveland flower show, November 10-14. The floor plan for trade exhibits has been arranged and space for exhibits is now ready for sale. You are invited, so plan now to attend. The annual meeting and exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America will be a big feature at the Cleveland show.

The firm name of "Harris Bros.," at 144 Public square has been changed to The Park Flower Shop. This is the only place in Cleveland that has its icebox in the show window, and it is at all times packed with seasonable flowers, making a good display and attracting considerable attention.

Leonard Utzinger, Sr., florist, 800 Lake View road, used to be a florist in the royal gardens of the King of Wurtemberg. Mr. Utzinger made an extended visit to his old "heimat" last summer.

Cleveland Englishmen wore red roses, Sunday, April 25, St. George's day. There were special services at Trinity cathedral. C. F. B.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Boosallis & Papas, proprietors of the Metropolitan Candy Co., were wiped out by fire on April 27-28, when a number of large buildings were burned to the ground. Boosallis & Papas conducted a floral department in their store and were large buyers in the local market.

Roses for Outdoor Planting

Two-year-old plants, potted up into 5 and 6-inch pots during the winter months, stored in cold houses and frames and now in best possible condition to sell to your retail customers. Over 200 varieties, in Hybrid Tea, Hybrid Perpetual, Moss, Rugosa, Wichuraiana, Rambler, Baby Rambler, Pernetiana and Tea Varieties.

Hardy Perennials

The best collection of serviceable varieties in the country. Large planters, among whom we include the leading Landscape Architects throughout the country, appreciate the advantage of the Dreer Pot Grown Plants over the socalled Field Grown Clumps. No doubt, you are familiar with our stock, if not, give it a trial. Specialties in this line are, The New Anchusas, Anemone Japonica, Aquilegias, Hardy Asters, Astilbes, Hardy Chrysanthemums, Delphiniums, Digitalis, Hardy Ferns, Funkias, Hardy Grasses, Double Gypsophila. Heleniums, Helianthus, Giant Hibiscus or Mallows, Iris Germanica, Iris Kaempferi, Poppies, Penstemons, Paeonies, Hardy Phlox (over 150,000 of these in stock), New Phlox Arendsi, Hardy Pinks, Primulas, Double and Single Pyrethrums, Salvias, Saxifraga, Scabiosa, Spiraeas, Stokesia, Trollius, Tritomas, Veronicas, Violas, etc.

New Hybrid-Tea Rose Willowmere.

Artemisia Lactiflora.

Hardy Shrubs

All the popular varieties. Hardy Azaleas, Andromeda, New Buddleias, Hydrangeas, Japanese Maples, Rhododendrons of tested hardy varieties, Altheas, Deutzias, Philadelphus, Spiraeas, Viburnums, Weigelias, etc.

Aquatics

We are headquarters for Water Lilies, both Hardy and Tender. Nelumbiums, Victorias and Sub-Aquatic Marginal Plants.

Ornamental Plants

Boxwoods in Pyramids, Trees, Balls and Bushes, Palms, Ferns, Crotons, Dracaenas, Pandanus, etc.

Bulbs

Amaryllis, Tuberous Begonias, Caladiums, Dahlias, Gladiolus, Lilies, Cannas, etc.

Hardy Climbers

Ampelopsis, Aristolochias, Bignonias, Clematis, Honeysuckles, Hardy Ivies, Hardy Jasmines, Polygonum Auberti, Kudzu Vines, Climbing Hydrangeas, Wistarias, Vitis, etc.

All of the above and many other seasonable Plants and Bulbs are fully described in our January 1st. Wholesale Price List, which will be mailed to anyone in the trade on application.

American Seed Trade Association.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

VISITED NEW YORK.—J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., enroute to his Virginia shooting preserves.

RICHLAND, WIS.—A seed cleaning mill will be installed and an addition erected at the seed house of Peter W. Wolf.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade April 28 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.00 per 100 pounds.

THE Salt Lake City Tribune, of April 11, calls attention to the Morgan district of Utah as a good locality for raising seed peas.

SEDALIA, MO.—Fred J. Kreisel, formerly of the Archias Seed Store, has purchased the Culley Commission & Seed Company of this city.

ACCORDING to Argentina cables it is estimated that the exportable corn surplus will be materially reduced, due to heavy rains and unsettled weather.

DUTCH BULBS.—Dutch reports of April 10 say crops in general are looking well. Trade in Europe is quite satisfactory for tulips and daffodils. Hyacinths go slow.

LOMPOC, CALIF.—The Lompoc Produce & Real Estate Co. is inviting members of the seed trade to make themselves at home at its offices when they visit Lompoc on their California tour next month.

NASHVILLE, TENN. — "Things are breaking right for us," report McKay, Reece & Co., seedsmen. "We have been having a fine business. The demand for high grade seeds is especially heavy this year."

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND.—The Crawfordsville Seed Co., reports highly satisfactory trade since its formation, July 1, 1914, enlargement of its quarters being made necessary by the encouraging growth of the business.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—E. H. Cushman, proprietor of the Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, Ohio, and specialist in gladioli, peonies and dahlias, has turned his business over to his son, and with his family, is now residing in this city.

AN unprecedented and unexpected shortage has developed in bulbs of Caladium esculentum during the past two weeks, the stock appears to be entirely cleaned up all over the country, an apparent shortage of twenty or thirty thousand.

FRENCH BULBS.—According to latest French reports, White Roman hyacinths, 12-15 centimeters, will probably not exceed 75 francs. Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora probably will be the same price as last year. The harvesting will be long and difficult, because the active, able-bodied young and middle-aged men are away at the front, and those who are not actually at the front are in the concentration camps.

ONION SET crops at Chicago are showing above ground, in spite of continued drought. Strong hot winds have played mischief with the tender plants on the light sandy soils. Hand weeding will soon be in order, as the unusually warm weather is starting the weeds freely.

TUBEROSE bulb planting stock is reported scarce, and even if war conditions reduce demands 50 per cent it is thought likely that a similar shortage will be found in the crop produced. England, Holland, Denmark and Italy are the only buying markets open and Holland orders have been reduced more than 60 per cent.

Robert Henry Black, Albert Lea, Minn.

A "Seedsman by Birth," who has Established a Fast Growing Business.

NEW YORK.—It would be hard to see how some of the seed stores could, with their present facilities, handle more business than they have been doing since the spring trade really began. On April 17 the cash sales at the store of Peter Henderson & Co., for that day alone, were $3,755, and enough was booked to bring them up to $4,000. At Vaughan's no figures have been given out, but the store has been crowded throughout the past week. Other stores report excellent business.

Lemon Oil as Seed Corn Germicide.

By treating seed corn with a solution of oil of lemon and wood alcohol, root lice are very much reduced, according to Dr. S. A. Forbes, state entomologist of Illinois. The mixture is in the proportion of one part of oil of lemon to 10 parts of alcohol. Three ounces of the mixture is used to a bushel of corn. The cost of the treatment is about 10 cents per acre planted.

Clover Seed.

Toledo authorities, writing April 23, make the following report on the clover crop conditions:

"October clover is at a debatable level and on present conditions sales on the bulges appear attractive. The new crop came through the winter in good shape. Rains did not come until late, but have since relieved all apprehension and the new crop is getting away with a good start. The cash season is about at an end, and indications are that there will be a good-sized surplus carried over, both here and at other points. After April is out of the way October seed will have to stand on its own merits and will be swayed by speculation and the new crop outlook. With the exception of the crop calamity of 1912, it is now selling higher than ever before during April. It is much above the average and somewhat higher than the expiration of cash seed during the past two seasons. Present price discounts a moderate sized crop. It is only on a short crop, when actual shortage prevails, that clover seed can be maintained above $9 throughout the season. The usual season's range of $3 to $5 adds to the possibilities. October closed today at $8.35."

Robert H. Black, Albert Lea, Minn.

The accompanying portrait of Robert Henry Black, seedsman of Albert Lea, Minn., is a reproduction of a two column illustration, which appeared in the Albert Lea Evening Tribune, April 23. The Tribune in referring to Mr. Black states that he couldn't help being a seedsman. From his Scotch ancestry he inherited a love of

THE standard barrel of the United States should contain 7,056 cubic inches, with 28½ inch staves and 17⅛-inch heads, head material not thicker than 2-5 of an inch.

WE are in receipt of the tenth annual report of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, 1914, published by the Ontario department of agriculture. It comprises 91 pages, and is excellently illustrated.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, April 27.—Mushrooms, 40 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce, 8 cents to 10 cents per box; radishes, 40 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; asparagus, $1.00 per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 25 cents; cucumbers, $1.00 per dozen.

New York, April 27.—Cauliflower, per dozen, $2.00 to $3.50; Cucumbers, $1.00 to $1.25 per dozen; mushrooms, 65 cents to $1.50 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to 50 cents; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 25 cents to 40 cents.

Gardeners' Mutual Protective Association.

This association held its monthly meeting in New Orleans, Sunday, April 11, and after transacting routine business the question of celebrating the association's fortieth anniversary was discussed and plans were made to give a May festival and outing in honor of the event, the proceeds to go to the W. & O. fund. An elaborate programme is being arranged and the event will bring out a large attendance of the gardeners in the suburbs of this city, and also those of the adjacent parishes of St. Bernard and Jefferson. The important matter of the introduction of Japanese labor was discussed, and the association adopted a motion as being opposed to same.

JOHN PARR, Sec'y.

Onion Growing on Indiana Muck Land.

Seven years ago Rudolph Kline purchased a farm, or rather a swamp in Starke county, Indiana, grown up in shrubs with here and there a sand hill rising above the general level. With a large force of men and teams he cleared the land, laid out a system of open and tile drainage, and soon demonstrated that this much-despised swamp land would produce onions second to none. For the past six years he has grown on the average seventy-five acres of onions, which have annually yielded an average of 475 bushels an acre, or 35,625 bushels. According to the grower's figures it costs about 30 cents a bushel to produce these onions, leaving a net profit of 15 cents a bushel, or $5,343.75 a year.—Country Gentleman.

Preparing Land.

There is a widespread belief that to plant into newly plowed land is best. This is not only a great error, but often the direct cause of crop failure. Soil study has received a great deal of attention in recent years, and we believe in this case practice and science agree very well. The all important principle involved is capillarity, or the movement of soil moisture. Moisture moves upward in solid earth, most readily, and very slowly, if at all, in loose earth. High winds penetrate loose earth, causing the wilting and loss of newly set green plants.

Seeds for germinating need close soil contact and constant moisture. The old experienced gardener knows that plowed land will be better after resting several weeks or a month as the disturbed water movement has had time to be reestablished. We can learn a great deal from the dry farming methods of the semi-arid western plains. Their method is simply to preserve every bit of moisture precipitated by constant harrowing of the surface; the accumulation of enough moisture in two years to raise one crop. Further they have demonstrated that to plow under a large amount of stubble, trash or strawy manure effectively separates the upper soil from the subsoil, therefore preventing capillarity. To overcome this, they reduce this trash with cut away discs before plowing.

After plowing the soil is compacted below and loosened on top to prevent evaporation. Imitating these westerners we can disc our lands before plowing to a depth of four inches; thus we plow under mellow soil; after plowing, by discing the upper part, we have the assurance that the entire seed bed is mellow and fine. Where soils are too hard to disc readily before plowing, we can plow first, then disc and harrow, and then plow again, thus turning the mellow soil under and bringing the clods to the surface to be reduced as before. This may mean a lot of work, but in gardening, where enormous amounts of labor are required and the expense of carrying a crop through is great, this preparatory work is well placed. In regard to seed sowing, soils have a moisture line—that is, a compact soil with a harrowed surface will produce a constant moisture level, even in long continued dry weather, hence the operator must determine to establish this line and plant his seeds accordingly.

We have had soils that would hold this moist line within one-half inch of the surface and others again would dry out almost two inches. As a rule, in all gardening and farming operations, too much moisture is allowed to escape by permitting unplowed land to crust hard or by the failure of compacting and harrowing newly plowed land.

MARKETMAN.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The Pierce-Christian Co., successors to Burt, the Florist, having taken over the business about a year ago, have suspended. The store is still open, being under the management of Henry Morris, formerly of P. R. Quinlan & Company of this city.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—The committee managing the annual flower garden competition wants the streets of this city to bloom like a garden—with window boxes in every building. Special efforts are being directed along this line. Appeals are being made to the business men and it is especially urged that these window boxes contain vincas, which require a minimum of care, cost very little and are a mass of bloom from early spring until late frost.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

CENTERVILLE, IND.—E. Y. Teas, the veteran nurseryman of Centerville, is in his eighty-sixth year and says he will retire this year.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Nurseries, Western Springs, Ill., reports that on April 26 the peony crop was about 18 days earlier than last year.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The dates for the annual rose exhibition of the Brookland Rose Society have been set for May 20-21. Attractive medals will be presented to the winners in several classes.

SANTA ROSA, CALIF.—Plans for the rose carnival to be held May 6-8, are well under way, and everything indicates the carnival this year will excel all previous efforts of "The Rose City," in which the rose carnival idea originated.

GEORGE C. ROEDING, for over thirty years active in the nursery trade in California, and at present president of the Fancher Creek Nursery Co., Fresno, Calif., has published a book on the planting and pruning of fruit and ornamental trees. It sells at 25 cents and contains much valuable information.

THE late John Cudahy, millionaire packer of Chicago, who died April 23, as a young man at the age of 24, engaged in the nursery business continuing his operations therein three years when he returned to the packing industry in which he had been engaged previously. Mr. Cudahy was born in Callan, County Kilkenny, Ireland.

DANSVILLE, N. Y.—Reilly Bros., nurserymen, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in United States district court, April 20, showing liabilities of $31,535.42 and assets of $71,060. Edward Bacon of this city was appointed receiver. Counsel for Reilly Bros., said the action was taken not because the firm was insolvent, but to effect an adjustment with creditors.

Early History and Traditions of Evergreens

In reviewing the three great periods of geological history, it is found that the first period consisted principally of flowerless plants; the second period of flowerless and a few seed-bearing plants; the third period the seed-bearing plants constituted much the larger portion, in the opinion of A. H. Hill, Dundee, Ill., who addressed the North Shore Horticultural Society, Lake Forest, Ill., January 15, 1915. The family that has most universally pervaded every stage of vegetation is that of the conifers or evergreens. The ancient writers frequently mention the existence of conifers and used the pines, cedars and junipers as striking illustrations of strength, durability and permanency. The Romans used garlands of pine branches for crowning the victors in their games, and the wood to form their funeral pyres. The cones and seeds were considered medicinal and were sought after for flavoring their wines. The rare gracefulness and artistic beauty of many of the evergreens were used as models by the sculptor. One of the old writers speaks of the preservative properties of the juice of the cedar and states it was used in preparing mummies. The cedar of Lebanon is symbolical of durability. The wood was held in great respect by the ancients and the branches were employed in religious exercises. The junipers and yews perhaps, were more frequently mentioned and known than any other genus of the evergreens, and they were used extensively in all ornamental plantings.

In many places throughout the sacred writing we find the evergreens beautifully mentioned, the similes often being among the most eloquent pasages known in the English language. The first author who wrote exclusively on trees and shrubs produced a book in 1523 on the subject of evergreens, and since then the French, English, Germans and Italians have paid the evergreen family marked attention. Other botanical authors have, during the present century, devoted much labor to the study and classification of this most important family.

No other order of plants presents such a diversity of size as that of the evergreen family. From the humble trailing sorts to the lordly Sequoia gigantea, 300 feet in height, it embraces trees of every size. Every shade and tint of gold, silver and green is also beautifully displayed in the foliage of the various species. The evergreen family is limited to no particular climate or country, but is a native of the torrid, frigid and temperate zones throughout the whole world. On the coldest summits of the Alpine peaks of Lapland, at the very utmost limits of vegetation, are found many of the dwarf species, while on the other extreme, some splendid varieties develop their beauty beneath the scorching sun of the torrid regions.

Hill's Specimen Evergreens For Landscape Planting

THESE trees are all perfect specimens, having good roots owing to frequent transplanting. Always freshly and carefully dug. No extra charge for Ball and Burlap. To satisfy the increasing demand for trees to give quicker results, a large portion of our Nursery is devoted to growing of Specimen Evergreens to be handled with Ball and Burlap. This stock is all grown in wide rows with plenty of room to develop both root and top. Each tree is staked to insure symmetrical growth and at regular intervals throughout the growing season trimming and pruning is done by men of long experience in this line. We keep this stock on the move also, transplanting every two years, as a root system can be developed in no other way, an in Evergreens roots are the basis of success.

WHAT THE USERS SAY
Better Than All Others

I have fired boilers for the last forty years. The Kroeschell is the best I have ever used. I have two cast iron boilers, also a locomotive boiler coupled with yours, but did not need to use the cast iron boilers this winter. Your No. 7 boiler is rated at 15,000 sq. ft. of glass and carries 25,000 sq. ft. of glass until the outside temperature goes down to 10° of frost. We have no trouble to keep temperatures in our houses with easy firing since we installed your boiler. From the boiler to the farthest end of our violet houses and return is 800 feet, and circulates very quickly. THE SALTFORD FLOWER SHOP.

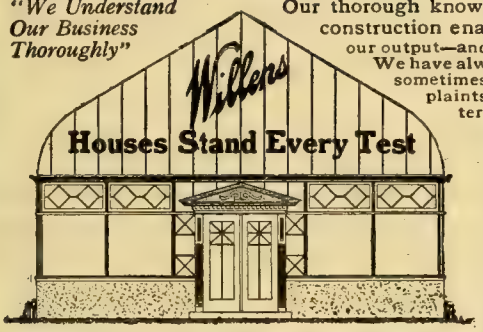
"We Understand Our Business Thoroughly"



Our thorough knowledge of the finer points in greenhouse construction enables us to save that much on the cost of our output—and we are giving you the benefit of this saving. We have always given 100 cents value for every dollar—sometimes more. As we have never yet had any complaints, we lose nothing by guaranteeing our material against defects.

Willens Personal Service

Every bit of the work is personally directed by one of the Willens'. If we do the erecting, one of the Willens' personally supervises the work. Careful attention is paid to the minutest details, each of which is conducive to longer life and better greenhouse service. If you have never tried us or are dissatisfied in your past dealings with others, begin now to benefit by our service and material. Write us today.

What They Say:

Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,
Norfolk, Neb.

Lawn and Garden Vases

Adorn the Home Grounds.

One of the most effective additions to the decorations of the ground and lawn about the residence is the vase of growing plants. These are to be had in a great variety of forms and sizes, constructed of various materials from wood, iron and terra cotta to the indestructible cement, these latter having come much into vogue the past few years. A handsome vase and pedestal is an investment, as with care it will last a long time. Placed on the lawn in a well chosen position, as at the head of an embankment, either side of a landing of rising steps, in the center of small grass plots, in place of a flower bed which has been deemed too low, and used in many other ways, it is always a striking feature.

In many country yards the vase is very primitive, being made of an old lard tub, or other like wooden receptacle, elevated on a post, and are generally painted red or green. Plants in them appear to grow and bloom very well. The great majority, however, are more pretentious, the terra cotta, cement and iron vases being most favored on account of their durability and beautiful design. Many iron vases have a reservoir in the bottom, connected with the soil by tubes with sponges, through which the water is taken up by capillary attraction. This works well in dry weather, but is apt to become water logged in very wet times. A well drained vase, if watered frequently, appears to do the best, but they require a lot of attention during dry spells.

The plants best suited for the vase depend much on its situation. For bright sunlight, nothing is so effective as geraniums; generally a center plant is used, the most popular being Dracæna indivisa, with its numerous narrow leathery but graceful leaves. Dracæna terminalis is striking, with its brilliant red foliage. Palms are often used, and sometimes dwarf cannas, which, when the vase is large enough, are very suitable. Crotons, with their brilliant colored foliage, are very rich and striking. Pandanus Veitchii is another plant that does splendidly in the full sunlight. All geraniums, generally one color to a vase, give the most showy results, particularly with a border of the pendant ivy geraniums. Vines of the variegated periwinkle, Nasturtiums, with their showy blossoms and long pendant vines, are good border plants.

When the situation is shady, a vase filled with ornamental foliage is desirable and at the same time very decorative, with a pandanus, palm or well colored dracænas for the center, Scotti and other types of the Boston fern around, together with a border of periwinkle or Asparagus Sprengeri, there is produced a splendid picture, and one that will remain beautiful the entire season. The tuberous rooted begonias, with their gorgeously colored blossoms, will do well in partial shade and flower continuously the entire summer. While immediate effect is desirable, yet planting that is not so showy at first, but which will improve as the season advances, is best. Small plants of Scottii or Boston fern near the edge are sure to be effective with their graceful fronds, which round out and give symmetry as they grow.

The vase is particularly adapted to furnish and decorate a small space, such as a cemetery lot. With the florists who cater to this kind of trade, filling vases for the cemetery is an important item, and much thought and attention is given to the work. Houses of plants best suited for the purpose are grown and timed to be at their best for the middle of May; then for three weeks the force is kept busy filling vases, which must be in position in their respective lots before May 30—Memorial day. For these vases, Dracæna indivisa is the center plant. Crotons are largely used, as is acalypha, Sanchezia nobilis, with its beautiful, golden veined leaves. Geraniums of all colors furnish the flowers. For vines, glechoma, Abutilon vexillarium, vincas, variegated and green, tradescantias, Asparagus Sprengeri and ivy leaved geraniums.

Good, rich soil is an important matter; where so many plants are crowded together they should be provided with plenty of stimulant. A generous quantity of bone meal, mixed with the soil, is a great help as it will last a long time. When planted, the earth should be firmed well about the roots of each plant, and a small space left to hold the water; this soil will soon settle to leave more room. This matter of watering is very important, as if once allowed to become very dry, the plants are quite some time getting into a normal condition. Evening is the best time to water, the soil and plants absorbing the whole amount applied.

The florist who has room, will find a stock of ornamental vases very desirable. Samples, or a small line, with the beautiful illustrated catalogues issued by the manufacturers to show the full assortment, will enable one to do a large business at little risk or expense. A line of the vitrified clay pots for individual plants, such as boxwood, bay trees, hydrangeas and the like for doorway or terrace decoration is very good stock. They are not expensive and are becoming very popular.

The firms making a specialty of garden and lawn vases are the McDonald Foundry, Columbus, O.; The Sterling Grinding Wheel Co., Tiffin, O., and Walbridge & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Forsythias.

A year ago the flower buds on many of these plants had been destroyed by the severe cold of the previous winter; now they are all blooming as freely as usual. The handsomest of these plants at this time is a hybrid between two of these species, Forsythia suspensa Fortunei and F. viridissima, known as F. intermedia. There are several forms of this hybrid. The one called F. intermedia primulina, with pale canary yellow flowers, a seedling which sprang up spontaneously in the Arboretum a few years ago, is one of the most beautiful of these hybrid forms. F. europaea, a vigorous hardy plant, with erect branches, is perhaps less beautiful in flower than the Chinese species, but is interesting as an European representative of a genus otherwise confined to China and Korea. There is a collection of Forsythias in the shrub collection, a large mass of them at the lower end of the Bussey Hill road. — Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, April 28, 1915.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Stein's Flower Shop, San Francisco, Calif.

The illustrations herewith show Albert O. Stein's Flower Shop, 1150 Sutter street, San Francisco, Calif., at Easter. This is said to be one of the largest flower shops in the country, having a frontage of 45 feet, depth 129 feet. It is very daintily equipped throughout. The interior view shows only a corner of the shop with some particularly fine specimens of ericas in the foreground.

Mothers' Day An Opportunity.

The greatest floral holiday of the year unquestionably is Easter. Much of the Dutch bulbous stock, Japanese longiflorums, nearly all the azaleas, rambler roses, hydrangeas and a host of other plants, are grown expressly for sale at Easter. If all goes well, Easter week is when the grower cashes in. He gets his money for three or more months' hard work, counts up his profits and plans for the next season's campaign. What is the underlying sentiment that has created this great demand and provided such a market for the products of the greenhouse? How did it come about? It originated and grew out of the use of plants and flowers in the decorations of the Catholic and Episcopal churches for Easter.

In 1876 there was no thought of exchanging floral gifts; this beautiful custom grew gradually, beginning a year or two later, but did not become general or amount to anything as a factor for some years after that. There was no particular sentiment that prompted the giving, except that of wishing one a happy Easter. It was a nice thing to do; the recipient would enjoy it. The plant was beautiful and served to carry a message of love and good wishes; that was all, yet on this comparatively slight foundation has been built up the great Easter demand that has grown so wonderfully and means so much to the trade.

To my mind the possibilities of "Mothers' day" as a floral holiday is far greater than that of Easter, because of the underlying sentiment. The sacredness of a mother's love, or of one's love for their mother. It is personal with everyone; it is the best mother on earth—their mother, that is to be honored. If she has passed away, her sweet memory is revered, if still living, the privilege is the greater, as she will highly prize such thoughts of love and devotion. With this sentiment to build on, which affects everyone, not just a comparative few who go to make up the buyers at Easter, but every living man, woman and child, they all feel and have that great love for their mother, that sacred woman who bore them and guarded their first feeble footsteps, and whose every thought was for their guidance and comfort all through life. If the observance of the day grew so that every person wore only one flower, there would not now be enough to go around. This, however, would be a small recognition, there are so many who could afford to have what their love would prompt them to send; a visit to the grave in the cemetery would mean a floral token or spray of more or less value. I believe it is quite possible to bring the custom up to an observance such as this. What an opening it would be for all branches of the trade.

The way to bring it about is for the entire trade to unite in an educational effort to exploit the day. The work of the retail florists who have banded together in a few of the larger cities, has brought wonderful results, out of all proportion to the small amount expended. What is needed is a national publicity bureau, perhaps under the auspices of the S. A. F. There should be a nation-wide campaign, but, and this is very important, the trade generally, from the big store man down to the smallest dealer, should have instilled into them sympathy with the movement and an enthusiasm that would overcome all obstacles in the observance of the day. Even now many men, influential in the trade, see nothing in it, pay no attention to the decoration of their windows, do nothing to advertise or spread the idea in any way.

There is no question that with the beautiful sentiment that has even prompted the national congress to set aside the second Sunday in May for its expression and observance, the florists of the whole country have one of the grandest opportunities on which to build a floral holiday that can be made the greatest of the year.

Short Cuts in Decorating.

There are scarcely any two decorative jobs that are exactly alike; there may be just the use of a dozen palms, or the work is for a large ball or other social function, wedding or what not, when there is use for every decorative plant on the place. Much of the work of this character could be done with fewer plants, provided better stock was used. Many times one plant is placed in front of another to cover up a deficiency, and a grouping of passe looking stock is arranged together, using twice as many as would ordinarily have been necessary to get an effect had the plants been perfect.

Made up combinations with a large bushy palm in the center, the pot or tub being placed in a zinc lined pot cover several sizes too large, and the empty space filled in with blooming stock, ferns and vines, makes a fine decorative effect for the top of a pedestal. In this can be placed Spiræa Japonica, which is very decorative with its wealth of foliage and bushy spikes of bloom, with the assurance that it will keep, as when watered the pan holds the water, and also if carefully watered, there is no danger of drip. Several days' use can be had out of arrangements of this kind; they are beautiful in themselves and stand out when placed on pedestals, as an important unit of the decoration.

ZINC LINED POT COVERS.

Very much stock of almost all kinds of blooming plants present a sad appearance after any one night stand; this is because they get dried out. By being placed in the zinc lined pot covers they are insured of plenty of water and can be used for several continuous days. This combination can be farther enhanced by the addition of long slender vases, which can be tied to the main stems of the palm in the center, and will hold sprays of long-stemmed flowers, which have the appearance of belonging to the plants beneath. The main feature of the combination is that they can be prepared the day before and lightens greatly the labor and saves valuable time on a busy day.

At Christmas time a very effective combination of this kind is poinsettias with variegated vinca vines, with sometimes the addition of a well-flowered pot of stevia as an addition. The effect of the brilliant poinsettias and the white margined leaves of the long vinca vines is very striking.

Where there are long tables to be decorated and cut flowers are desired, a time saver is made with what might be called cork bark miniature plateaus. Strips of cork bark, mossed down the center to near the ends, may have a small cocus or other palm or two as half centers. These foundations are filled out with bronze and green galax leaves or leucothoe sprays the day before and do not require many flowers to make them effective when they are about to be used.

PACKING PRECAUTIONS.

All palms, ferns and other foliage plants of any size, should be tied in before being sent out, and when packed for the return trip. A time saver for this purpose is elastic tape or bands about one inch in width, such as armlets are made of. These are made into bands of the size desired, that will slip over the pots or tubs from the bottom, and when drawn up bind the foliage either over one wrap of paper or without. Such preparation is worth far more than the time it takes in the saving of damage to the plants that so often occurs in the hurried work incident to decorating.

When southern smilax is used, it will pay the day before to look it over, straighten out the tangles, cutting away the heavy sticks, and lay the natural sprays back in the case, giving them a good sprinkle. It can then be quickly used and valuable time has been saved by this foresight.

CHECKING LISTS.

Always make a list of everything required, to be checked off when the stock goes out; this avoids the return or call to the place for more. This should be checked up again on the return, when any missing plants, vases or other articles may be at once traced. Ofttimes in public buildings, janitors or others are not above putting a plant or two away, or there may be careless help who overlook a pedestal or two or a nest of pot covers, which come in handy for the next decorator, and are frequently appropriated and lost to their proper owners.

A tool box with nails, tacks, wire, hammers, shears, etc., should always be kept in readiness and taken along, as it may be wanted immediately, and if not there, the helpers have to stand around until such useful articles are procured. Specifications should always be in the hand of the man in charge. The one who took the order may not be able to be present, but if his ideas are on paper the work can proceed as laid out and not have to be taken down when half completed, as is too often the case. K.

National Floral Corporation

Hugo Mock, who is president of the National Floral Corporation, 220 Broadway, New York, called at this office May 4, on his return trip from San Francisco, Calif., and explained that the new firm of which he is the head has been organized to extend the demand for the delivery of flowers at a distance by advertising in various ways, principally through the newspapers and magazines, and to establish a national florist or representative of his concern in each city. Mr. Mock says the customer can order the flowers direct of the national florist in the city in which he wishes them delivered and the National Floral Corporation will guarantee satisfactory delivery or refund the money, all transactions to be on a cash basis. There will be only one representative of the corporation in each city.

Co.'s international Panama-Pacific exposition silver and bronze bowling trophy to be awarded to the member of the Society of American Florists, National Association of Gardeners or American Association of Park Superintendents making the highest individual score in the contest which will be held under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, in San Francisco, the third week of August next, when the meetings of all the named organizations will occur in that city.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Gus. Raasch has placed an order for a new greenhouse, 36x200 feet, with the John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago.

PLANT NOTES.

Winter Flowering Geraniums.

With all growers having a greenhouse and doing a retail business there is in the fall a good demand for pot geraniums for house culture. Plants lifted from the open ground and potted in the fall are not very satisfactory, for the plants recover from the later transplanting slowly and go out of bloom, and often do not flower again until spring. It is better to grow plants for this purpose in pots through the summer and these with good culture will bloom all winter long if in a sunny position. Cuttings taken at this time will make nice stock for this purpose, or small plants left over after the spring sales can be used. The plants should be potted firmly so that they will make a short, stocky growth, and kept well pinched back throughout the summer, that as many branches may be procured as is possible. All buds should be picked off as soon as formed, allowing no blooms until the plants are firmly established in blooming pots, in which they should be planted the last of August. A 6-inch pot makes the best size for house culture and the plant can be easily grown so that it will fill this size nicely. A frame outside is the most convenient and best place for growing them through the summer months.

Aphine Mfg. Co's Trophy.

To Be Awarded for Highest Individual Bowling Score at Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Stevia.

If the stevia cuttings have not been rooted this should be attended to at once. As these plants grow very rapidly they are generally the last to be propagated, but the rooting of any stock in June is always attempted with more or less chance of failure unless under the most favorable conditions. As soon as rooted they should be potted in 3-inch pots and placed in a cold frame, the pots plunged in the soil and shifted into large sizes as required. Keep the plants pinched back until the middle or last of July, when they should be potted in their blooming pots and placed in quarters safe from high winds and early frosts. The dwarf stevias may be grown in the field, being kept pinched back during the summer and potted the last of August or first of September.

Peonies.

The peony is one of the most important flowers to the florist during the early part of June, and they are used in large quantities for decorations and other floral work. In cutting peonies for market, especially those that are to be shipped, it is best to cut them when the first petals unfold, and allow them to open in water. They ship much better in this condition and also last much longer. Where they are allowed to remain on the plant until open the flowers not only bruise more or less in transportation, but the petals drop more easily when the flowers are unpacked if they are open when cut and made ready for shipment. In cutting the flowers from the plant, many growers make the mistake of cutting too low. The demand of the customers is of course for long stems, but for the good of the plant there should be left two well-formed leaves upon the stem when the flower is cut off. This will allow enough foliage for the plant to continue its growth and thoroughly ripen off. Where the plant is cut back too severely the root action is injured and a diminished number of flowers will be the result in the succeeding year. Keep the plants tied up by stakes and strings outside of the row; a heavy rain when the plants are heavy with buds will often knock them down and ruin many of the flowers.

Dahlias.

Although the dahlia is of very robust growth and comparatively easy of culture yet it is one of the most tender plants and will not stand any cold treatment, for the slightest frost will check the growth and almost invariably kill the plant back. It is then too early yet to plant the clumps except where all danger of late frosts has passed, but the eyes may start into growth during the warm days of May, so they should be kept in safe and warm quarters. Where the grower has a good, tight frame that is frost proof the clumps can be taken from storage and placed in the frame and the tubers will grow plump and the eyes break ready for planting as soon as the weather grows warm enough. The place selected for growing them the coming season should, however, be prepared, the ground spaded deeply and if not manured last fall, some well-rotted manure spaded in. Many growers do not advise heavy manuring when the clumps are planted and especially no fresh manure, much preferring to get a fair supply in the ground the previous fall so that the rankness will be dissipated in the soil, for too strong manure causes a rank growth, and the plants do not bloom as early. With enough manure incorporated in the soil to produce a good hard growth, and not too soft, and then mulch with manure when the buds begin to set, is the manner of some of the most succesful growers. The young stock that was propagated from clumps started in March should now be good, stocky little plants, and the last of the propagating should be done early in May to have good stock for June planting. Keep the young plants under safe cover and plunge the pots in soil to keep them moist and not require too frequent or too heavy watering.

Ardisias.

One of the most popular berried plants for Christmas is the ardisia, but it is not grown as generally as it should be, the production being left to a few plant growers, for it is of very easy culture, the only drawback being that it is of very slow growth. The seeds of the old plants are now thoroughly ripened and should be sown at this time. They germinate slowly and should be sown about an inch apart, in rows the same distance apart, and they can then be left in the seedbox until early summer, and potted in 2½-inch or 3-inch pots, and grown in a warm, lightly shaded location. They should be potted in good fibrous loam and kept in a moist close house that all the growth possible may be obtained at this time, for the plant naturally checks in winter. In early spring these young plants will flower and produce a crop of berries for the next winter. The plants that have been grown for three years or more have generally passed the ornamental stage, for they lose their leaves and have a "leggy" appearance. When they reach this stage the tops can be rooted and a fine plant obtained. This can best be done at this time of the year by cutting into the stem and wrapping the cut with wet moss firmly tied around. Keep the plants in a warm, close atmosphere and the moss continually damp, and in four or five weeks new roots will grow in the moss, when the top can be cut off and potted, still keeping the plant in the same temperature until new growths start. This operation will not interfere in any way with the plants blooming, for they frequently set an abundance of buds while the top is making new roots. The brown scale is the greatest enemy of ardisias even in the young stage and they must be removed at once when found, for they sap the strength of the plant. The older plants should be frequently sponged with strong nicotine solution.

Ficus Elastica.

While the rubber plants do not enjoy the popularity that they did ten or more years ago, yet there is always more or less demand for good small plants every fall and cuttings rooted now and given good culture can be grown to fine stock at that time. Every plantsman will have plants of Ficus elastica that have outgrown the salable size or have lost many of the lower leaves and the tops of these can be propogated during the warm weather. The best way to root the young plants is on the plant by mossing the cut. Make an incision in the stem about half way through, in which insert a small stick about the size of a match stick to keep the cut open. Bind around the cut wet moss which should be firmly tied on with raffia and kept wet constantly. The plant should then be placed in a warm, moist house, kept fairly close, and in two or four weeks the roots will be seen protruding from the moss. The top should then be cut off and potted in a 4-inch or 5-inch pot and grown in a warm, close house until the roots have become established in the soil. If a number of these plants are being grown, a mild hotbed can be made up outside, built up with boards so as to allow 18 inches of room between the soil and glass, and covered with a shaded sash. Plunge the pots in the soil and if the frame is kept close, allowing air only on the warmest days, the plants will grow rapidly. As fall approaches more air can be admitted and the plants gradually hardened off and splendid stock will be the result.

HOUSE OF CARNATION ENCHANTRESS AT V. BEZDEK'S RANGE, WILMETTE, ILL.

Baltimore & Ohio to Observe Mothers' Day

Mothers' day will be fittingly observed next Sunday by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and its employes, in accordance with the annual custom of this company of urging this prettiest of all tributes from the men in its service as well as encouraging it on part of the traveling public.

In an official communication bringing the matter to the attention of the employes, the men in official positions, those who operate trains, toil in the shops, guard the tracks at night and work in other grades of employment, have been reminded of the beauty of the sentiment, and it is urged that each of the 60,000 men on the pay roll of the company pay this tribute to his mother or to her memory by wearing a carnation, the emblematic flower of the day.

Passengers on trains of the Baltimore & Ohio next Sunday will be afforded an opportunity to participate in the plan of honoring mothers, instructions having been issued that a supply of carnations be carried on all dining cars operated over the 5,000 miles of line. A boutonniere will be given to each patron of the cars with the compliments of the road. White carnations will be given to those whose mothers have passed away, while those who have not experienced this sorrow will be given a red flower.

OUTLOOK PROMISING.

Business during the past week has been exceptionally quiet. Large shipments have made an oversupply, and the market, until Saturday, had a glutted appearance. Saturday, May 1, stock cleaned up well, but at very low prices. There was a good demand for sweet peas and yellow marguerites for May basket work. Roses went poorly all week, many being sold for $5 per 1,000. Eight cents seemed to be about the limit on everything except American Beauties, and many of these sold as low as $1 per dozen for six-foot stem stock. Carnations went slowly at from $1 to $2 per 100. Sweet peas moved very well throughout the week, 50 cents to $1.50 per 100 being received for good, clean stock. Callas and Easter lilies are selling poorly. The plant trade has picked up a trifle, hydrangeas, rambler roses, rubber plants and pandanus being the leaders.

May 3.—Business started this week with a promising outlook for Mothers' day. The dark days we have had caused a shortage and as stock cleaned up very well Saturday and the retailers report a brisk trade, the prices on nearly every line has advanced. Carnations sold at from $2 to $3 per 100 today, and retailers are anxious to place orders for the Mothers' day trade. Roses also advanced in prices, the demand for them being very strong. From all appearances the week coming should bring a better market than we have had for some time past, and many prophesy that if weather conditions are good we will have a far better Mothers' day than in previous years.

NOTES.

Monday, April 26, a thunder shower, accompanied by a wind of great violence, swept through Newton, Lower Falls, Wellesley Hills and Needham, causing a great amount of damage. The range of greenhouses owned by Thomas Capers at Wellesley Hills was practically a complete loss. The wind pushed his 30x300-foot house about six feet from its foundation, and the whole structure collapsed, making a complete loss. Contrary to newspaper reports, the two small houses and boiler house remained intact. Mr. Capers is very optimistic, concerning his loss, considering the amount of damage inflicted, and after planting his young stock in the field, he will commence to rebuild.

Paul Richwagon, at Needham, also suffered from the storm. His shed and chimney blew down, causing damages amounting to about $250. Two men, who were working in the shed at the time, narrowly missed serious injury. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. lost a considerable amount of glass, when a row of new sashes on cold frames blew on to the greenhouses. About 1,000 lights of glass were broken.

James Millen, connected with Bramen Dow Co., was struck by an automobile Saturday, April 24, death soon following. Mr. Millen was well known among the trade, and was held in high esteem by the many growers with whom he had occasion to transact business.

Penn, the Florist, had a good May basket trade Saturday, May 1. He advertised a sale of baskets of yellow marguerites and used 10,000 flowers for the occasion. Business has held up very well with him, a very large amount of funeral work being done.

Mrs. Robert Montgomery, of Natick, Mass., fell and broke a bone in her wrist as well as receiving a severe bruise on [illegible] Friday, April 30. She is abl[illegible] now, but will carry her [illegible] for a few weeks.

CUT PRICE SALES DEMORALIZE MARKET.

The market continues quiet. The weather was warm the forepart of the week and cooler the latter part, but stock in general has been plentiful. The retailers have had their own way but do not appear to appreciate it, especially the downtown florists, who endeavor to find out who can sell at the lowest price. Why do not the retailers in general follow the example of one of the house of Rothschild, who upon an inquiry as to how he became rich replied, "Why, easy; I bought cheap and I sold dear." If the retailers would follow this it appears things would be better. As an example, one florist offered two dozen carnations for 25 cents; another came back offering them for 15 cents. This demoralizes the business and is good neither for grower, wholesaler nor retailer. Roses and carnations were sold at low prices. Sweet peas that had wilted somewhat fell into the slump. Of course, all greenhouse flowers are at war with outside stock.

The Late John Zech.

NOTES.

The opening of the new Lindell Dry Goods Emporium and that of Klein's store called for many flowers, several hundred American Beauty roses being used for the latter. The retailers supplied several floral pieces from all portions of the city.

The Grand Leader took advantage of the big glut and offered special floral inducements to their patrons. These sales are great advertisements for this firm and more remunerative than newspaper advertising.

Illustrated posters are out advertising Mothers' day, but will the prices kill it as they did McKinley Day? The public can not understand two dozen white carnations for 25 cents and then two dozen for $2.

The wholesalers have a hard time during the glut. An order for $2 comes in for immediate delivery, requiring automobile service and deliveryman. Where is the profit?

The Red Bud Floral Co. had some very large funeral orders during the past week. Dominic Bova seems to have completely captured the Italian colony.

Grimm & Gorly believe in practical advertising. Last week they sold sweet peas for two cents per bunch, roses one cent each. Growers, get busy.

Ostertag Bros. have an immense show of decorative plants at their stand on Washington avenue and Jefferson street.

Mullanphy Florists, Grimm & Gorly, Foster the Florist and Alex. Siegel were on the war path May 1, with special sales.

E. Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill., are shipping heavily to this market in carnations. H. G. Berning handles their stock.

Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had heavy sales in carnations and sweet peas during the past week.

George H. Angermueller's cut flower department under the able management of Fred Alves is flourishing.

Alexander Waldbart & Sons are busy with their landscape and general nursery business.

A fine stock of plants and cut flowers are always on hand at F. H. Weber's.

The park department is busy with its flower beds and floral season decorations.

Jules Bourdett is busy planting out and has a splendid supply of plants.

The St. Louis Seed Co. seems to be rushed at planting-out season.

C. Young & Sons had a handsome assortment of hydrangeas.

The Eggling Floral Co. reports trade good at both of its stores.

Julius Dilloff is with us and reports trade good.

John Held has a splendid variety of all plants.

TAXING GROWING STOCK.

The last act in the local florists' tax case was played last week, when County Treasurer, Frank A. Crothers, visited the various greenhouses in the city and collected the taxes that were assessed on the growing plants. The total amount paid by the florists of this city was $3,121.39. This amount represents tax on growing plants only, and was collected for five years back, in some few cases. The growers here are the only ones, in this state, who have been subjected to this tax and the inequality is self-evident. The present state officials recognized the injustice of taxing this business in one county, only, and endeavored to find a way to alleviate the injustice, but, under the present state taxing laws, nothing could be done, as the tax had been held by the courts to be legal and there was no manner in which they could be remitted or annulled. For the coming, and all future years, all florists in the state will have to pay taxes on their growing plants, unless the present laws are changed. It is even doubtful whether the conditions can be relieved without an amendment to the state constitution. However, the local tradesmen are not discouraged over the additional burden on their business but are determined to make it up by growing more and better plants and selling more, to make up for the loss.

The usual spring rush is in evidence at all the local greenhouses. Every company has on additional men, trying to get out their orders on time. The retail concerns are having their usual heavy mail order business and trade conditions here do not reflect any hard times.

The last week in April has been so warm that active preparations are now being made for out-door planting. Most of the spring plowing is done and many of the companies will start planting out this week.

Summers and Durr, successors to Summers Brothers, are building two new houses, which, when completed, will about double the present glass area of the plant.

The Reeser Plant company intends to double its acreage of vincas and all the other companies are figuring on increased areas in the various lines carried by them.

OBITUARY.

John F. Cowell.

John F. Cowell, director of the South Park Botanic Garden, Buffalo, N. Y., for the past 20 years, died suddenly, May 2, about 5:30 p. m., age 63 years, heart disease being the cause of death. Mr. Cowell was a botanist of national reputation, being an authority on orchids and other rare plants of the tropics, and whose opinion and advice on their culture was sought by many. South park had about as fine a collection of plants, shrubs, etc., as any place of the kind in this country. Mr. Cowell's large acquaintance with others in the collection of rare plants enabled him to easily acquire many collections which would have cost the city thousands of dollars. He returned from Cuba and Jamaica about two weeks ago, where he had been since the carnation convention in Buffalo with Dr. Britton of the New York Botanic Garden on a collecting tour. Before assuming the superintendency of the botanic garden, Mr. Cowell was for 10 years principal of one of the Buffalo public schools, and while in the school department devoted all his spare time to the cultivation of rare plants and flowers. He was an ardent devotee of chrysanthemums and the exhibition of these plants at South park each fall was a wonder to all on account of the excellence of the many varieties displayed. Mr. Cowell was a member of the Society of American Florists, Chrysanthemum Society of America, The American Carnation Society, American Association of Park Superintendents, the Buffalo Florists' Club and many others. For many years he was a lecturer on botany at the Buffalo university.

Mr. Cowell was born in Boston, Mass. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Adelaide Moulthrop, and one son, Francis W. Cowell. The funeral was attended by delegations from the Buffalo Florists' Club and several other societies. The honorary pall-bearers were the park commissioners; active pall-bearers, W. J. Palmer, Dr. Leo Smith, Chas. Huson, Wm. Bott, Frederick Busch and David Seymour.

W. A. ADAMS.

The death of John F. Cowell comes to us as a great shock. It is hard to realize that that big, strong, kindly man shall be with us no longer; that the stores of knowledge gathered by that fine brain—broad, reaching into almost every field of human endeavor, abstrusely scientific, minutely practical—from now on shall not be ours to draw on at will.

His was the broad vision and the clear. He had lived long and seen much—I sometimes thought he had seen all that was really worth seeing in this world—and seen it from every view point. The shams and deceits of his fellows were clear glass for his eyes and with it all was the kindly, humorous tolerance.

We who were priviledged of his friendship received much from him and none of us could return it except in small part.

Truly a man has gone from us.

W. N. RUDD.

John Zech.

John Zech, the well known wholesale florist and senior member of the firm of Zech & Mann, Chicago, died at the Columbus Hospital at 10 a. m., Thursday, April 29, after an operation for appendicitis performed April 24. He had been ill but a short time and was on duty at the store up to the day previous to the operation, when he suffered a sudden attack and was obliged to go to his home. His condition was so serious that an immediate operation was necessary, and while nearly everyone in the market knew he was dangerously ill, they were startled on Thursday to hear that he had passed away. Mr. Zech was 53 years of age and was born at Laporte, Ind., August 20, 1861. He was a stone cutter by trade and entered the florist business in 1892 when George and Peter Reinberg opened their wholesale store under the firm name of Reinberg Bros. Mr. Zech acted as manager for Reinberg Bros. for about six years, when he resigned to accept a similar position with J. A. Budlong. He left the employ of this firm and worked for several months for Winters & Glover and later had charge of the city trade for the E. C. Amling Co., leaving the employ of the Amling Co. about nine years ago, when he and Mathias Mann entered into partnership forming the company which is now known as Zech & Mann. He was a member of the Society of American Florists, Illinois State Florists' Association, Chicago Florists' Club and Cook County Florists' Association and was a familiar figure at many of the S. A. F. conventions. He was actively interested in the trade societies in his home city being responsible to a certain extent in bringing about the consolidation of the Chicago Florists' Club and the Cook County Florists' Association. He was also a member of the Catholic order of Foresters, St. Matthew's Court, No. 650, and the Knights of Columbus, Ravenswood Council 1009, and an ardent worker of St. Gregory's parish and could be found at all the church festivals and was one of the leading members of the parish committee. The day before he was taken sick he attended to some work pertaining to the Catholic employment bureau in which he was interested and which was organized to find work for the unemployed. He was a great family man and spent most of his spare moments at home with his wife and children. He had a great many friends in the trade, being known for his honesty in all his business transactions and if he thought he was right on any subject he would devote all of his efforts to the cause and his determination to be right was the secret of his success in business and responsible for the host of friends that he had. The funeral was largely attended by the retail and wholesale florists and growers, and the large number of beautiful floral tokens that were sent to his home showed the esteem in which he was held by his followmen. The funeral was held from the home at 1837 Summerdale avenue, Monday, May 3, at 10 a. m., with services at St. Gregory's church and the remains were laid to rest in the family lot in St. Boniface cemetery. Peter Reinberg, George Reinberg, Mathias Mann, Chas. Gross, Chas. Wuench and John Hellgeth were pallbearers and the Catholic Order of Foresters attended the services in a body. Mr. Zech is survived by a wife and four children, Mrs. Amelia Cunningham, Caroline, Allie and Leo Zech.

RAFFIA has advanced 15 per cent since the beginning of the war.

ACCORDING to the Kansas City Star, the newest way of wearing cut flowers is at the wrist, tucked into the cuff.

HAIL as large as baseballs is reported from St. Louis, which goes to show that the weather is trying to keep up with improvements in projectiles.

BY wearing a primrose, the favorite flower of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, Englishmen continue to pay tribute to his memory. April 19 is the date of the observance.

Crop Income Taxable.

Income from farm products and crop share rentals must be included in tax returns of income for the year in which they are sold for money or a money equivalent, according to a decision of Commissioner of Internal Revenue Osborn.

Texas Jasmine Crop.

E. J. Sheffield, of Alvin, writing April 29, says the jasmine crop prospects are somewhat more promising.

Mrs. J. W. Carlisle, of Alvin, writing May 3, says if the present warm, moist weather continues it is expected the earliest buds will be ready about May 15.

The Peony Crop.

In addition to the reports on the peony crop given in last issue, page 772, from Missouri, Indiana and Illinois, we can now present the following from other sections:

West Newbury, Mass.—T. C. Thurlow & Sons say peonies are a few days earlier than usual, but not enough to affect the blooming season. The ground is very dry, thus checking advance.

Reading, Pa.—Bertrand H. Farr, president of the American Peony Society, advises that the peonies in his section were late until the recent warm weather brought them on to normal.

Holland Flowers for Wounded Soldiers.

The Society of Netherlands Bulb Growers has decided to send cut flowers as gifts to the hospitals for the wounded of the belligerent nations, according to a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News. The international women's congress will pay the express cost and purchase the boxes to contain the flowers, while the bulb growers will see to it that the blooms are carefully packed and sent to the trains free of cost. April narcissus will be sent and there may be late tulips, but no hyacinths, as their scent is too strong for the hospital wards.

Mothers' Day at Washington.

Mothers' day, May 9, will be observed in Washington by special services in the house of representatives. The official programme arranged under the supervision of Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, Pa., the originator of the observance, will consist of a reading of the Mothers' day prayer, the reading of the president's Mothers' day proclamation, and the reading of a Mothers' day recitation written for the occasion by James Whitcomb Riley. There will be also a presentation of the American flag and the singing of the national anthem. Similar services will be held in the churches and public institutions of other cities, as the movement for the observance of Mothers' day has become nationwide.

A. L. Miller Has a Birthday.

On May 1 a large number of relatives and friends assisted A. L. Miller, the well known and popular grower of East New York and Jamaica, to properly celebrated his fiftieth birthday. The celebration took place in the evening and the company did not disperse until the "we sma" hours. The Miller home at East New York was handsomely decorated for the occasion, the scene being enlivened by a fine display of Japanese lanterns. A sumptuous banquet was served and there were speeches, music and dancing.

Though Mr. Miller is fifty years old, it is a fact that he does not look to be over forty and he says he feels as young as he ever did. There were a number of handsome presents, the most notable and unique being from his sister, Mrs. Biederman. It was a collection of fifty $5 gold pieces dated in rotation of the years from 1865, the date of his birth, to 1915. These were worked into his monogram, being secured on a background and framed. Among members of the trade present were, Frank Traendly and wife, Charles Schenck and wife and A. Demeusy, wife and daughter.

Mr. Miller is an ex-president of the New York Florists' Club and a member of the Society of American Florists, and both he and his estimable wife are highly esteemed by a wide circle of friends, both in New York and elsewhere, and they are worthy of all the good words said of them at his birthday celebration.

Ohio Taxation of Florists' Stock.

The last act in the Springfield, O., florists' tax case was played last week when County Treasurer, Frank A. Crothers, visited the various greenhouses in the city and collected the taxes that were assessed on the growing plants. The total amount paid by the Springfield florists was $3,121.39. This amount represents tax on growing plants only, and was collected for five years back, in some few cases.

The Springfield growers are the only ones in Ohio who have been subjected to this tax and the inequality is self-evident. The present state officials recognized the injustice of taxing this business in one county only, and endeavored to find a way to alleviate the injustice but, under the present state taxing laws, nothing could be done as the tax had been held by the courts to be legal and there was no manner in which they could be remitted or annulled.

For the coming, and all future years, all florists in Ohio will have to pay taxes on their growing plants, unless the present laws are changed. It is even doubtful whether the conditions can be relieved without an amendment to the Ohio constitution.

German Soldiers Want Flower Seeds.

Berlin, April 21.—The soldiers at the front are asking for flower seeds. The newspapers print letters suggesting that seeds inclosed in packages and sent to the front can be used for planting on the graves of soldiers and in other ways.

British Grow Flowers on Battlefield.

British Headquarters, France, April 21.—Among the many incongruities of the present campaign not the least strange contrast is that between the waging of trench warfare and the gardening which is carried on in many places by the British soldier near the dugouts. In some cases the small plots of growing primroses and daffodils are not more than 200 yards from the enemy.—New York World.

The Hague, City of Flowers.

DeGraaff Bros., Ltd., Leiden, Holland, sent last year, gratis, part of their surplus, a surplus unusually large on account of the war, to this city to be planted in the public parks. Altogether they sent about 450,000 bulbs, principally tulips, daffodils and iris. By this generous gift the people even in the poorer quarters have a brilliant display of flowers all around and everywhere.

SPECIAL SALES HELP MOVE OVERSUPPLY.

The same conditions of oversupply that prevail in other parts of the country have hit this city and retailers are being offered splendid concessions by growers and wholesalers to buy in quantity. Special sales have been numerous since this condition existed and prices were never so reasonable at this time of the year. Funeral work keeps up nicely and weddings and social events are filling out a void between Easter and Mothers' day. Stock is of fair quality. Carnations are much better in quality and are selling better also. Sweet peas are splendid and find a ready sale and roses are exceedingly plentiful, being offered at many stores at cut prices.

CLUB MEETING.

The meeting of the local florists' club, which was held at S. N. Peck's store April 27, was one of the most interesting meetings that have been held recently. Arthur C. Kneisel, advertising manager of Schramm Bros., and publicity man of the club, gave an interesting talk on advertising and ways and means of creating flower buyers. He recalled the splendid success that had followed last year's cooperative advertising campaign for Mothers' day, when every florist large and small in the city had completely sold out. As a result it was decided to see the various florists and growers and line them up for a more energetic campaign than ever.

NOTES.

An important real estate transaction was completed last week whereby Frank Schramm becomes the sole owner of the property at the corner of Cherry and Beacon streets, where the business of Schramm Bros., florists, is located. The new owner is one of Toledo's youngest and most progressive florists, and since his entry into the business world about four years ago has increased the business of Schramm Bros. in a remarkable manner. It is the intention of Mr. Schramm to remodel the greenhouses on the place this summer, after which he plans to erect on the corner of Beacon and Cherry, one of the most modern and attractive flower shops that can be found in the west.

Another employe of E. A. Kuhnke, wholesaler of East Toledo, has been killed by the electric road that runs through his premises. This is the third one to meet this fate within a year. When it came to settling up the claim under the Ohio workmen's compensation act, Mr. Kuhnke suffered a shock when he was informed that he must pay a penalty of $500 for an accident for which he was entirely innocent. NATIONAL FLORAL CORPORATION

The only organization in the United States for the sole purpose of educating the general public—the people who buy—to buy more flowers, especially as gifts to friends out-of-town in place of other presents.

It does not conflict with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, or any other reciprocal arrangements between florists.

National Florist

THE SIGN OF A NATIONAL FLORIST.

No commission to be paid for the orders received.

The business will come direct from the customer. All the National Florist will have to do is deliver the flowers in good taste and in good order, and keep the cash. It will be a cash with order business.

The National Floral Corporation wants one exclusive representative florist in each city in America to take care of the orders which will be created by the advertising service this corporation will render. The best florist is wanted.

There Will Be One National Florist In Your Town—Will It Be You?

Send for booklet giving full details of what the National Floral Corporation will do for the florist. You will be delighted with the plan. Write today and learn how to be that ONE.

BUSINESS MUCH BETTER.

Business has improved considerably since last week and stock is not as plentiful as it has been and prices are much higher. Carnations have been in very good demand all this week, and with the exception of Enchantress the better grades in some instances brought as high as $4.00 per 100 the opening of the week. Prices are expected to advance considerably over the advertised quotations for Mothers' day, as some of the houses are refusing orders for same now and others are asking higher figures. Roses are in fairly good supply, but are moving well and will very likely clean up before the week's business is over. American Beauty roses of exceptionally fine quality are arriving in good supply and the same holds good for Mrs. Chas. Russell, which are moving well, considering the unusually large receipts. Ophelia roses are more plentiful and the same may be said of Sunburst. Richmond, Milady, Hadley, Mrs. George Shawyer, Prince de Bulgaria, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney Queen, Killarney, White Killarney, Double White Killarney, Rhea Reid, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Cecile Brunner are in good supply. Orchids are none too plentiful and gardenias are scarce. Sweet peas are not as plentiful as they have been and are selling at better prices. Lilies are in good supply and so is lily of the valley, snapdragons, irises, stocks, tulips, daffodils and jonquils. Lilac is to be had in large supply, but is selling at good prices.

MOTHERS' DAY PROCLAMATION.

Mayor Thompson issued a proclamation, May 4, for the observance of next Sunday as Mothers' day. It follows:

The custom of setting aside a day in the year as Mothers' day has grown until its observance has become general. It should be a day marked by every man, woman, and child for observance as a tribute of respect to one of the greatest sentiments that the world is capable of—mother love.

In accordance with the authority vested in me, I hereby proclaim Sunday, May 9, as Mothers' day. I urge that upon that day all who can observe it wear a white flower and commemorate the day by some action done as a token of respect and affection for his or her mother.

WILLIAM HALE THOMPSON,
Mayor.

ANNOUNCEMENT

IT is with much sorrow that we announce the death of our Mr. John Zech, senior member of our firm, which occurred on Thursday, April 29.

Allie J. Zech who has been identified with our firm for many years has been appointed manager which is a sufficient guarantee that all our customers will receive the same honest treatment and the same careful consideration as they have in the past.

Beauties-Roses

Daisies, candytuft, pansies, trailing arbutus, mignonette, lupines, amaryllis, calendulas, cornflowers and forget-me-nots are among the offerings, and the first peonies of the season made their appearance this week. Gladioli are more plentiful, but are bringing fairly good prices, especially the home-grown stock. The Mothers' day trade promises to be very good and it would not be at all surprising if the market cleaned up completely in all lines, as was predicted in these columns two weeks ago.

NOTES.

The A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co. has moved from its old quarters on South Peoria street into its handsome new factory building at 1302-1308 West Division street, near Elston avenue. The new building is 75x150 feet and four stories high, and is well lighted and sanitary in every respect. A large basement gives them additional room, and taken all in all, it is one of the finest factory buildings in the city. The Arnold Co. is well known to the trade, for it has been manufacturing flower boxes for the past eight years and has a large list of customers who are located in almost every section of the country. C. B. Arnold is in charge and is ably assisted by Joe Marks, who will call on the trade in the future, and who is well known through his former connection with this concern and other leading supply houses.

A large number of people in the trade attended the funeral of the late Mr. John Zech, senior member of the firm of Zech & Mann, on Monday, May 3, an account of which will be found in the obituary column this week. Every branch of the trade was largely represented, especially the growers, and the unusually large number of floral offerings that were sent to the home shows the high esteem in which he was held by his fellowmen. The trade will greatly miss Mr. Zech, for he was an active worker in club affairs and at the club picnics and his untimely death was a great shock to everyone.

Felix Reichling says that Peter Reinberg had a cut of 35,000 roses one day last week, which was the largest since his brother, Emil Reichling, has been in charge at the greenhouses. Stock came in so fast on that day that no attempt was made to grade it, but everything was placed in water after enough pots had been secured to hold it all.

George Economopulus says that trade has shown considerable improvement at the Alpha Floral Co.'s store this week. This firm will start to remodel its place as soon as the Memorial day trade is over, and when all the alterations are completed, the proprietors will have one of the most beautiful establishments in the loop.

The funeral of John Daly, who has been conducting the store formerly owned by L. Hoeckner, at 1115 Clybourn avenue, was held from the home on April 29, and interment was at Arlington cemetery. The late Mr. Daly was practically a newcomer in the trade, but made a host of friends during the short time that he was engaged in business.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are receiving a large supply of fine roses from the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette as well as a fancy grade of carnations from the V. Bezdek range. Mr. Pyfer says that carnations are in brisk demand for Mothers' day and that prices on same have been very satisfactory.

Kyle & Foerster expect to move into their new quarters at 160 North Wabash avenue in a few days, where they will be better situated to handle their increasing business. John Kruchten will move into their old store as soon as they move out, and the change should be beneficial to all concerned.

The A. Dietsch Co. is experiencing a busy season and Fred Dietsch says that the largest single carload of greenhouse material ever shipped out in the history of the concern, was shipped out this week. This firm has just received an order from R. Scheffler of Wheaton for a new house 36x250 feet.

The Garland Manufacturing Co. is building a new conservatory for Bernard J. Schmirer, proprietor of the North Shore Floral Co., 849 Irving Park boulevard. The Garland Co. has also booked an order for a new house for Fred L. Deserns, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are manufacturing baskets and a few samples of the goods that they have to offer are now on display at their store. Their line is somewhat different from the rest and is attracting much favorable attention among the local buyers.

H. N. Bruns, chairman of the committee which was to make the necessary arrangements for the florists' club banquet, says it has been postponed indefinitely on account of the death of the late Mr. John Zech, who was a member of the committee.

Fred Lautenschlager, with Kroeschell Bros. Co., has been happy as a lark since April 30, when Mrs. Lautenschlager presented him with twin baby girls. The mother and babies are doing fine.

Wietor Bros. are cutting from a nice crop of Sunburst roses, which are of unusually fine quality. The demand for stock for Mothers' day is unusually brisk and a clean-up in all lines is expected.

H. Van Gelder says that orders are numerous for carnations for Mothers' day this week, and that an exceptionally large supply of stock will probably enable him to fill all orders in full.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg and Sinner Bros. are now comfortably located in their new wholesale store at 158 North Wabash avenue, where they will be pleased to meet old acquaintances.

Jimmy Perkins, who helps out at A. Lange's store on Saturdays and during the holidays, is still in the St. Joseph hospital, where he was recently operated upon for appendicitis.

Philip L. McKee, of the John C. Moninger Co., left this week for New York City on business, stopping off at Detroit, Mich., enroute.

A. E. Hunt & Co. have rented floor space from D. E. Freres, who has a wholesale stand on the second floor of the Atlas building.

Miller & Musser are receiving large shipments of southern-grown gladioli, mostly Mrs. Francis King and America.

C. G. Anderson has resigned his position as superintendent of the plant department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., to accept the management of the Minneapolis Greenhouses at Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Anderson will take his family with him and he will be ably assisted in the office by his daughter, Miss Pauline, and son, George.

The George Wittbold Co. is having so much landscape work to do now that the help in the retail store is called upon to lend a hand occasionally. The writer would have liked to have taken a snapshot of the store boys planting boxwood trees last week when they were all arrayed in their Sunday best, for the handsome looking young fellows certainly attracted a great deal of attention.

Weiss & Meyer Company of Maywood are still growing American Beauty roses on a large scale and are now cutting some fine flowers from stock planted a year ago last April. Paul Weiss takes great pleasure in showing the visitors about the greenhouses and the latch string is always out at this establishment.

H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, Can., who is here on business this week, says that his outdoor tulips are nearly all in bloom now, which is about three weeks earlier than last year.

Wm. Lubliner, the South Wabash avenue florist, delivered a large floral piece which was a replica of the Paramount shield to Orchestra Hall building on May 1, when the Paramount Moving Picture Co. took possession for the summer months. The piece was 7x8 feet and stood on a large 10 foot easel that cost in the neighborhood of $40 alone. The sky, land and water were all reproduced and the entire piece was encircled in a large number of small red stars which represented the leading players in the Paramount employ. American Beauty roses, palm leaves and 60 bunches of immortelles were used to carry out the idea.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is showing a fine line of roses at their store, which consists of all the best new, as well as the standard varieties and particularly noticeable are the exceptionally fine Mrs. Chas. Russell. Otto W. Frese says that the first shipment of peonies arrived last week. The Mothers' day trade is very brisk at this house and orders for this occasion are still arriving. At Morton Grove over 275,000 carnation plants have been set out in the field during the past week.

Peter Morgen of Huntingburg, Ind., was in the city this week when he placed an order for rose plants with Wietor Bros. Mr. Morgen worked for Wietor Bros. about nine years before he started in business for himself and now has quite a large range of glass devoted to American Beauty and other roses which are consigned mostly to the St. Louis market. He reports that business has been quite good with him and that he is thinking seriously of enlarging his place this year.

Allie Zech has been appointed manager of the firm of Zech & Mann and is thoroughly capable of assuming charge for he has been connected with this house for a great number of years and was to have taken charge anyway on July 1, when his father expected to take things a little easier. Mr. Zech will make good in his new position and the firm's customers can rest assurred that they will be taken care of as honestly as in the past.

Philip C. Schupp with J. A. Budlong is busy showing his friends his fine collection of Indian relics to which he recently made a valuable addition. If Mr. Schupp's collection was not quite so large, he could probably be induced to make an exhibit at one of the Florists' club meetings.

John Walsch of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association has recovered his gold watch which someone stole while he was at work one day last week. The police located it in one of the local pawn shops soon after he reported that it had been stolen.

Kennicott Bros. had several shipments of peonies this week and have started to book orders for same for Memorial day. The new telephone switchboard ordered several weeks ago has finally been installed and is now in working order.

Bassett & Washburn report business as very good this week with a heavy demand for carnations for Mothers' day. C. L. Washburn was greatly missed at the store on May 4, when we were informed that he had left on a trip to Aurora.

The Retail Florists' Association met at the Hardware club at Randolph street and North Wabash avenue on Monday evening, May 3, when some goods were sold and the general market conditions were discussed.

Erne & Klingel are filling a large number of orders for cut lilac, which is seen in large supply at their store. Baby gladioli are to be had in large supply at this house.

Hoerber Bros'. fancy home grown gladioli continue to attract much attention in the local market and are in good demand with the local buyers.

Senator Denvir's bill providing for a vote on issuing $1,000,000 bonds by the west park board of Chicago, was passed by the state senate, April 29.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Bismarck, West Randolph street, Thursday, May 6, at 8 p. m.

Joseph Ziska & Sons are very busy in the wire department and the force is kept on the jump all the time to keep up with the orders.

Robert Northam says that George Reinberg has had an unusually large cut of roses, especially Killarney, the past week.

Daniel Branch's store at 313 East Fifty-first street was partly destroyed by fire on Friday, April 30.

Harry Nicholson has accepted a position as gardener at the Evanston hospital.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is handling a large cut of lilac this week.

A. Miller, with A. Henderson & Co., left this week for Texas.

MARKET SHOWS IMPROVED TONE.

The stock in some lines appeared to be a little off the past week, in consequence of which there were fewer flowers, and what appeared to be an improved tone to the market. A number of large weddings, at which quantities of flowers were used, also helped. Owing to the violent extremes of the weather, with the glass at 55° one day and over 90° the next, it is hard to keep some of the roses free from mildew. American Beauties are fine and hold up fairly well in price. Carnations are plentiful, very best white bringing but three dollars. They are quoted at from $6 to $8 for white, for Mothers' day, while other colors are offered for half. From the early inquiries it appears that the observance of the day will be greater than ever before in this city. This week winds up the daffodils and all other bulbous stock. Snapdragon has been very fine and was offered in immense quantities, the very low figures at which it was quoted making it the choice of many customers. Sweet peas are now quite a bit off, the hot days of last week shortening them very perceptibly. Easter and calla lilies are sold away down, the market being very full of them.

CLUB MEETING.

The May meeting of the florists' club was well attended, the feature being a talk by Adolph Farenwald about the coming national flower show. His statement that when the doors were open the revenue from various trade exhibits, programmes, catalogues, etc., would be sufficient to pay all expenses, leaving the gate for velvet, was the best news yet. He is sure the show is to be a great success. The summer outing and games of the club are to be held at Scheutzen park the second or third week of June. George Asmus and John Young of the national flower show committee, met the local committees Sunday, May 2, and went carefully over the situation. They expressed themselves much satisfied with the outlook and anticipate an exhibition that will be a record breaker in very many respects.

NOTES.

Mark Mills, who keeps, as it were, a telescopic view of things ahead, says that conditions are changing and the growers will have to change with them or fall behind in the race. He sees a shortening of the supply of cut flowers for next season, beginning with the chrysanthemum. He claims such a course as this is the only way to raise prices, and that a number of the level headed men of the business see it this way and are trimming their sails accordingly. He thinks hot house vegetables will be a side line with many of them.

A lady, who had her window boxes filled with yellow pansies, and which were a blaze of color, saw her florist and requested that other colors to the amount of half in the boxes be planted. She was obliged to do this, owing to the importunity of her friends, who claimed she was giving assistance and aiding the cause of the "votes for women movement," which has adopted yellow flowers as the official color.

At the suffragette parade, Saturday, May 1, in which 10,000 women took part, there was a great demand for yellow flowers. Some of the auto's were elaborately decorated with all kinds of yellow stock, together with yellow ribbons.

A large floral fair or flower market is to be held in Rittenhouse Square, May 16, similar to that of last season. It is to be much larger than that of a year ago and will be distinctly a society event. The proceeds are for charity.

American Beauty roses and snapdragons are features with the Leo Niessen Co. Cornflowers are also a feature, as are carnations. The cut for Mothers' day, it is believed, will be the largest they have ever handled.

Mr. Brunswick, of the M. Rice Co.'s force, in his enthusiasm, got into the game with such energy that he broke his arm. We might have expected this of Bobbie Shock, who is most strenuous, but so far has escaped injury.

H. H. Battles is fitting up his new addition next door to the Century as a show room for garden and other pottery. The finest work in this line will be seen here.

The department store cut flower counters or departments are carrying large stocks these days and appear to be handling quantities of flowers at low prices.

Jos. Heacock has lately handled some immense cuts of roses from Roloff's greenhouses. A number of new sorts will be planted the coming season.

Edward Reid says: "We are ready, and will have the best quality of white carnations in town, bar none—the genuine Reid brand. K.

Bayside, N. Y.

Frederick M. Richter, who two years ago leased the "Oaks" greenhouses, formerly known as the Taylor estate, has put the range into good shape. He is growing orchids, lily of the valley, roses and carnations. The range comprises about 60,000 square feet of glass. He is also running the farm which comprises 200 acres.

Charles Thienel is preparing the ground for a new house, 25x151 feet. The construction will be by the Lord & Burnham Co.

S. Szybillo is already planting chrysanthemums, also asters. He will plant nearly 20,000 chrysanthemums.

At O. J. Mertt's a good general stock was noted and Mr. Mertt is already very busy with spring work.

DULL BUSINESS CONTINUES.

From one stanza of Louis Carroll's humorous poem on the Walrus and the Carpenter, we learn that:

"The time has come," the walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax,
Of cabbages—and kings—
And why the sea is boiling hot—
And whether pigs have wings."

At the present time nearly everybody in the wholesale cut flower district would rather talk of "many things" than the condition of business, for business continues very dull. There is considerable stock moving but at sacrifice prices. Saturday, May 1, there was some improvement, not so much in prices, but there was nearer to being a clean-up than on any previous day of the week. The latter part of the week was quite cool and generally cloudy, which may, for a few days, somewhat check the influx of stock. The market is yet flooded with lilac and will be for some time, as the native crop is now coming in. In addition to this there is a good supply of various flowering shrubbery. American Beauty and other roses, gardenias and carnations continue cheap. It would appear that good sweet peas go better than most other stocks.

May 3.—Saturday, May 1, seems to have been the best day for business that the trade has seen for a number of weeks. Though there was no great advance in prices, business was active and there was a fair clean up. A number of important weddings are booked for this week, but there are few other social functions that will call for decorations. Arrivals of stock are light today and there has been a fair movement in the wholesale district.

CUT FLOWER EXCHANGE.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the cut flower exchange, was held at Moquin's restaurant, Sixth avenue and 28th street, May 1. The following directors were re-elected: G. C. C. Schrader, Elmhurst; Jasper McMullen, Whitestone; P. Haas, College Point; Victor S. Dorval, Woodside. It was the largest vote cast since the organization of the exchange. George Golsner, College Point, and Adam Greener, Woodside, were elected inspectors of election. After the stockholders' meeting adjourned the directors held a meeting and the president, secretaries and treasurer were re-elected as follows: John Schneider, Astoria, president; Charles Beckman, Elmhurst, treasurer; Victor S. Dorval, secretary; P. F. Kessler, Woodside, assistant secretary. The financial condition of the exchange was shown to be good. Thomas Jackson continues as marketmaster.

NOTES.

A visit to the florists that are near Holy Cross cemetery, Brooklyn, found them all busy and apparently prosperous. The range, formerly the property of the late D. Y. Mellis, which comprises between 50,000 and 60,000 square feet of glass, is in very fine condition. There is an immense stock of geraniums, coleus, bedding begonias and all other stock necessary for successful bedding work. There is a nice store for design and counter trade. W. D. Boyd, late of Rochester, N. Y., recently took the position of foreman at this range. We judge that he is a clever man and a capable grower. The business details are managed by Mrs. A. D. Mellis. Thomas J. Dixon, also near Holy Cross, has a neat range and a good stock of bedding plants. A third firm, H. Giese & Son, are engaged largely in cemetery work.

On May 1, J. H. Small & Sons arranged an elaborate decoration in the ball room of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, the occasion being a "white breakfast" by the Rubinstein club, a musical organization. The eight columns were banked with dogwood and the same blossoms were profusely and artistically used in festoons, on the balconies. As there were 1,500 ladies present the capacity of the ballroom was overtaxed. The overflow was seated in the foyer, where around a sunken garden and a group of statuary a large circular table had been arranged. The sunken garden was a mass of white blossoms. The table decorations were of American Beauty roses and white carnations.

In one of the large show windows of David Clarke's Sons' store, 2139-2141 Broadway, at 75th street, we noted a fine representation of a wedding decoration. In the background and along the aisle approaching the prie dieu, there was a wealth of white hydrangeas. White daisies, palms and ferns completed the decoration. This firm has just issued the following notice to its customers: "Hereafter no orders for cut flowers or plants will be taken for Sunday delivery. All cut flowers intended for Sunday's use will be delivered Saturday afternoon late, extra precaution being taken in packing same in order that they may keep fresh, if box is placed in a cool room unopened until wanted."

John B. Nugent, of Young & Nugent, 42 West 28th street, is making great improvements in this store. He recently extended the show window and made other improvements in front. Now the wooden ice box in the store has been removed and is being replaced by a new one with a plate glass front. Mr. Nugent and his staff have been very busy recently with decorations and funeral work.

Louis Schmutz and his son, Louis, Jr., Brooklyn, have a great stock of foliage plants, all in good condition. Ferns, dracænas, Pandanus Veitchii and many other plants are seen at this range in variety. Louis Jr. recently had the misfortune to have his right wrist badly sprained and is carrying it in a sling but keeps at work with the other hand.

Charles Habermann, 2608 Broadway, has been quite busy recently with wedding decorations and outdoor planting. It is not too late to state that Mr. and Mrs. Habermann are the proud parents of a son now six weeks old. Their only other child is a daughter, aged fourteen years.

We found our old Brooklyn friend, G. Messeberg, busy and cheerful as usual. He grows a mixed stock of cut flowers and bedding and flowering plants and all are in good condition.

Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., in addition to his other duties is now very busy on the plans for the national flower show to be held at Philadelphia in the spring of 1916.

With other good stock, we have noted at the store of Guttman & Raynor, Inc., a very fine lot of Ulrich Brunner roses from Victor Zuber & Sons, Whitestone, L. I.

Trepel & Bershad, Brooklyn, at their store, called the "Blossom," in addition to cut flowers are now handling a large stock of fruit trees and flowering shrubs.

John J. Misner, who now conducts the retail store known as Hartman's Rosery, 2654 Broadway, is showing very clever features in floral arrangements.

Otto Mueller, Woodside, who now has the S. Schiloskie range, is growing a fine stock of table ferns and vegetable plants.

The news of the death of Prof. John F. Cowell came as a shock to his friends in this city.

James Coyle has removed from 104 West 28th street to 102, one door east.

John Mallon is now quite recovered from his recent illness.

At the closing meeting of the season, the following scores were rolled by the New York Florists' bowling club:

H. C. Riedel	174	178	189

New York Autocar Station.

One of the largest and most completely equipped motor truck garages and service stations in the country was formally opened at 553-557 West Twenty-third street, New York, last month. It is the new quarters of the Autocar Sales Co., a factory branch of the Autocar Co., Ardmore, Pa., makers of the celebrated Autocar delivery vehicle, now used by many of the prominent florists throughout the country. The Autocar Sales Co. was formerly located on West Nineteenth street. Rapidly increasing business necessitated larger quarters to take care of the big list of Autocar owners in the metropolitan district and the old Twenty-third street building of the United States Express Co., a block long, was purchased. For many months it has been in the hands of the Autocar Co.'s engineers and workmen undergoing remodeling, until now in its completed state it represents the most advanced ideas in facilities for the exhibition, housing and maintenance of commercial motor vehicles. Invitations were sent out to Autocar owners and other business men in New York and vicinity to visit the building on the opening days as the guests of Walter T. Savoye, the local branch manager. Service to owners, as developed by the Autocar Co., consists of a very complete programme, all looking to the prolongation of the life of each car and the maximum of usefulness in all lines of delivery work. At this new building in New York, just as at the company's branches in other cities, Autocar owners are encouraged to take advantage of the garaging service, which includes daily inspection of cars, washing and polishing, caring for minor troubles, and the adjustments which every piece of machinery requires from time to time. The sales and show rooms are at the Twenty-third street front and the entire rear of the ground floor of the immense building is given over to garaging space.

Removal Notice

IT is with pleasure that we announce the occupation of our handsome new factory building at 1302-1308 West Division Street (near Elston Avenue), which will hereafter be our headquarters. Our new factory is well lighted, easily reached, sanitary in every respect, and considerably larger than our old quarters on South Peoria Street, which enables us to take even better care of all orders than in the past. Get in touch with us in regard to your next supply of folding flower boxes, for the quality of the stock we are offering is so reasonably priced that you cannot possibly afford to place your order elsewhere.

STOCK MOVES SLOWLY AND PRICES LOW.

Fine weather has caused an overproduction in the local cut-flower market, and what little is moving goes at a very low price. The only outlet for any of the varieties was in design work, which has been about normal. Garden planting and landscape gardening has started with the favorable weather, and the gardeners and nurserymen are working their full forces. The florists have enjoyed a splendid season in blooming plants and have cleaned up on this stock. With Mothers' day near at hand, local florists, realizing the impossibility of securing white carnation stock in supply equal to the call, are doing all in their power to educate the public to the fact that Mothers' day is a flower day not limited to one color or variety, and are talking roses and other flowers effectively.

J. Bolgiano & Son are taxed to their full capacity in all departments in keeping up with orders. Spring bulbs have been in heavy demand and stock in many lines is depleted.

Edwin A. Siedewitz has a full force working at the nurseries, and it keeps them busy keeping up with the demand. He reports a splendid sale in all blooming plants.

Samuel Feast & Son are much pleased with business conditions, having had a splendid season. They anticipate excellent Mothers' day business.

Thomas Vincent has had a successful season. He sold out completely in plants.

HEAVY CUTS IN STOCKS AND PRICES.

The market here has held up remarkably well of late, considering the warm weather we have experienced for the past two or three weeks. Cuts on everything have been enormous, and it is certainly surprising to the wholesalers how well it moves, but when prices are kept down as low as they are at present, it can always find an outlet. The supply of roses and American Beauties is exceptionally strong, and it does not take long for roses to fly wide open during these warm days. Carnations continue to hold their own and we are expecting a good supply for Mothers' day, but, it seems, there never is quite enough stock to go around for this event. Most of the local carnation growers report that they are entirely over their heavier spring crops, but will, however, have a fairly good supply for the end of the week. The planting season is now over, but the greenhouse men are kept quite busy disbudding their plants, as the troublesome side-shoots seem to thrive best at this season of the year. The season for sweet peas is about over now, and we might add that this has been one of the best, if not the very best, seasons for peas. Bulbous stock is not much in evidence and it is very seldom that one sees any more inside tulips, daffodils or narcissi now. Good lilies are scarce, and are seldom seen any more.

NOTES.

Ross Adgate, traveler for the McCallum Co., has entered a new venture for traveling men, by adopting a Ford roadster with large sample case attached, for use in calling on his trade. This is probably the first instance in the business of this means of travel, and he will cover his Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana and West Virginia territory in much better time and ease than heretofore.

Albert T. Lorch has installed an electric light plant in his boiler house which furnishes light and power to his greenhouses, stable and residence. Mr. Lorch designed and built the entire system himself and is justly proud of it.

We are looking for a large attendance at the next meeting of the florists' club, May 4, when Dr. Jennings, of Carnegie Institute, will give an illustrated lecture on "Rambles in Northwestern Ontario."

J. M. Johnson has kept things hustling at his three stores, in McKeesport, Braddock and Homestead. He always takes advantage of the gluts, and moves large quantities of goods at low prices.

T. P. Langhans has sold his summer cottage at Allison Park and expects to locate his summer home in Bakerstown soon.

Nick Marron has added a department for cut flowers to his large confectionery business. G. C. M.

GREENSBORO, N. C.—C. Scott & Co., seedsmen, have added a wholesale department.

THE Marlow Seed Co., Wichita, Kan., has taken over the business of the Wichita Central Seed Co.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Lively business is reported by local seedsmen. Prices on clover are 25 per cent higher than last year.

THE Dutch government has prohibited the exportation of grass seeds. It is thought this may be revoked after the sowing season is over.

NEW YORK.—Some seedsmen are offering in the daily papers first size named gladiolus bulbs, as low as 75 cents per hundred bulbs, prepaid.

BROADVIEW, MONT.—The Broadview Seed Co. has been incorporated by Thomas S. Hunt, M. I. Warden and M. J. Kastenholz; capital $30,000.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—J. R. Peay & Co., seedsmen, say: "We are having all we can do to keep up with the demands made upon us. Business is good with a vengeance."

ROSWELL, N. M.—The Roswell Seed Co., the Roswell Produce Co., and the Farmers' Supply Co., following a merger, are now trading as the United Seed and Fruit Co.

DUTCH seeds to be exported from that country must be of Dutch origin (not German) and so certified to by the local burgomaster, this to prevent seizure by the allies.

AN order has been issued by the German chancellor, prohibiting the exportation of field beet seed, a step evidently taken to prevent enemy countries from getting German seed.

VENTURA, CALIF.—The Hogue-Kellogg Co. is inviting members of the American Seed Trade Association to visit the bean fields of Ventura county on their California convention trip next month.

SOUTHERN FRANCE cables of May 5 indicate an asking price by the Syndicate Agricole of 90 francs per 1,000 for whole crop white Roman hyacinth bulbs, 19 francs for Narcissus Paper White Grandiflora, 20 francs for freesias.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Richard Wagner, president of the Wisconsin Sugar Co., has returned from abroad with a large supply of sugar beet seed. Wisconsin is assured of a quantity sufficient to supply beet growers in that state for two years.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Ten thousand packages of seeds and bulbs for the school children of this city have been supplied on contract by Louis H. Schaeffer & Son, seedsmen. They also supplied flower seeds, bulbs and lawn grass seed for the governor's mansion and the city parks.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 5 were as follows: Timothy, $5.50 to $7.00 per 100 pounds.—A. H. Goodwin, of the W. W. Barnard Co., who has been fishing at his country home in Indiana, returned to this city May 3.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—P. W. Hardin, president of Hardin, Hamilton & Lewman, seedsmen, whose store was destroyed by fire, April 1, places the firm's loss at $40,000, practically covered by insurance. The firm is now located at 228 West Main street.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—The proposed Illinois seed law was withdrawn by the agricultural committee May 4, after a conference with the seedsmen represented by Geo. S. Green, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago; Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; John M. Clark, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, and H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Walter Bodger, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., has returned to his home from the hospital, where he was operated upon for appendicitis, but it will be some weeks before he is able to resume work. This firm reports the loss of a considerable acreage of sweet peas and many of its other flower seed specialties were destroyed by winds early in April and had to be sown again late.

Potato Group Classification.

"Group Classification and Various Descriptions of Some American Potatoes," a professional paper by Wm. Stuart, horticulturist, has been issued by the bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, as Bulletin No. 176, dated March 27, 1915.

In dwelling upon the almost hopeless state of potato nomenclature and the growing need of some simple and fairly reliable method by which the student and grower can recognize well enough at least to place potatoes in the groups in which they belong, the bulletin presents a classification key and 29 plates, reproductions to exact scale of the following varieties: Irish Cobbler, Bliss' Triumph, Quick Lunch, Early Michigan, Early Rose, grown in Maine and Minnesota; Early Ohio, Prize Early Dakota, Late Beauty of Hebron, Columbus, Pride of Multnomah, White Beauty, Burbank's Seedling, Russett Burbank, Green Mountain, Gurney's White Harvest, Rural New Yorker, Carman No. 3, Pearl, Blue Victor, Improved Peachblow, grown at Carbondale, Colo.

Varietal descriptions are also given of many varieties of potatoes of present or past commercial importance. The increasing necessity for intelligent study of the numerous varieties is clearly demonstrated by the large number of old varieties offered to the public each year under the guise of new names, which has naturally led to much confusion. The recognition of old varieties under new names is almost certain to result from such study, and should tend to discourage the tendency to manufacture new varieties out of old ones.

Federal Plant and Seed Law.

The new federal law intended to protect agriculturists and horticulturists from the importation of vegetable pests, such as the San Jose scale and other forms of plant life, became effective April 8, 1915.

The new law provides that it shall be unlawful for any firm, person or corporation to deposit in the United States mails, any package containing any plant or plant product addressed to any place within a state maintaining an inspection thereof, without plainly marking the package so that its contents may be readily ascertained by an inspection of the outside.

Omission to mark a package of this kind is punishable by a fine of $100. On receipt of a package containing plant matter, it is sent to the state department of agriculture, where it is inspected. If no signs of plant disease are found, the sender is notified, and on receipt of the necessary postage, the package is again sent to the postoffice, where it is forwarded to the consignee. Where scales or vegetable life is found, the entire shipment is at once destroyed.

Ants Steal Seeds.

An observant plant grower recently stated that he believed the seedsmen were often blamed for selling poor seeds when the actual facts were that ants carried away the seed after it was sown. He said that he had recently sown about $30 worth of seed, in flats, and he was willing to believe that the ants would get half of it before it had a chance to come up. This is the little red ant so well known to florists. The industry and co-operation of ants are proverbial. My informant stated that he had watched their work with much interest and when a seed proved too heavy for an individual ant, two or three others would turn in and help.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Taxed to capacity, and in one instance using a night and day force, local seedsmen report that there seems to be no let up to orders, notwithstanding the fact that dry weather has caused a lull in the call for garden seeds. A good rain would bring a big demand from market gardeners.—Downs & Co. report a very good season, and are working a full force.—Griffith & Turner Co. report a successful season, the demand continuing good in all lines.—J. Bolgiano & Son are busy in all departments. An extra force is needed to keep up with orders.—R. J. B.

Market Gardeners

Vegetable Growers' Association of America.

M. L. Ruetenik, Cleveland, O., President; Daniel R. Comly, Philadelphia, Pa., Vice-President; S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky., Secretary; E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., Treasurer.

COLUMBUS, O.—At a meeting of market gardeners held in this city, April 10, a committee to plan the organization of a state vegetable growers' association was named.

M. L. RUETENIK, of Cleveland, O., president of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, is being endorsed for membership on the board of control of the Ohio State experiment station.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Cauliflower, per dozen, $2.00 to $3.00; Cucumbers, 90 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to 50 cents; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 25 cents to 40 cents.

Mexican Tomatoes for United States.

A shipment of 9,400 cases of tomatoes raised near Atlanta, Sinaloa, Mexico, has been distributed among the Pacific coast cities during March, according to the Los Angeles Examiner. As previously reported by the department of commerce of the United States, during the shipping season which ended in June, 1912, fresh tomatoes to the amount of 257 carloads, having a net weight of 5,860,232 pounds were exported from Mexico to the United States. Last year, the importations amounted to 196 carloads; net weight, 4,289,619 pounds.

Soil Troubles.

Vegetable greenhouse men have no end of trouble from their soils, something that florists avoid by rapidly changing their soils each year. The depth of solid beds and the extent of vegetable houses make a change each year a big job, but decrease of yields or total losses are too serious to be ignored. We have had some trouble ourselves for the first time. Starting with a wornout soil, we found it practically impossible to overdo the feeding. However, as our soil became changed gradually, we have now approached the limit. The first signs of trouble may be found in the reluctance of newly transplanted plants taking a hold. This is emphasized when they are well watered. In fact it is much better to carry such plants along by light and frequent syringing and very little soil moisture until they have a good root system. We believe that the theory that soil moisture is needed in proportion to fertility holds good in practice—the richer the ground, the less moisture and vice versa.

A bad case of sickness is easily induced by an over supply of water. Green house soils become overcharged with food elements because they are not subject to the rigors of the weather. Out-doors, we annually loose very much by heavy rains and snows, often during the dormant period. An overcharged soil out doors is soon corrected by the weather, but not inside. In our own case we have so far received prompt relief from the free use of lime, and believe vegetable growers use far too much manure and not enough lime for best results. Lime should have a place in the yearly rotation, and an annual removal and replacement of a part of the soil is advisable. If possible, this should be also a corrective, thus an intensely black soil would be benefitted by some yellow clay, loam and sand, while a sandy soil would respond to a black soil top-dressing. It is cheaper to correct wrong tendencies as we go than to have to resort to radical measures. As regards sterilization we agree with an old grower who said that the best sterilizer is a gang of Italians with wheelbarrows.

MARKETMAN.

Minneapolis, Minn.

CHEAP SALES ARE FEATURED.

Market conditions have been very unsatisfactory to both growers and retailers, the weather being warm and business quiet, with a heavy supply of bulbous stock in evidence. Cheap sales were a feature in many stores and signs on the window called attention to sweet peas at 15 cents a bunch and tulips, 25 cents a dozen. Carnations and roses were also offered at 25 cents a dozen, and the stock good, which will make it look much like a hold-up when Mothers' day prices are quoted. Sweet peas have already advanced from $3 to $10 per thousand, roses jumped from two cents and six cents, and are now quoted at four cents to 10 cents. Carnations have stiffened in price, the best grade advancing from $2.50 to $4 per 100.

Some of the older florists think Mothers' day a very nice addition to the flower business, but that if the prices are going to be prohibitive at this time of the year, it will soon die out of its own accord, instead of growing as it should do. Who is to blame?

Hans Rosacker has his two new houses, 28x260, well under way. The wind storm, April 28, blew one of them down, owing to the ends not being securely anchored. The loss is mostly in the delay and labor as there was no glass in. He is also going to put up two more the same size when these are finished, using Foley construction.

Several of the boys went fishing last Saturday to Lake Minnetonka and report the croppies being the best and the largest catches in years.

Wm. Desmond of Donaldson's leaves for Hutchinson, Minn., to look after the planting of the parks in that city.

The boys are not showing up at the bowling alleys—most of them say they get enough exercise hustling plants.

John Rovick, father of J. S. Rovick, of Rice Brothers' staff, died suddenly Saturday, May 1, aged 58 years.

The florists' windows have been very attractive of late, with a great variation of taste in the displays.

Oscar Amundson was on the sick list last week, but is around again.

Visitor: Mrs. Della McDonnell, of Osage, Iowa.

T. C. R.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Chicago Avenue Floral Co. has petitioned the city for permission to annex two houses of semi-iron construction to its range.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

VISITED CHICAGO.—Jas. Meiklejohn, representing H. Frank Darrow, New York.

DES MOINES, IA.—Fire, which started in packing material, caused small damage at the Watrous Nurseries, April 24.

PROSPECTS for fruit in Nebraska this year are the best for the past five years, according to J. R. Duncan of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society.

STITHTON, KY.—The Kentucky Farm & Orchard Co. has been incorporated by S. L. Smith, F. J. Watts and W. M. Brown, of Louisville. The capital stock is $50,000.

MOBILE, ALA.—Growers from three states who are interested in orange growing, pecan culture and truck farming, gathered in this city, April 27, for the second annual meeting of the Gulf Coast Horticultural Society.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Mrs. Uriah J. Virgin, wife of the well known Canal street florist, has the distinction of being the first woman commissioner appointed in this city for the park beautification plan. She is commissioner of public parks on and along Canal street.

MISSOULA, MONT.—State Horticulturist M. L. Dean reports that the fruit outlook in the surrounding valleys was never so promising at this season of the year. Weather conditions in western Montana have been especially favorable for both grain and fruit.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Twenty thousand trees, the gift of the city council, were planted May 3, by school children here. Many of the trees were placed in school yards, where appropriate exercises were held. This is the largest number of trees ever planted here at one time and is part of a plan to make the city attractive.

Early Flowering Trees and Shrubs.

It is interesting to note that our gardens depend almost entirely on foreign trees and shrubs for their greatest beauty in early spring. To this general statement, however, there are a few exceptions. The ground under the red maples (Acer rubrum) is now red with their fallen flowers, while the Norway maple (Acer platanoides) is just opening its bright yellow flowers, which will make this tree conspicuous for another week. Two interesting native shrubs, too, the Spice bush (Benzoin aestivale, sometimes called Lindera Benzoin), and the leatherwood (Dirca palustris), have been covered for several days with their small bright yellow flowers which appear before or with the unfolding of the leaves. There are large groups of these plants on the right-hand side of the Bussey Hill road, opposite the upper end of the lilac group. Not very often cultivated, they deserve a place in every spring garden. Among early-flowering American plants is also to be mentioned the shad bush of the southern states, Amelanchier canadensis. This is the largest and earliest flowering of the whole genus, and is often a tree of considerable size. It is now in flower on the left-hand side of the Meadow road, entering from the Jamaica Plain gate, where the general collection of these plants has been arranged. In another week the Arboretum will be gay with the flowers of the shad bushes, for these plants have been largely used in the mixed plantation along the drives. With these few exceptions, however, the shrubs which make the greatest show here in the early spring, the magnolias, Forsythias, cherries, peaches, apples, pears, azaleas, honeysuckles, lilacs and berberis are from the old world.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, April 28, 1915.

Chestnut Bark Disease Quarantine.

The chestnut bark disease has become so serious that in the opinion of the United States department of agriculture it is desirable to quarantine New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, North Carolina, Iowa, and Nebraska, or such portions thereof as may be found to be essential. A public hearing on this question will be held in Washington, D. C., at 10 o'clock, May 18. The proposed quarantine will restrict the movement from this territory of chestnut nursery stock and chestnut lumber with the bark on.

The chestnut bark disease is comparatively recent in this country. Its origin is not absolutely known, but it is believed that it was brought in indirectly from China, where it exists also. In 1908 it was found widely distributed in the Hudson river valley and in the vicinity of New York City. It is caused by a fungus which rapidly kills the native chestnut trees and is spread chiefly by the distribution of nursery stock. Once it has been established, however, it is spread locally by wind, birds, and insects. Migratory birds may also carry the disease for long distances.

Since this disease is proving fatal to the native chestnuts in the infected area, it is quite probable that their place may be taken by chestnut orchards grown for the nuts in areas that have not as yet been infected and from which it is hoped that the proposed quarantine will keep out the infection. At the present time the native chestnut grows in practically all of the territory east of the Mississippi except a section of the costal plain of the southern states, the northern half of Maine, and parts of Illinois and Michigan. For two years after the tree has been killed by the fungus the timber remains valuable, but deterioration sets in after that time.

Manhasset, N. Y.

Henry Lustgarten, who has quite a large range, is cutting fine Enchantress and Victory carnations. Considering the unseasonably hot days of the past two weeks his stock is holding out well. He is also cutting fine Spencer peas. Mr. and Mrs. Lustgarten are somewhat disturbed by their children being sick with measles. There does not, however, seem to be any cause for alarm.

IMMENSE BEDDING PLANT TRADE.

We are having an abundance of rain, so unusual, and everything outdoors is growing immensely. The florists are kept very busy in their bedding plant lines; every store claims that there is much more business in this branch of the trade than has ever before been experienced here. There is also a fairly good demand for flowers right along with a good wedding decoration coming along occasionally.

NOTES.

The State Civic Improvement Association has been formed, with headquarters in this city, its object being to promote a love for the beautiful in out-door surroundings, and developing a true appreciation of flowers, shrubs, trees and lawns in every available location. Dr. Charles Evans, Edmond, Okla., is president, and S. S. Butterfield, Oklahoma City, is corresponding secretary.

Cushing, an oil town about 100 miles northeast, is developing into a good flower buying town; much cut stock is being shipped there and is being handled there by tradesmen in other lines of business—a good chance for some enterprising youth to start a florists shop there.

The Stiles Co. had quite a large wedding decoration to arrange at Paul's Valley this week. This town is 61 miles south of here. C. Bickes, with one of the helpers in the store, had charge of the arrangement.

The Women of '89, an association that does a great deal of good work along civic lines are preparing plans for their annual flower show to be held sometime in June. S. S. B.

Cincinnati.

TRADE CONDITIONS UNIMPROVED.

The market last week showed no improvement over that of the few weeks previous. Supplies of all lines were still very plentiful and kept the market very crowded, while the demand, though fairly steady, was fairly strong. Roses, including American Beauties, are all in a heavy supply. Carnations are very plentiful and lilies sufficient for all present needs are coming in, but there is apparently no especially strong demand for them. Some very fine orchids may be had. The first of a new crop of sweet peas has just made its appearance and is very good. Other offerings are lily of the valley, callas, snapdragons, gladioli, peonies and irises. New ferns are in the market.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell has been having some very fine eastern American Beauty roses of good foliage and color. He was the first in town to offer southern ferns this spring.

Frank Kyrk and Miss Edna Ganzmiller will marry on June 22. The prospective bridegroom is receiving the hearty congratulations of his many friends in the trade.

Wm. Taylor has been cutting some fine pink and white peas, as well as excellent Gladiolus America.

The local florists' society's regular meeting will be held Monday evening, May 10, at the Hotel Gilson. H.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The bi-monthly meeting of the Connecticut Horticultural Society was held in the County building, Hartford, President Warren S. Mason officiating as chairman. Plans were made for the spring flower show to be held, Thursday, June 10, the proceeds to be divided with the Union for Home Work, a charitable society. This show will be held in Unity hall on Pratt street.

There was an exceedingly fine exhibit of pansies staged by John C. Willard, of Wethersfield. John F. Huss, superintendent of the James J. Goodwin estate, exhibited a rare specimen plant Australian Glory Pea (Clianthus Dempieri). The plant attained a height of about three feet and had six deep red blooms with black centers. Mr. Russ dilated on the cultivation of this plant, explaining the necessity of using extreme care in every detail of its growth to the arrival at maturity, and that it was his ambition to raise about six such specimens, and then he would be content to tackle another such delicate operation. President Warren S. Mason, superintendent of the Pope estate, Farmington, staged a fine collection of the following spring flowers: Narcissi Golden Spur, Victoria and Von Sion; hardy Salvia Greggii, grape hyacinth, Italian hyacinth and Dutch hyacinth, May, flesh color; Gertrude, a rose pink, and King of Blue, a deep purple. In this collection were also white tulips, Banksia rose, and squills. The combined exhibits made an excellent showing. President Mason named Alexander Cumming, Jr., Ed. A. Brassill and A. Righenzi as judges, and they awarded the pansies a certificate of merit, the spring flowers a first-class certificate, and the Australian Glory Pea a first-class certificate, which was duly ratified by vote of the members. The judges also received a hearty vote of thanks. One new member was elected. The next meeting will be held May 14, and will be Darwin tulip night. ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

CLYDE, O.—The Wagner greenhouse has been purchased by Joseph Wetzel and E. H. Stout, of Fremont, O.

FT. SMITH, ARK.—The South-west American, in its issue of April 7, carried an advertisement of George Rye, "Some Florist", covering four full columns, in calling attention to his innovation—"A Dollar Box of DeLuxe Flowers." The display and copy features of the ad were both catchy.

What Retail Florist Establishment
Is Complete Without a Display Conservatory?

The conservatory furnishes the attraction which distinguishes the florist shop from other stores. It is the best advertisement.

Your stock in an ordinary store deteriorates very rapidly.

A conservatory not only keeps it from spoiling but improves it at the same time.

Get our designs and figures, we can help you to make more money.

384-page Catalogue, cloth-bound, covers every phrase of the greenhouse proposition. Estimates and blue prints free.

BRISK DEMAND KEEPS TRADE BUSY.

Trade has been very brisk the past week; floral work has been keeping every one in the trade busy. There have been several large weddings and cut flower sales have been satisfactory. Mothers' day business should be good, and there will be plenty of flowers of all kinds. White carnations will be in supply equal to the demand for this flower and there are still plenty of Easter lilies. Sweet peas are shortening up now, but are still good and daffodils and tulips are still coming in. Geraniums are now starting, and the demand for them is excellent.

NOTES.

H. Howard, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, will give a lecture entitled, "Rose Gardens of America," in the Cranston street Baptist church, May 7, and will also tell about the care and planting of rose bushes of all kinds.

A. Neubrand, representing A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., visited the trade the past week, taking orders.

The seed stores are doing a rushing business. Seed and plant orders for the spring trade are heavy.

Memorial Day Preparations

Memorial Day.

This, the last floral holiday of the season, is a very important event to the florist. It has long been regarded as a sort of clean-up day, as it were—a day, when by some unwritten law, the flower beds must be finished and all work in the beautifying of the lawn and grounds surrounding the residence completed. The lot in the cemetery, the little flower bed or the filled vase, must all be ready for inspection on that day, the grass cut and all trimming attended to, so that the lot will look as well as those of hundreds of others, who, in respect for the day, have taken pride enough to help and ordered the work done.

Memorial day is an opportunity that the trade generally does not work up to anything like its possibilities. In some localities there is a much greater demand than in others. For example, in most of the New England states and principal cities, it is the greatest flower day of the year, while in other equally populous districts the business, particularly in cut flowers or designs for cemetery decorations, is nominal, and the public interest in the floral feature of the day is very small, indeed. There is no apparent reason why Boston and its environs should lead in this respect, but the fact remains that the great extra demand exists, and taxes the facilities of the whole trade to enable them to meet it. The beautiful custom of decorating the graves of soldiers and setting aside a day as a national holiday for the purpose, gives the florist an opportunity that should be taken advantage of and worked up until the custom becomes universal, including as well as those of the heroes, the graves of all loved ones. To establish a custom such as this can not be done in a year; it must come gradually, but it can be hastened by the judicious work of the trade interested. People do not as a rule have a desire or buy what they do not see and the florist must therefore first see the opportunity, study it, and after awakening to its possibilities, immediately set about to bring his customers to his point of view.

There is no better educational medium than the columns of the newspaper. Well prepared matter, relating to the day and its observance and the beautiful custom of decorating, not only the grave of the soldier, but also that of the civilian as well, will make good copy, which will find space as news matter without cost in the reading columns of the best papers. Such articles must have touch and go to them, and enough novelty to draw comment and hold the interest of the general readers to the end. This should be backed up by intelligent efforts of the trade with a generous display of wreaths in variety, priced for all classes of customers, cemetery vases that hold water, with flowers arranged in them, palm leaves with miniature flags and similar decorations, such as G. A. R badges and corps marks, etc. Such displays will be sure to attract attention and get people more in touch with the observance of the day.

The veterans themselves, who have always taken an active interest in seeing that the graves of their old comrades were covered with flowers, will not much longer march behind the martial music; their ranks are fast becoming depleted, and to see that the beautiful custom is kept alive other hands must take it up; it must be made more general, but, with the honored memories of the defenders, always held to be first.

APPROPRIATE EMBLEMS.

The wreath of magnolia leaves is very appropriate for cemetery decoration, and with the addition of a little statice and red, white and blue immortelles, with miniature flags, or tied with tricolor ribbon, an ideal piece is produced that can be made ready in advance, and has simply to be handed out on the busy day. Palm leaves, tied with a knot of tricolor ribbon, and the addition of the same colors of immortelles and small flags, is popular. The magnolia or galax wreath, with fresh cutflowers and the patriotic ribbons and flags, is also a good seller, many preferring the fresh to the dried stock or imitations.

It is astonishing what a quantity of waxed roses and carnations are sold for design work for Memorial day. They are cheap, and many seem not to care what is used, natural or unnatural, so long as the effect is good. Metal wreaths are also favored in some localities and are used in large quantities on account of their brilliant coloring and lasting qualities.

Many persons will always take a few plants with them when they visit their cemetery to fill the vase or hanging basket that is the standard decoration in so many of the lots. All this brings grist to the florist's mill and should be encouraged in every legitimate way by all branches of the craft. K.

Handling of the Stock.

Too much importance cannot be placed on the finishing, care and final handling of the different lines of stock intended for this occasion. A great deal of trouble is saved by having everything in readiness beforehand, and the rush of business which comes during the last ten days can then be taken care of quickly and smoothly.

A good supply of market baskets should be arranged for, so that when the customers are so inclined they can carry their plants. Pansies, verbenas and other seedling plants should be fitted up in small baskets holding one dozen plants, and a good supply should be on hand each day, making sure to have them fresh looking all the time. By having these plants in readiness in this manner the salesman does not have to go to the frames with each customer, consequently, a lot of time is saved. A neat appearing place, with everything handy to serve the customers, is both a satisfaction to the proprietor and a pleasure to the buyers.

Bedding plants grow very rapidly at this time while standing on the greenhouse benches, and if not enough room is given them, they quickly become drawn and spindly. They ought to be cleaned and spaced over whenever there is need of it, so as to have them short, stocky plants. The same applies to late seedlings in flats; they must be transplanted as soon as large enough to handle safely or they spoil quickly. All bedding plants ought to be well hardened off before planting them out in the open ground so that they will not suffer from the change, and will respond quickly to the transplanting. The cold frames can be brought into use for this hardening process, and is a better place now than the greenhouse. For many of the plants, the sash can be taken off or allowed to remain on, according to the weather conditions. Another very important thing is to be sure all the plants are free from aphis before offering them for sale; it is the poorest kind of an advertisement, if the customer, after having purchased some plants, finds them covered with black or green fly. Many of the plants, such as petunias and fuchsias, will need a stake to support them, and this should be attended to in time to allow them to straighten out again before being offered for sale. One stake in the center, supporting the main stem of the plant, with the side shoots drawn up to it with green thread, is the best way of tying the plants.

The question of shading the glass for bedding plants is a problem that is hard to give advice on, due to the changeable conditions of the weather at this season of the year. Last week it was so very warm and a shade would have been very beneficial, but this week the weather is just the opposite, dark, cloudy, cold days with lots of rain. To have shade on the glass under these conditions would be detrimental to the plants. This subject should therefore be goverened according to local weather conditions.

Where considerable outside planting is a part of the business, whether it be flowerbeds, vases or window boxes, it is a good plan to have some sample plantings fitted up at the greenhouses to show customers and to take orders from. The cemetery greenhouse departments follow this plan with their grade and lot plantings, samples of each style and combination of plantings being made up at the greenhouses, thus giving the customer some idea of the different plantings. These samples are usually fitted up with the plants and the grass around them the same as they will be outside, but on a smaller scale. They are made up the latter part of April, in frames, and covered with sash to protect them when necessary against weather conditions.

The routine work of watering, airing, etc., in caring for the geraniums and other plants now in full bloom should receive constant attention; in the rush do not allow them to suffer for want of water or from close conditions in the houses, as plenty of air should be allowed at all time when the weather will permit, always avoiding extreme dampness. Large numbers of the more pretentious flowering plants, such as hydrangeas and rambler roses, in full bloom, are sold for this occasion. These should be prepared for sale before hand so that it will not be necessary for the salesman to have to stop and do any staking or tying up of the plants when he is needed all the time to wait on customers.

A few words regarding the best method of planting and after treatment of the plants is generally greatly appreciated by customers. This can be done in a way to arouse their interest for larger purchases of plants. One of the most important details of the finishing up work of bedding plants, is that of careful planting. This work has to be done with a rush, but that does not signify that it should be done in a careless manner. The plants should be set deep enough in the ground to withstand the wind and so that the watering will not lay bare the roots. Be particular to get the rows even and straight—do not plant several sizes of plants in one bed and expect a neat job. Smaller plants, properly planted, will give a better effect than larger plants planted without any care as regards uniformity.

The cut flower business for Memorial day is a big item to be provided for, but the call is generally for medium price flowers or cheap bouquets. Short stem roses, Shasta daisies, columbines and late tulips are very useful for making up into these bouquets. The better grades of roses, carnations and lilies are best sold by the dozen. Outdoor lily of the valley will sell easily when a good supply can be had. Peonies are the leading sellers when the quality is right, but we cannot always count on the home grown stock being ready and much of the stored stock has not proved satisfactory of late years.

Boxwood, magnolia and galax wreaths are in good demand with the best class of trade and a good supply should be on hand to meet the call.

Floral Designs.

While the florist will probably have demands for many different floral designs, yet the wreath is by far the one most desired for Memorial day. Crosses are often ordered and pillows are also the designs selected by some for Memorial day, but the wreath is adapted for so many locations that it is always, next to the bouquets and sprays, the most popular floral design. Floral wreaths can be made of all the flowers of the season, depending greatly upon the price obtained, but the dealer must be prepared to arrange them at all prices, many desiring this arrangement, for they can be used to fasten upon the monument, lay upon the grave or stand upon an easel. The several green and colored leaves are used in large quantities on this occasion; the galax, both green and bronze, can be made up in beautiful arrangements; the magnolia leaves also are to be had in green and bronze and these make one of the richest wreaths when nicely arranged. Another green that makes up in artistic work is the leucothoe and the cycas fronds are beautifully adapted for backgrounds or intermingling with flowers or other foliage. These prepared and natural leaves have the great advantage of standing the rigors of the weather, whether hot or stormy, and lasting in fine condition a long while. A spray of flowers on one side of these foliage wreaths are a great ornamentation, and can be made so as to please the most fastidious customer.

Cemetery Vases.

The florist located near a cemetery will have many customers come to purchase flowers who have not beforehand provided themselves with any receptacles in which to place them. These people will always be anxious to obtain some vessel which will hold water in which they can place the flowers so that they will not immediately wilt, and if they can obtain such a receptacle so that the flowers will last so much longer it is a great satisfaction to them. We have often seen almost everything from fruit jars to pitchers pressed into services at such a time, and these people who perhaps have purchased their flowers of some other dealer or cut them from their own plants at home, will gladly purchase a suitable vase, if easily procurable. A dealer so situated should have a stock of these vases on hand. They can be obtained in different materials, glass, pottery or iron, and are made very ornamental, will stand hard usage and can be bought so that they can be sold at a very moderate price. Having these on hand and making a good display of them may also materially assist in disposing of much stock, for many persons will often buy when the flowers can be properly cared for who would let the matter go by default or refuse to purchase unless they had the necessary fixtures. Demands for some vase or receptacle in which to place the flowers are often made and the dealer having a Memorial day trade should have a good supply in various sizes.

GALAX CROSS.

Bedding Plants, Etc.

The floral work for Memorial day is not nearly as large in some localities as is the plant trade. In the northern sections of the country the last of May is too early for the setting out of many bedding plants, but throughout the intermediate and southern sections all the plants ordinarily used for beds can safely be transplanted outside, and the demand for these is exceedingly large. The dealer must be fully prepared to meet the call, but of one thing he must be assured, and that is that the plants must be in bloom. At this time the lot owners will desire that the beds make a fine showing. While it is possible at other times to sell plants enough to fill the bed with a few in flower and the rest showing bud, in the beds set out for Memorial day the customer will desire all the flowers possible and the promise of a beautiful showing later will be of no avail. Geraniums will probably be in greatest demand and the popular varieties S. A. Nutt, Alphonse Ricard, Beaute Poitevine and Mme. Buchner will in many cases be far short of the demand for plants in bloom. Pansies are another flower that are used largely in cemeteries and these are particularly adapted for planting in beds that are shaded by trees, but to make a pansy bed last through the season they must be planted in such a location and not in the full sun, and arrangements must be made to keep the bed watered through the warm weather and attention given the bed as far as picking off the old flowers and seed pods or the plants will go out of bloom, and the beds, instead of being a thing of beauty, will be a blot on the lot. Echeverias are used extensively in some cemeteries and they are especially adapted to warm and dry locations and require but little attention, and the other bedding plants such as coleus, alternantheras, heliotropes and stock suitable for small beds, will be in great demand. A plant that the dealer having a good cemetery trade must always have in supply is grave myrtle, Vinca minor. This plant is used in great quantities all over the country to plant over graves and when once established makes a very ornamental feature on a cemetery lot and does not require any great atention. Urns and vases are popular with many who can give them the necessary attention throughout the summer, or in cemeteries where perpetual care is the rule and these will be attended to by the help. If these are not given the proper care, however, they are never satisfactory. Vines are a necessary stock for the dealer having vases to fill. Vinca major and English ivy are the two best and the other vines so freely used in window boxes and vases are also in good demand. One necessary feature which the dealer should impress upon the minds of those ordering vases or urns filled is the replenishing of the soil with good, live compost. It is useless to suppose that plants set out in exhausted soil in the hot sun and whipped by the wind can survive and be ornamental.

The plantsman will surely have demand for specimen plants to place upon the lot or plunge in ground at the base of monuments or foot of the graves, and there are some beautiful plants at this time that can be used for this purpose. The hydrangeas are particularly suited and they make a grand show. The rambler roses are also fine plants and can be easily bloomed at this time. For cheaper plants the spireas are adapted and are very satisfactory. There is one thing in selling these plants that should never be neglected and that is that the plants be given a good soaking of water before leaving the greenhouse, and if this is attended to properly the plant will be in good condition when the lot owner visits the cemetery on Memorial day, but if this is not done and the plant placed on the ground in a dry condition the chances are that it will be wilted when the purchaser sees it and a dissatisfied customer is the result. When the buyers take the plants themselves impress this necessary detail upon their minds.

Sprays and Bouquets.

While there is always a large demand for cut flowers which are taken by the purchasers to the cemetery and arranged, yet as a rule the greatest call is for bouquets and sprays which are placed upon the graves. Those that have provided themselves with vases at the cemetery generally prefer the round bouquet while those not having these will purchase the flowers in spray form, that they may lay them on the grave or fasten them to the monuments. Many of these will be of low price and it is necessary that a large quantity of the cheaper flowers be employed, but generally there is some outside stock, such as lilacs and shrubbery, flowers that can be advantageously used for filling up the bunch. The demand will naturally be in both bouquets and sprays for something that is rather showy and not for the more select flowers and smaller work, as it is the desire of the purchaser to make as good an effect as posible at a distance and not for close inspection. The greenhouses in some cities that are located at the entrance or near the cemeteries do an immense business in bouquets and sprays, the number sold reaching into the thousands and the force frequently having to work all night arranging bouquets. While there are many of them low in price, the majority being one and two dollars each, yet where such a quantity is sold and the necessary stock obtained, the trade, although it entails much labor, is very remunerative. Large quantities of roses, carnations and late bulbous stock are used as well as the cheaper greenhouse flowers such as stocks, spirea and candytuft, and the size of the sprays is increased by the liberal use of green and lilac, Spiræa Van Houttei, deutzia or any outside stock that is procurable. Peonies are one of the flowers, par excellence, and when the season is far enough advanced to procure them in large numbers at fair value, large quantities are used, for they make an admirable display. But the florist is not restricted to any of the several flowers, for everything that is in bloom can be adapted to their use. The outside stock is sometimes quite unsatisfactory, especially if the weather is warm, on account of its wilting, but this can be overcome to a great degree if it is picked the day before and allowed to stand in deep jars of water overnight in a cool place, thereby becoming well filled with moisture. A large supply of greens is necessary, hardy ferns to back the sprays or finish the bouquets, and as well to fill in, and quantities of asparagus, both A. plumosus and A. Sprengeri, are used. Another green that is very useful is the foliage of Spiræa Japonica, the bright, shiny leaves adding materially to the work.

Immortelle Designs.

Wreaths and other designs made of immortelles and other dried flowers are a prominent feature of the Memorial day trade with many dealers. There is one great use that the florist can make of these—they can be arranged some time before, for they will last in good condition for a long time, and a great display can be arranged in the window the week before Memorial day, which will remind many a shopper of the approach and observance of the day and induce many a sale that would not otherwise be made. The immortelles can be obtained in several colors and very pretty combinations arranged and these flowers, as well as cape flowers, can be wired by the force during leisure moments and arranged long before any rush, and if well displayed are sure to attract attention. They can be further ornamented with the preserved adiantum and other vines and they will find much favor with some people. If made up in this manner they are inexepensive either as regards material or labor and will prove to be a paying investment and attract a customer who would not buy flowers on account of their being so perishable, or having to be sent a long distance with no one to take proper care of them. The metal floral work is also shown in large quantities and is popular with some people, for we have seen large numbers of the different designs in many cemeteries. Where there is a demand for this class of work the florist should have a stock on hand, for the purchasers are sure to desire it, and he might just as well obtain the sale as to leave it to some other tradesman, yet if it interferes with the sale of flowers it had better be discontinued as far as the florist is concerned, and let him devote his energies to the rightful product of his business.

GALAX PILLOW WITH CLUSTER.

The Gladiolus.

When any flower has had a mania all to itself, and in addition has standing to its credit two national societies and a magazine, we may safely say, without even knowing its name, that it is one which has made some stir in the floral world. This is the present position in which the gladiolus finds itself. Although both the early and the late varieties have for many years been inmates of our gardens, I am very much inclined to think that I may, notwithstanding its age, truthfully describe it as a coming flower. The following words are an extract from the last "Gladiolus Annual," which is the official organ of the National Gladiolus Society of Great Britain: "It is pre-eminently a flower for the amateur gardener, and the sole reason that its culture has been so neglected until quite lately is that there has existed a quite erroneous impression that it is difficult to grow, and, secondly, that there has been no simple advice obtainable as to the best method of cultivation. Another cause . . . is the high price hitherto asked by the bulb salesmen, for the bulbs." This is doubtless all very true, but the points urged do not seem to be quite a sufficient cause for its not having been more grown in the past. I would like to add to the Annual's reason that of fashion. It is impossible to say why it has not been more popular in gardens, for what the tulip is to May the gladiolus is to September.

Now perchance the gladiolus is going to enjoy an eminence and popularity which have hitherto been denied it. The hard-headed, steady-going Dutch dealers got it into their heads in 1911 that such a time was coming, and from the summer of that year until the autumn of 1913 the fun was fast and furious on the wholesale bulb exchange of Haarlem. The oldest inhabitant had had no experience of anything like it, and to find anyone who had we would have had to call up from their graves the participators in the hyacinth mania of 1734-5. The following facts were told me by a prominent dealer. The whole stock of Glory of Nordwijk sold for 20,000 guelders, and a row of five bulbs of Meteor Bos (now named Scarlet Emperor) sold for £100. Small bulblets were freely dealt in. A hundred of these, of a variety called Panama, were valued at 150 guelders, and one man from Lisse bought £2,000 worth. The pale flesh-pink called America also obtained fabulous prices.

The two national societies are those of Britain and America. Our own came into being in the early part of 1911, and it is run by a lady, or, in other words, a lady is the secretary, namely, Mrs. G. H. Atkinson, The Flagstaff, Locksheath, Southampton. The list of members is not a long one, but it is wonderfully cosmopolitan. England, Ireland, Wales, Guernsey, the United States, France, Canada, South Africa, Egypt, Holland, and New Zealand, all figure in it, showing that many people in many lands have begun to realize the value of the gladiolus in the garden.—Joseph Jacob, in British Nurseryman and Seedsman.

Louis Bauscher Retires.

Louis Bauscher, for many years a florist and market gardener at Freeport, Ill., has tendered his resignation as secretary and general manager of the Freeport Floral Company, which position he has held since 1909. His successor will be Adolph Pitterle of Madison, Wis., at one time an employe of the company.

Louis Bauscher, son of one of Freeport's pioneer gardeners, is one of the best known citizens of that city, and has a wide acquaintance among members of his profession. He founded the Freeport Market Garden in 1883, establishing himself on a fine tract of land. He was very successful and from time to time enlarged the business, adding greenhouses and other improvements. In 1910 he and a number of other well-known Freeport men organized the Freeport Floral company, Mr. Bauscher's greenhouses being included in the merger. He retained the vegetable business.

He is not able as yet to announce his plans for the future. He has always been a hard worker, his sterling business qualities won for him the confidence and respect of all he came in contact with, and the rest that comes with the retirement from the firm he has made so successful is well deserved. A host of friends wish him well.

Floral Decorations at St. Paul Cathedral.

After active competition between the leading florists of the Twin Cities, the order for decorating the new St. Paul cathedral, said to be the largest on the American continent, on its natal day, was awarded to Agnes O'K. Spencer, St. Paul, Minn., successor to August Swanson. As shown in the accompanying illustration, the arrangement was carried out principally with Easter lilies, a suggestion of pink being brought out by using pink azaleas and Pink Killarney roses in pots. The altar arrangement was outlined with palms and Boston ferns, with trailing vinca vines at the upper portions of the altar. The style of architecture of the edifice is what is termed classical renaissance.

San Diego Exposition.

For many years the writer of these notes has been called upon to describe horticultural features of many kinds in many lands, but has never felt that a pen picture was so inadequate as when starting to write of the landscape work at the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego, our southernmost Pacific seaport. In the first place, the setting is absolutely unique. A city of Old Spain has been built on a high mesa, surrounded on all sides by deep picturesque canyons and overlooking the "Harbor of the Sun." To the north is the broken outline of historic Point Loma, while beyond stretches the mighty Pacific. To the south are fertile olive and orange valleys, and in the distance can be seen the mountains of Old Mexico on one side the snow-capped Sierras, and the foothills on the other. Three years ago the site was practically a cactus and sagebrush desert, the soil a most unpromising adobe, hardpan and rock. Today there is a garden in the fullest sense of that good old word over all these hundreds of acres. The buildings fit the site and the gardens are in complete harmony with the buildings. The whole scheme is a most satisfying and perfect picture, worked out with such consummate skill that it has the appearance of an old-world, old-time garden instead of a new planting.

The principal entrance is over a viaduct of seven arches spanning the Canyon Cabrillo, the piers rising from a laguna about 140 feet below. The sides of this canyon, which is nearly a quarter of a mile across, have been thickly planted to eucalyptus, acacias and many other trees, shrubs and semi-tropical plants. It is all green, but the variety in tint and shape of foliage is wonderful. Here is a grey-green expanse showing where the glaucous foliage of Acacia Baileyana and the younger leaves of the blue gum mingle. In other places the funereal looking Italian and Monterey cypresses help to lift the planting and change the line and light, while again the great fleshy leaves of the New Zealand flax stand out stiffly against the softer greens of grevilleas and leptospermums. In a very few weeks the great masses of flower of the scarlet Eucalyptus ficifolia will form a billowy, glorious sea of bloom, this striking tree thriving remarkably well here. Here and there the waving plumes of Phœnix Canariensis give movement and the feathery fronds of Cocos plumosa rise on their slender stems clear of everything else. In the near distance the bronzy tints of lantanas and Abelia rupestris form a delightful foil to the brighter greens. This planting alone, seen as the visitor is entering the grounds, is so fine and so restful to the eye, that even the attractions ahead cannot prevent a tree lover lingering there.

Passing the beautiful Southern California building and entering the Prado, an entirely satisfactory planting and lighting system is cleverly combined.

MOTHERS' DAY WINDOW DECORATION AT J. F. SULLIVAN'S, 214 WOODWARD AVENUE, DETROIT, MICH.

By day the lamps are practically hidden, while at night, when lit, they throw a broken light through to the road and shine back clearly to the white buildings, which are thus thrown into fine relief. The road is flanked with smooth bluegrass lawns, the principal tree planting being a line on each side of black acacia—A. melanoxylon. These are backed up by the glossy green Coprosma Baueri, a wonderful plant for seaside places, but unfortunately too tender for northern or eastern resorts. A good deal hardier and also a magnificent plant where ocean breezes are hard on ordinary vegetation, is Escallonia macrantha. But the coprosma is everywhere in San Diego and it is such an accommodating plant that the landscape men have used it, not only as a hedge or as an individual shrub, but also as a drooping vine and a climber. It calls forth the greatest praise from visitors from the east seeing it for the first time here. Broad shady arcades run the whole length of the Prado, and from these most beautiful vistas of the grounds and the hills and country beyond are obtained. The arches are covered with bougainvilleas, the showy flowers being well thrown out by the white walls of the buildings. As one walks in the cool shade of these cloister-like arcades, a constantly changing view is given. Here, a court with showy little formal garden; there, the entrance to some winding walk that takes one away through the beauties of nature aided by man, and again, a sheer drop down into the canyons, clothed with many varieties of plant and tree, yet losing none of their natural rugged beauty.

The plaza is large and open, and hundreds of pigeons strutting about and flying to the tops of the buildings give a touch of life and movement that is very pleasing. Vines of the solanum and bougainvillea types reach up and over the arches and arcades, and one marvels at the rapidity with which these have covered the space and attained the appearance of having been there for many years. The "art which doth mend nature" is surely exemplified here at its best. Leading out of the plaza to the south gate is the pepper grove. The California pepper, as Schinus Molle is called, is always a great attraction to eastern and foreign visitors to southern California, and here the visitor can not only feast his eye on this lovely grove, but can enjoy a rest, either in sun or shade, and fill his lungs with the salt breezes that sweep up from the Pacific. It is an ideal retreat for anyone tired from a long tour of the many and varied attractions that this great show offers. Here, too, can be seen a lawn that never needs the lawn mower. It is covered with the creeping lippia (L. repens), a plant that never grows above three inches high and is covered in early summer with pretty pink flowers. Californians are indebted to Dr. Franchesci, late of Santa Barbara, for this pretty plant that thrives with practically no water, and very little attention in any other way.

The Botanical Building consists of a large lath structure and conservatories. In front of it is La Laguna de las Flores (lake of flowers) and a charmingly arranged garden. Inside the building is a large collection of tropical and semi-tropical plants, arranged more for effect than for botanical study. Lofty palms and bamboos, aralias, bananas and similar foliage plants, elegant tree and other ferns, are growing with great freedom, while below is a choice collection of dwarfer plants. Perhaps the principal points of interest to a horticulturist is the watering system. Pierced pipes run all over the roof on the under side of the lath, and when the water is turned on an extremely fine mist is produced, almost like a heavy fog. A visitor could remain in it for quite a little while without getting wet to any extent, but still when kept going for any length of time, every part of the atmosphere and building is thoroughly saturated with moisture.

Many of the choicest water lilies and other aquatics are planted in a pool in this house, while dependent from the roof, almost into the water, is a tropical growth of vitis and other vines. In front, quite exposed, is a very telling planting of Nandina domestica, which all winter long has been covered with its pretty, red berries, like those of the skimmia or ardisia. The beautiful palmate foliage of this plant, turning to bright red in autumn, and then the showy winter berries, make it one of the most pleasing.

The Southern California exhibit is a decidedly good one. One of the points it was sought to bring out was the citrus industry, and this has been done by planting long lines of oranges, lemons and others just as they are grown in the commercial groves in this locality. Many varieties of oranges, kumquats, lemons, grape fruits, limes, tangerines and others can be examined here, the peculiarities of habit being one of the interesting points to be noted. Then there is a large number of tender fruits, such as the olive, the alligator pear, the fig and the date, each being planted in sufficient numbers to be an instructive exhibit. Here and there are gateways, with trellises covered with Cherokee roses and yellow jasmines, a pretty combination. A ranch house, typical of hundreds in this section, has been built, furnished, and a garden planted around it, showing how quickly a beautiful home can be made in this favored clime. In the garden proper, near the Southern California building, a choice collection of flowers has been planted. The Matilija poppy, Romneya Coulteri, is one of the hardest subjects known to transplant, but it has been done here, and great specimens are vying with the roses and others in this section.

One might go on writing almost indefinitely of the charms and the beauties of this unique work, but no good purpose would be served. It may be well though to give a thought to the man who has possibly worked harder than anyone else to produce these fine effects. Paul J. Thiene, a young man but a capable one, has worked hard, long and conscientiously in the discharge of his duties here. Mr. Thiene started in February, 1910, and practically everything has gone through his hands. Most of the smaller stock has been raised on the place in the home nursery, but the biggest work has been the removal to the grounds of large trees, picked up in the surrounding country. Practically all the eucalypti were large trees 30 to 35 feet high, while Phœnix Canariensis and other palms weighing from 40 to 50 tons each, have had to be dug, boxed, cared for, and eventually planted to give immediate effect. This is no light job, when the number of plants used is considered. Neither must the good work of John Morley be forgotten. Having proved his ability in the parks here, much of his work in the exposition grounds up to the time of the opening, was of an advisory nature, but since the opening he has had entire charge of everything. Needless to say, that with two such men as Morley and Thiene, the absolute success of the horticultural end of this great show is assured.

Prize Rose Gardens in Los Angeles.

For the purpose of encouraging the people to produce more roses and better roses in Southern California, the Los Angeles Times gave away about 80,000 bushes about a year ago. At the same time it was announced that prizes would be awarded for the best rose gardens. The committee completed its inspection, having reviewed nearly 250 gardens. The judges were Fred H. Howard, Montebello; Frank Lewin, Hawthorne, and Wm. R. Ruess, Los Angeles, and the winners and prizes awarded were as follows:

First. W. P. Bemus, 5732 Harold Way, Hollywood, $200.00.

Second. L. A. McCray, 2100 Canyon Drive, Hollywood, $75.00.

Third. Miss Helen Rosekranse, 211 East avenue, 31, $50.00.

Fourth. Mrs. C. A. Richie, Garfield avenue, Ramona, $25.00.

Fifth. Mrs. Douglas Bradley, No. 4610 First avenue, rose bushes, value, $25.00.

Sixth. Alfred Braun, 207 North Normandie avenue, rose bushes, value, $20.00.

Seventh. H. Cardell, 537 South Manhattan Place, rose bushes, value, $15.00.

Eighth. Mrs. Gertrude M. Loennecker, 3417 Maceo street, rose bushes, value, $15.00.

Ninth. Mrs. W. A. Taylor, Ramona Park, rose bushes, value, $10.00.

Tenth. S. Q. Conkle, Garden Grove, rose bushes, value, $10.00.

With so many gardens entered and so many of them of approximately the same degree of excellence the judges decided at the beginning of their work not to rely entirely on general impressions, but to judge each garden on points with 100 points as the standard of excellence. Size and quality of bud and length of stems were among the principal considerations. Appearance of the plants and foliage, their freedom from mildew or insects, and the character of the trimming was regarded as another important factor. Neatness of the garden, artistic appearance, and the general quality of the collection were the other points considered. A great many of the gardens presented beautiful aspects, but were little more than jungles from a rosarian's viewpoint. In many of them the blooms were allowed to come haphazard. Failure to disbud and properly trim the plants had sacrificed length of stem as well as size and quality of buds.

"It was a fine showing," said Mr. Howard, "but not so good as could be made if full advantage of Southern California's favorable soil and climatic conditions had been taken. The Times has rendered an important service in distributing rose bushes and encouraging rose culture by offering these prizes. The contest was interesting because of the wide range of territory represented and the revelations that it brought of the keen interest in rose culture. It has been instructive, also. A great many of the contestants now know many things about the proper care of rose plants, and if another such show is held I predict that the prize-winning gardens will be 50 to 100 per cent superior."

Frank Lewin also expressed gratification not only with the results secured by amateur growers, but at the interest taken in roses and the tendency to grow more and better roses. Mr. Lewin has set a high standard in rose excellence on account of his many years experience with them, and on this account he has frankly criticised a large number of otherwise excellent gardens because the plants had not been handled as well as they could have been to produce fine, long-stemmed blooms.

On the second floor of the Times building, the cut roses were on exhibition free to all rose lovers. After the show, all the blooms were taken to the County Hospital, where their beauty will brighten the rooms of hundreds of sick persons.

In the fiesta parade held May 1, Howard & Smith took first prize, and Staiger & Munweiler second in the division representing special businesses or organizations. HAL STRAW.

DECORATIVE WORK HELPS MARKET.

During the past two weeks trade may be safely said to have a fairly satisfactory trend upwards. While it is true that a very large quantity of new stock appeared on the market, this was compensated for by the disappearance of such stock as violets, tulips, daffodils and other out-door flowering plants. There has been quite a few large decorations going along and these have been pretty evenly divided among the leading buyers of flowers, and has had the effect of cleaning the market up fairly well daily. The heavy rain storm, and it might be added that it was a very unusual one for this season of the year, put the finishing touches on a great deal of cheap outdoor stock. The supply of roses is not so steady as last reported, and this has helped to stiffen prices over a few weeks ago. Carnations, also, are not in over-supply at the present time, but without any increase in prices. Irises, both Spanish and German, are very plentiful. There seems to be enough of gladioli, also. There are enough orchids to go around, with prices firm. There are plenty of liliums of all varieties, and from personal observation, there will be an abundance for some time to come. Spencer sweet peas are coming in and have completely displaced the winter flowering type at most of the leading stores. The quality is simply grand and very good prices are being received. Last season the Spencer crop was almost a total failure with the growers who supply this market, but all report splendid results this season. Lily of the valley is none too plentiful, but greens of all kinds are in very large supply.

NOTES.

The California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Floral Society, in conjunction with the department of horticulture of the Panama-Pacific exposition, will hold a very elaborate show at the Palace of Horticulture, exposition grounds, May 7-9. They have issued a schedule that shows many generous prizes for stock that is ready at this time. The prizes consist of cash awards and silver and bronze medals. The committee in charge, and they have the services of the veteran H. Plath, are doing their utmost and from the number of entries at hand, we may expect a splendid exhibition.

The schedule of the prizes offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America have reached most of the 'mum men in this section and has proved a great stimulus to their work. It is safe to say that no better chrysanthemum show ever held in the west will equal it. Most of the leading eastern chrysanthemum growers are having their stock grown close to this city by our best specialists, all of which goes to show that the competition is going to be very keen. The adding of Percy Ellings, John R. Fotheringham and Martin Poss to the exhibition committee is well received, as these growers know 'mums from the ground up.

Plans for the sweet pea exhibition at the Palace of Horticulture are running along smoothly. C. C. Morse & Co. have a large crew of men at the exposition grounds under the guidance of Frank G. Cuthbertson and are sparing no effort or expense to make their exhibit a splendid one. Several of the leading eastern seed houses specializing in sweet peas have firms here also looking out for their interests. The very extensive exhibit of sweet peas by America's leading specialists, W. Atlee Burpee & Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., is being grown by the Lynch Nursery Company of Menlo Park, Calif. This collection is also in splendid condition and promises some surprises in Spencers not yet in commerce.

Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, is cutting a grand lot of carnations just now, his Gorgeous being especially fine. He is also going in extensively for Spencer sweet peas this season. These are being grown at his nursery in San Mateo county, where he also grows his 'mums. He has just finished cutting a grand lot of tulips. Arthur Bearsby, the popular financial secretary of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, is in charge here, and the appearance of the two nurseries reflects the greatest credit on this genial foreman. Chas. Bearsby is secretary and San Francisco salesman.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is cutting quite a lot of cattleyas just now and working up a large stock of flowering plants for next season. The young stock is in the best possible condition and under the guidance of Bill Brown we have no doubt but that it will remain so.

The Art Floral Co. had a very elaborate decoration at the Indiana building which they had to maintain for one week. It was very costly and beautifully executed under the personal supervision of Manager Matraia.

Chas. C. Navlet, of San Jose, is using a good deal of space in the Sunday papers in this city. This is pretty costly advertising, but Charley says he is well satisfied with the results.

Final arrangements have been completed for the flower show to be given in Redwood City, May 8. The exhibits promise to be large and varied.

P. Orr, of the A. O. Stein store, says they have been very busy with decorations at the exposition grounds during the past two weeks.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. had a very large decoration. Besides great quantities of roses, etc., it required one thousand yards of smilax. G. N.

Los Angeles Horticultural Soc'ety.

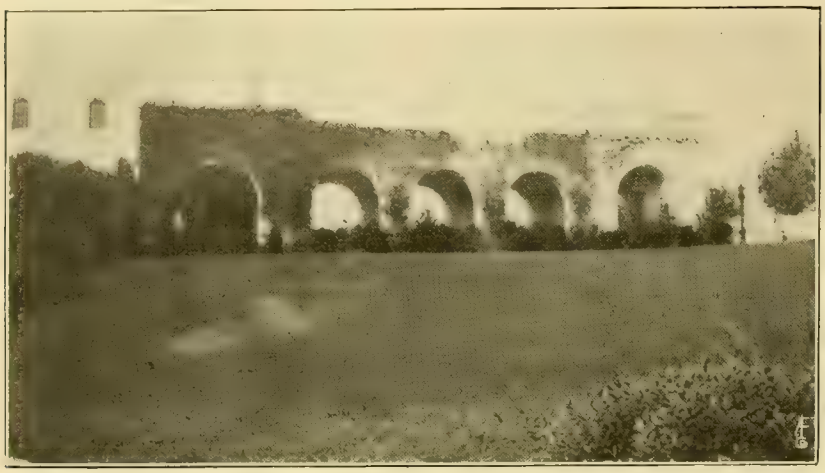
The monthly meeting of the society was held at 237 Franklin street May 5. As the city election occurred May 4, the regular meeting night, President Richards ordered the meeting held one day later. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and duly approved.

The subject of the picnic was brought up for discussion. Chairman Dietrich stated that he had received permission from Mr. Shearer of the park board to hold the picnic in any part of Griffith park the society desired. Moved and seconded that we accept the permission and extend our appreciation to Mr. Shearer. Some discussion arose as to whether this society should give a picnic and invite the Pasadena Horticultural Society or whether we should accept their invitation to their picnic. The minutes of the meeting of April 6 show that this society was invited. Further discussion came up that this society wanted to give a picnic and invite Pasadena, and also they were told to hold a picnic and invite this society, making two picnics. No definite action could be taken at this time. In lieu of same the chair left the matter in charge of the picnic committee.

The matter of the float was brought up for settlement. For lack of sufficient time and funds it was impossible to enter. The funds that had been subscribed were placed to the respective members' dues.

The subject of the evening was a talk on general gardening in California by James MacGillivray. In this talk he brought out clearly the importance of laying out the grounds, grading, walks, water systems, etc., following with the planting and naming of many different varieties of trees and plants to get a succession of bloom. Mentioning some of the best evergreens for grouping he listed the cedrus, sequoia, oak, Cupressus Lawsoniana, and abies. The flowering trees: The acacia, in variety; cydonia, and Eucalyptus ficifolia. The shrubbery: Pittosporrum, in variety; spirea, weigelia, abelia, crataegus, deutzias, Carpenteria Californica, etc.

The flowering plants and bulbs to give bloom every day in the year: Starting in January—White narcissus, Roman hyacinth, sweet peas, calendulas, roses, carnations. February—Trumpet narcissus, freezias, and through March and April, with anemones, stocks antirrhinums, liliums, iris and sparaxis, followed with iris in variety, coreopsis, gladioli, myosotis, amaryllis and verbenas. Then in June and July, asters, zinnias and salpiglossis, and in August, cannas, dahlias amaranthus, begonias, etc. In September follow with early chrysanthemum and later with the sorts which will keep blooming to Christmas. At the close of this valuable address the chair called on Messrs. Barnhardt, Felgate, Houghton and Robertson for comments on the address. These discussions were all greatly applauded, thus showing the great appreciation of the members.



LANDSCAPE AT THE SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION.

No speaker was appointed for the next meeting, but it was hoped it could be arranged to have Theo. Payne talk on California native flowers, on which subject he is in a class by himself. All members were asked to bring as many wild flowers as possible.

ADVERTISING BIG AID TO MOTHERS' DAY.

Mothers' day trade by far exceeded in volume that of the same event a year ago, and also the highest expectations of the local florists who made extensive preparations for it. Co-operative advertising was done on a large scale in the daily papers, and this, with appropriate window decorations and circularizing commemorative of the event, led the public mind to the thought of "flowers for mother" to a degree highly pleasing to wholesalers and dealers alike. It might be said that carnations were the most popular flowers, and this despite the fact that the prices were firmly maintained at a dollar and a dollar and a half per dozen. Even the poorer grades brought good prices, and long before the closing hours of Saturday, the inevitable shortage was seen, and Sunday found many retailers with only a fraction of the stock that could easily be sold. Roses were more plentiful and afforded the only relief to the florists unable to supply the incessant call for the "Divine flower." The appropriate color line was recognized by the public, but many got mixed on the proper color for mother deceased, but this was easily adjusted by the florist according to the stock on hand, and all efforts made to dispel the necessity for using any particular color, "just flowers of any color or any variety," was the educational slogan maintained, and the result was most satisfactory to the trade and public alike. Even street fakirs did a good business, and this city never before had so many of these "necessary evils" as many called them. It is freely predicted by those who have closely observed the growth of Mothers' day business, that it will in future compete closely with Easter in point of popularity and scope of business transacted.

MOTHERS' DAY OBSERVANCE GENERAL.

Business during the early part of the past week was rather quiet, but the latter part turned out to be an exceptionally busy one. The demand for flowers for Mothers' day was exceptional, and a heavily supplied market was well cleaned up, many orders for roses and carnations not being filled. The local papers and churches had been commenting favorably for some time past, and with the advertising of local florists, the sale of flowers was greatly stimulated. A number of firms gave each patron a flower with each sale. The churches also gave a flower to each worshiper Sunday. Fairly good weather no doubt helped some, and aside from Easter has been the best day for general business since Christmas. Roses continue to arrive in excellent quality, and are plentiful. Carnations are fairly plentiful, and the prices are getting lower. Lily of the valley and orchids are good, while sweet peas are beginning to feel the effects of the season.

NOTES.

The remains of Capt. Darling, a member of the 48th Highlanders, who was killed at the front, was brought to Toronto and the funeral called for many floral tributes. The regimental crest of the Highlanders was arranged by Dillemuth, and proved a most artistic piece. The mayor and corporation and many notables sent elaborate designs, most of the florists having some of the work.

Many of our parks and private grounds are at present very beautiful. Tulips wintered well and many of the beds are now in their prime. Forsythias are in flower. Many of the shrubs are beginning to leaf, and one feels that spring is here. A few bedding plants are being put out; but it is a little early except for hardy varieties.

There is a large demand here for bay trees, and the supply is limited, as very few shipments came through. Boxwoods have arrived in good shape.

The seed houses are very busy; the Steele Briggs Seed Co., J. A. Simmers and Carter & Co. working overtime to catch up with the orders.

Frank Duffort has been marketing some very good hydrangeas.

MOTHERS' DAY SALES SHOW INCREASE.

The past week has been variable as far as the weather was concerned, consequently the supply of flowers was greatly lessened. On May 1, carnations were on sale at all prices, ranging from 25 for 25 cents to 25 cents per dozen. Daffodils and tulips were also in profusion, and at your own price, but the past week has found a shortage of carnations and no daffodils, the scarcity of the latter due to the rainy weather. Roses have been equal to all demands, and the cheaper and short-stem grades were on sale at 5 cents. Lilies are very scarce, which is to be expected. Everything in the plant line is about over with, a few genistas in good bloom being about all there is to offer. Activity in the greenhouses has begun, and consequently no recreation until July 1. A few warm days the last of April started inquiries about the veranda box and the cemetery vase.

Judicious advertising for the past three years in this city has made Mothers' day one to be counted on as a day to prepare for a big sale. This year was in excess of last year, due not only to the call for carnations, but from advising the public to send a box of flowers, a dozen roses or any pretty arrangements in basket form to "Mother." If the florist were to confine his Mothers' day business to the sale of carnations alone, the demand would make the price prohibitive; so to protect himself one has to suggest the use of flowers in different ways; also the sale of any color of carnation. This year was better than other years, and the wise florist will make a note to put on another car for Saturday and Sunday, also a few extra boys next year.

BISON.

Albany, N. Y.

At the May meeting of the local florists' club, E. P. Tracey of the special committee appointed to see Commissioner Erving, of the department of public safety relative to street fakirs, said that the matter was in the hands of the mayor and that a further report would be rendered at the June meeting. On April 9, the committee visited Commissioner Erving with a view to securing the elimination of fakirs from the streets. Commissioner Erving referred the committee to Mayor Stevens. The mayor, it is understood, is in favor either of increasing the license fee for peddlers or eliminating them from the streets.

The garden committee of the Albany Woman's club is interested in plans to make the city more beautiful. The committee is agitating the use of window boxes for both residential and business streets. Albanians are urged to procure and fill window boxes and have them in position before May 30. The committee has interested 1,000 children in the city to plant gardens. Prizes will be awarded in the fall.

The flower show committee was instructed to organize and to proceed with the preparations for the flower show which the club expects to hold in November. Louis H. Schaefer of the entertainment committee announced that refreshments will be a feature of the meeting, June 3.

A report from E. P. Tracey on Mothers' day was to the effect that the local florists prepared for good business and that one local daily paper had devoted a special page to the subject on May 7.

Newark, N. J.

At Bergerow's, 964 Broad street, business seems to be moving along nicely. They have a nice stock in their greenhouses, noteworthy being a new carnation, which is promising.

Phillips Brothers, 938 Broad street, have been doing a large amount of funeral work and have been fairly busy.

While business is not particularly active, all the retailers find something to do. Around the Center market there is considerable activity in plants. There a number of florists and gardeners bring in pansies and various greenhouse plants and sell from their wagons.

J. J. Wilson, of the Wilson Seed Co., 79 Orange street, is showing his friends a handsome silver cup won in the floral class of the automobile pageant, which took place in this city on the evening of April 10.

John Crossley, 37 Belleville avenue, has been quite busy since Easter with funeral work. We found him engaged in making up a large number of corsage bouquets for a social function.

The Broad street retailers, as a rule, are cheerful, and while all of them could do more than they are doing in this season of depression, they are not finding fault.

At Wolfinger's, no fault was being found, and they seemed to be prosperous. Our old friend, William Strahan, is yet an active man in this store.

H. C. Strobell & Co. did not think that business was what it should be, but they were keeping reasonably busy.

A. F. F.

Hartford, Conn.

Although John Coombs has been in business 47 years and is now 72 years old, he is yet active and may daily be found at his greenhouses with the rest of the boys. He has just broken ground, one mile further out Benton street, for a new range. The entire length of the initial structure, which will be erected as rapidly as possible by Hitchings & Co., will be 420 feet, the width 55 feet. A battery of boilers and boiler house will be placed amidships, as our nautical friends say. This will bring his glass area well up to 100,000 square feet. The new houses will be devoted to rose growing. At the old range on Benton street we found a good stock of plants and cut flowers. His son, Joseph F. Coombs, manages his two down town stores.

Miss Helen F. Whiting, of Whiting street, West Hartford, has leased her range of 100,000 square feet to her foreman, Charles Peterson, who has been with her for 18 years. The present condition of the stock speaks well for Mr. Peterson's ability as a grower. He will assume control on July 1. This business was established in 1852, we believe, by Miss Whiting's father.

Charles K. Swenson has a great stock of plants at his Elmwood greenhouses, near the Fair grounds. He started the spring business with 6,000 geraniums, 2,000 vinca variegata and many other plants as well as cut flowers.

The florists of Hartford seem prosperous. The plant trade is now active and every greenhouse visited recently showed good stocks of geraniums and various other bedding plants.

We found Spear & McManus, the retailers, of 242 Asylum street, quite busy and they report that business has been satisfactory.

At E. W. Newton's Park street greenhouses we found a fine stock of plants. A. F. F.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, Wednesday evening, April 14, President Westlake in the chair. The euchre and dance held under the auspices of this society was reported to have been a success in every way, great credit being due the committee in charge for the able manner in which they conducted the affair. It was agreed to hold three shows this coming season: a rose show to be held in the week of June 6, dahlia show October 7, and fall flower show October 28-29. Offers of special prizes for the fall show were received from the following: Hitchings & Co., New York; W. E. Marshall & Co., Stumpp & Walter Co., New York; Vaughan Seed Store, Chicago and New York; Pino-Lyptol Co., New York; John Wilk, Weeber & Don, Burnett Bros., New York; Bon Arbor Co., Paterson, N. J.; Harry A. Bunyard Co., J. M. Thorburn Co., Peter Henderson & Co., New York; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.; Lord & Burnham Co., Pierson U. Bar Co., New York; Cottage Garden Co., Queens, N. Y., and Carters Tested Seed, Inc., Boston, Mass.; also from F. Edmonds, W. R. Kinnear, Rev. J. W. Gammack, E. M. Underhill and Kohler Bros., Glen Cove, N. Y.

Frank Honeyman was awarded first prize for the best vase of roses (mixed). Exhibits for next meeting will be three heads of lettuce, three heads of cauliflower and one vase of outdoor flowers.

JAMES GLADSTONE, Cor. Sec'y.

Horticultural Society of New York.

The Horticultural Society of New York held a very creditable exhibition in the museum building, botanical gardens, Bronx park, May 8-9. There were good exhibits of cut flowers and plants. In the commercial class, Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., took first prize for 12 vases of cut orchids of different varieties. In the private gardening class, Mrs. H. I. Pratt, Brooklyn, N. Y., A. J. Manda, gardener, also took first prize for 12 vases of cut orchids of different varieties. An interesting feature was the exhibit of calceolarias. Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., James Stuart, gardener, took first prize for 6 pots. A special prize was awarded Mrs. H. Darlington, Mamaroneck, P. W. Popp, gardener, for three pots of Spirea rubens. William Shillebaer, Essex Falls, N. J., J. P. Sorenson, gardener, was awarded a special prize for a vase of passiflora. A diploma was awarded F. C. Littleton, Mamaroneck, Samuel Batcheler, gardener, for a vase of carnations. Enchantress shade, named Baroness de Brenner. A profusion of lilac and various other flowering shrubs, tulips and jonquils were also exhibited. T. A. Havemeyer, Glen Head, N. Y., A. Lahodny, gardener, exhibited a fine collection of flowering shrubs for which he was awarded first prize. A. F. F.

MOTHERS' DAY SALES INCREASE.

Mothers' day is surely on the "flower-day calendar," and the problem now is to provide the stock and keep the prices down so that everybody may have the flower needed to properly observe the day and thus perpetuate the custom. Local florists were sold short on carnations by the morning of May 8, and by evening everything in cut flowers was cleaned up. Even culls and stock that would ordinarily have been dumped, were placed on the counters at the last and sold at a cheap price to customers who took it as the best to be had rather than do without. Roses came in for their share of the trade, and, with other good flowers, were in demand for gift boxes to mothers. The number of buyers was very large, hundreds buying a single flower to wear. The number of children with a nickel, dime or quarter was unusual, and speaks well for the future of the custom.

Plants as gifts were in good demand, which covered whatever was good, from geraniums and daisies, to pot roses and hydrangeas. The volume of business was probably 25 per cent more than last year, and would have been much heavier if stock could have been secured.

NOTES.

Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, was a visitor this week. He admits that "Sprinkleproof" is his middle name and that business is very good, indeed. Likewise, the same day we were favored with a call from Morris H. Le Vine of Lion & Co., New York. "Birds of a feather," etc., and they sure are a pair of birds.

The month of April just past has been one of unusual mildness—no frost and plenty of rain. All farm crops are at maximum for the season, and nothing much short of a miracle will prevent another stupendous wheat crop; in fact, it is hard for a Kansas man not to use big words whenever he attempts to describe crop prospects at this time.

Emil Kuechenmeister is planning a motorcycle trip to San Francisco, with stops at Denver and other points.

Harrie Mueller is driving a new touring car. C.

Morganton, N. C.

After a cool March, ending with cold and backward weather conditions, April came in cold and blustery, and was freakish throughout. We had snow on March 3, followed by frost the following day, with frost again in evidence on March 14. More careful working of land, better handling of the crops, together with a perfectly reliable water-table, worked wonders in resisting the severely drying out winds and deficient rainfall, during one of the dryest Aprils on record. The precipitation for the month was only 0.41 inches, but despite this, vegetation suffered little compared with other periods of severe drought experienced in this section. Fruits are all set and safe, and small fruit of all kinds, especially strawberries, give promise of a large crop. J. B. P. M.

Santa Rosa, Calif.

This city was in gala attire and filled with excursionists at the formal opening of the annual rose carnival, May 6. The festivities this year were continued over three days and were conducted on a more elaborate scale than ever before. Tons of roses and other flowers had been collected for the grand floral display. The coronation of Queen Zelma, a juvenile floral parade and a baby show were features of the programme, which reached its climax Saturday morning, May 8, with the great rose carnival pageant.

Milwaukee Florists' Club.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club will continue in its efforts to organize the state florists into one association. A committee, consisting of H. V. Hunkel, chairman; C. C. Pollworth, A. Leideger, W. C. Zimmermann, C. Dalwig, Nick Zweifel and W. A. Kennedy, has been appointed to further plans and to communicate with dealers in the various cities in the state. It is expected that another month will be required to perfect plans for a state organization.

OBITUARY.

John Krumholz.

John Krumholz, well known florist of Detroit, Mich., died Thursday, May 6, in Grace hospital, after a long illness. He was born in Detroit 55 years ago, and since boyhood was engaged in the florist business, first with his father and later on his own account. He was a good rose grower, and his success in this line was most notable at the time Catherine Mermet, Perle des Jardins, Niphetos and William F. Bennett were grown extensively. He was a hard worker, a great lover of flowers of all kinds, and greatly devoted to his family, the members of which worked industriously with him in the business. His greenhouses for the past 20 years, were on the Conners Creek road near Gratiot avenue, and his retail store on Superior street, where also was his residence and the place of his birth.

Mr. Krumholz was a man of most kindly nature and well liked by the local trade, all of whom regret his early demise. Mr. Krumholz is survived by his widow, Augusta, and five children, Robert, Katherine, Cecilia, Ida and Mrs. Frank Neuhauser. Two brothers and three sisters are also living, Henry of Grosse Pointe, Mich., Joseph of Highland Park, Mich., and Mrs. Frank Ray, Mrs. Joseph Siegel and Mrs. Mary Walsh of Detroit. Funeral services were held from his late residence, 823 Superior street, and St. Elizabeth's church, Monday, May 10. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

J. F. S.

Bernard Beer.

Bernard Beer, head of the Colfax Floral company, and 20 years a Denver, Colo., resident, died April 29 in Detroit, Mich. For many years Mr. Beer was identified with the stock raising industry. He was 65 years old. Funeral services were held in Denver Sunday, May 2, in the Fairmount cemetery chapel, and were conducted by the Masonic fraternity.

Texas State Florists' Association.

The florists of Texas extend a most cordial invitation to all florists to attend the Texas convention at Ft. Worth, July 6-7, 1915. We especially appeal to the southern florists, as we want them to see for themselves the great good derived from these conventions from year to year. Remember, we do not want to detract from the S. A. F. meeting in San Francisco, Calif., and, of course, if you are going to San Francisco it would not be consistent to attend both conventions. But if you are not going to San Francisco this would be an excellent opportunity for you to attend a live gathering of southern florists.

Take particular note of our program and you will notice that President Welch, Vice-President MacRorie and August Poehlmann of the S. A. F. will be with us. We would be glad to have a card from anyone who expects to attend. We assure you of a good time, and a very instructive meeting. Address your card to L. J. Tackett, Secy., Ft. Worth, Tex.

We hope to hear from a large number of southern florists outside of Texas in the near future, stating that they will attend. The programme is as follows:

FIRST DAY—JULY 6. 9 A. M.

Meeting called to order by Vice- President Baker.
Opening Invocation.
L. J. Tackett, president of Ft. Worth Florists' Club, welcomes the convention to Ft. Worth.
Address of welcome in behalf of the City of Ft. Worth, by the mayor of the city.
Response by H. B. Beck, Austin, Tex.
President Robert C. Kerr takes the chair.
Patrick Welch, president of the S. A. F. & O. H., address on "Co-operation of the S. A. F. and the Southern Florist."
Dan MacRorie, vice-president of the S. A. F. & O. H., "What we may expect at the San Francisco Convention."
August Poehlmann, member of the board of directors of S. A. F., "What the Big Growers Think of the South as a Market."
"The Florists' Part in the Texas Arboretum", by J. S. Kerr, Sherman, Tex.
"The Possibilities of an Experimental Range of Glass at College Station", by E. J. Kyle, College Station, Tex.

UNCLE NIC HALLOCK, who is sojourning in California at the age of 88 years, complains of the lack of fragrance in flowers there and says that even calendulas have no odor.

Personal.

H. Bayersdorfer and wife, of Philadelphia, Pa., are at San Francisco, Calif., this week, with passports for Japan.

President S. S. Pennock, of the American Rose Society, is one of the directors of the Rittenhouse Trust Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.

Bob Newcomb, the well known representative of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was in Billings, Mont., this week, returning from the Northwest, and says business is fine.

Mothers' Day Gains in Favor.

From reports received from all parts of the country, Mothers' day sales this year show that the event is gaining in popularity, some of the trade reporting increase in sales as high as 25 per cent as compared with 1914. White carnations, as in former years, were short of supply, but in many cities window displays and appropriate newspaper advertising did much to make the occasion a general flower day, and in nearly every such instance stock of all kinds sold well. Stock as a rule was of good quality, commanded good prices, and the trade generally are well pleased with the volume of business done.

State Nursery Co.'s Silver Jubilee.

Well befitting the rapid and substantial growth of its business during the past quarter of a century, the State Nursery Co., Helena, Mont., is celebrating its silver jubilee, and its officers may point with pride to an organization, which started business in 1890 with five lots 50 x 150 feet, and whose present holdings comprise 500 acres, 54 greenhouses, two stores and a large seed warehouse. Some idea of the magnitude of the greenhouse plant alone may be realized from the fact that, placed end to end, the houses would extend nearly two miles, contain four miles of walks and require 10 miles of heating pipes. Thirty houses are devoted to growing plants for cut flowers only, including roses, carnations, violets, lilies, etc. The nursery department is divided into departments for shade and ornamental trees, hardy shrubs and vines, and fruit trees.

T. E. Mills, the founder of the business in 1890, was joined by his brother, W. E. Mills, in 1895, and they incorporated under the present name. In 1902, Conrad Kohrs and Walter Card became members, and constituted the company until 1912, when John Jackson, an employe of the firm since his boyhood, became a member. The above named include all who are financially interested in the company, the officers being T. E. Mills, president and general manager; W. E. Mills, vice-president; Walter Card, manager of seed department; John Jackson, manager of shipping department. Conrad Kohrs acts in an advisory capacity, taking no part in the active management.

American Dahlia Society.

At a meeting held at the Hotel Grand, New York, May 10, the American Dahlia Society was formally organized. Those present were Richard Vincent, Jr., J. S. Vincent, White Marsh, Md.; Prof. F. H. Hall, Geneva, N. Y.; John W. Merritt, Farmingdale, N. Y.; Frank R. Austin, Tuckerton, N. J.; J. R. Benjamin, Calverton, N. Y.; Harry A. Bunyard, New York; L. K. Peacock, Berlin, N. J.; E. Stanley Brown, East Moriches, Suffolk Co., N. Y.; Hugo Kind, Hammonton, N. J.; I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y.; Percy Rigby, New York; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; A. F. Faulkner, New York; Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; J. A. Shaw, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. J. Lane, New York; M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.; James Kirby, Huntington, N. Y.

As a temporary organization Richard Vincent, Jr., was elected chairman and J. J. Lane secretary. A general discussion ensued in which nearly all present, including the chairman, took part, as to the best methods of procedure. Valuable suggestions were made by the chairman, Prof. Hall, E. Stanley Brown, I. S. Hendrickson, L. K. Peacock, Harry A. Bunyard, James Duthie, Geo. W. Kerr, Geo. L. Stillman and others. E. Stanley Brown, Frank R. Austin and I. S. Hendrickson were appointed a committee to prepare a constitution and by-laws. While the committee was at work there was another general discussion. The committee reported and their report was accepted. Officers were then elected by unanimous vote as follows: Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., president; Joseph J. Lane, New York, secretary; Frank R. Austin, Tuckerton, N. J., treasurer. Vice-presidents: Geo. Stillman, Westerly, R. I., east; E. Stanley Brown, East Moriches, N. Y., central; L. K. Peacock, Berlin, N. J., north; W. W. Willmore, Denver, Colo., west. Executive committee: Geo. W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y.; James Duthie, Oyster Bay, N. Y.; J. S. Vincent, White Marsh, Md.; Hugo Kind, Hammonton, N. J. Nomenclature committee: James Kirby, Huntington, N. Y.; Stanley Brown, L. K. Peacock, Prof F. H. Hall, Geneva, N. Y.; Leonard Barron, New York.

It was decided to have one exhibition a year. The entrance fee will be $1, dues $2 per year. All present were constituted a membership committee.

Suffrage Flower Shop Opens in New York.

Miss Mary Robertson, a Birmingham, Ala., society girl, has started a suffrage flower shop just off Fifth avenue, which is becoming the fad of the season, says a special from New York. It is called "The Flower Girl Shop" and is located at 10 West Forty-sixth street, near Fifth avenue, in the heart of the fashionable hotel and shopping district. Opening week started with a display of cotton such as New Yorkers had never seen before.

An old plantation basket filled with cotton bolls from Stonewall Jackson's plantation was placed in the little shop window, against a background of black velvet. Cotton in every form from seed to boll, stalk and bale, together with picturesque plantation photos, fill the shop. Nothing quite like it has ever been seen here before.

The various flower girls, recruited from the ranks of young New York suffragists, in smart gray uniforms made of cotton, are selling on the street, in hotels and offices and at subway entrances.

This unique enterprise has taken on a big amount of capital—as well as daring. Miss Helen Hill, New York suffragist, is associated with Miss Robertson. Designs for the shop sign and insignia for boxes have been made by Mary Ware Dennet, secretary of the national board.

The shop is furnished with exquisitely designed willow furniture made to order. Gray is the predominating color scheme with dashes of black and gold. It's smart and it's odd and it's catching the New York eye.

Texas Jasmine Crop.

W. L. Heller, of the Alvin Cape Jessamine & Floral Co., Alvin, Tex., reports that following the freeze of March 22, the growers in that locality thought for several weeks that the crop would be a total failure, as far as sales for Memorial day were concerned. Present prospects now are favorable for the first shipments May 15, and an immense supply in June.

MOTHERS' DAY STOCK AT TOP PRICES.

The Mothers' day trade turned out to be the firmest we have had this season. Prices ranged high on every line of stock and as there was a shortage, the market was even better at the last than when buying started Friday morning, May 7. Carnations were in heavy demand, especially whites. From $6 to $10 per 100 seemed to be about the best prices, ranging according to the quality of stock. Colored carnations sold from $4 to $6. Roses also sold very well and were more in crop than carnations. From $3 to $15 per hundred were received for the average blooms. American Beauties brought from 12½ cents to 20 cents. Yellow marguerites occupied a prominent place in the trade, prices on short stemmed stock doubling. Many first class flowers brought $3 per 100. Callas, Easter lilies, Spanish iris and snapdragons sold well and brought fair figures. Gladioli have made their appearance, Apple Blossom and a few America being seen.

NOTES.

From all appearances it looks as if the Memorial day business would repeat that of last year in the use of artificial flowers. Nearly every retailer has stocked heavily with wax flowers and magnolia leaves, and are busy pushing the sale of them for this occasion. If the growers could unite in an advertising campaign, it might help to prevent a repetition of last year's business.

John Barr, of South Natick, Mass., cut 300 of the finest Matchless seen in Boston for some time. When put in a vase, at first glance they could easily be mistaken for chrysanthemums. He secured $30 for the 300. He also had 1,000 very fine assorted carnations, which were quickly disposed of at top notch prices.

W. R. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., had a good cut of carnations and marguerites for Mothers' day. He is also cutting about 100 bunches per day of Gypsophila elegance, which sells readily for 50 cents per bunch. His feverfew is just showing color and will be in crop for Memorial day.

Wm. Hasting, at the Boston Flower Exchange, received a fine shipment of carnations from J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, Mass. He also is receiving from R. P. Peterson, of Saxonville, Mass., some very fine carnations, myosotis and Snapdragon Nelrose.

A. Walsh, at the Boston Flower Exchange, received from the Halifax Garden Co., of Halifax, 30,000 high grade carnations during the week of May 2-8. He is getting about 2,000 lily of the valley per day from Wm. Jurgens, of Newport, R. I.

F. Dolansky, of Lynn, Mass., is cutting a large quantity of cattleyas at present. He makes regular shipments to New York and Philadelphia. His retail store at Lynn is building up a very good trade and he did a big business there for Mothers' day.

W. R. Morris of Wellesley, Mass., was in crop for the Mothers' day trade. Friday and Saturday, May 7-8, he shipped to the Boston Co-operative Flower Market 22,000 roses and 500 bunches of Sprengeri.

R. E. Wadsworth & Co., of Westboro, Mass., have just commenced to cut from a new house of Spencer Sweet peas. For the Mothers' day trade they had carnations, marguerites, peas and snapdragons.

Patrick Welch did a big business during the past week. As Mr. Welch is so well known for his upright business principles, there is no doubt but that his new enterprise will be a great success.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, Mass., has purchased a seven-passenger automobile to be used as a pleasure car. His bachelor buttons are still blooming profusely and he is shipping large consignments to New York and Philadelphia.

Lively & Bond, of Randolph, Mass., had an extra good cut of carnations—8,000, during the two days. They also disposed of a good quantity of double tulips and callas.

W. F. Gude and brother, of Washington, D. C., are in Boston to attend the tournament of the bowling association.

MOTHERS' DAY SALES ON PAR WITH 1914.

Both down-town florists and those in the residence districts advise that the Mothers' day trade this year was fully equal to that of the same anniversary in 1914. With some it was considerably better. A week, more or less, of cloudy weather had kept down the supply of carnations, the cuttings being less, proportionately, than for some time. With some of the leading florists the white variety was exhausted early on Saturday, and a good clean-up was made on all colors before the closing hour. Prices were about the same as last year, $1 to $1.10. Other flowers had a good sale. A slight scarcity of carnations now exists, the ruling price being 75 cents, as compared with 45 to 55 cents two weeks ago. The cemetery planting trade, in anticipation of Memorial day, has set in actively, with an apparently ample supply of geraniums upon which to draw. The prospects are that peonies will be on the market in abundance before May 30.

NOTES.

One of the most important local weddings for a long period, from the florist standjoint, was that of Rev. H. H. Sterrett and Miss Margaret Black, daughter of Judge Samuel Black, on the afternoon of May 8, at the church of which the groom is rector, St. Paul's Episcopal. T. J. Ludwig furnished the decorations, a feature of which was 450 annunciation lilies.

Inconvenience is being caused the flower store of the Livingston Seed Company by the choking of its entrance with timbers for the purpose of temporarily shoring up the wall of the building, incident to the excavation for a new building next door.

The greenhouse of Margaret Evans, 1179 East Main street, has been taken over on a rental basis by Johnson and McDonald. It is probable that the business will continue to be known by the Evans name.

F. C. Viereek, the East Town street florist, has discontinued his branch store at 170 South High street, which was opened at Easter time.

Tacoma, Wash.

BIG PLANT DEMAND.

Every since Easter, this market has had a great many more cut flowers of all kinds than could be sold, with the exception of good roses. There seems to be no limit to carnations, and the quality is very good since the bright warm days have practically been continuous. Our season has been earlier than usual. A large per cent of fruit trees finished blooming before May 1 and the shrubs have been beautiful in bloom for several weeks. Roses are in full bloom in many parts of the city, with a promise of more and finer flowers than ever before, if it is possible to have finer blooms than may be seen every year in this city. We promise all tourists a wonderful treat and feast of roses for the next three months and we hope many florists may come through our city on the trip to or from the Panama-Pacific exposition. Sales of cut flowers have fallen off in the last 30 days probably 25 per cent, but a great increase has come in the way of call for all small plants, and it promises to be a record-breaking spring season in Tacoma. Every sort and kind of plant seems to be in demand, and many thousands of pansies could have been sold if they were to be had at reasonable prices. One department store that sold many hundred baskets last year has failed to get any this season, and prices have been quite high. An increase of the number of 2-year-old rose plants put out is apparent, with a call for practically every new rose that has been developed in any part of the world. The price seems to cut small figure for many of our enthusiastic rose growers when they learn of any new rose. We have never learned of any rose that has not been a real success here except the Marechal Niel, which seems to be tender to the frosts for the first few seasons after the planting.

NOTES.

We all extend our deep sympathy to Lorenzo Ghilarducci of the "California Florists" who mourns while the search is being made for the body of his son, who was drowned in the waters of the Puget Sound. Up to present writing, May 3, no report of recovery of the body has come to the anxious and interested relatives and friends. Mr. Ghilarducci has the sympathy of all in the trade about Tacoma and Seattle.

The Mitchell Nursery Co. of Larchmount, our south side suburb, has placed a long and roomy tent on a vacant lot in the down-town business section and are helping to supply the demand for all sorts of small plants, as well as nursery stock. They seem to enjoy a good business.

Progress is being made toward the placing of baskets or boxes at the "White Way" lamp posts in business sections of our city, although it may not be consummated until next year. At any rate we have started the ball a-rolling.

Plans are being developed by our rose society to hold the annual rose show about June 8-12, but the date has not been definitely arranged. Local florists have under consideration the plan of making displays.

S. L. Harper is trying to "fix" a fine new rose, sport of Mrs. Aaron Ward; also a few seedlings are being developed that are from his own hybridizing.

Planting out of carnations is going forward at some places. S. L. H.

East Orange, N. J.

The Springfield Floral Co. now conducts the store, 566 Main street, formerly conducted by Simpson. The same company has another store at 272 Main street, Orange, which is in charge of J. E. Heiman, formerly with Henshaw & Fenrich, New York wholesalers.

Charles Hale has recently erected two small, but very neat houses comprising about 5,000 square feet of glass. He and his sons are bringing forward a splendid stock of bedding plants.

George Smith and his staff are quite busy in both cut flowers and plants.

A. F. F.

MORRIS, ILL.—The Morris Floral Co. reports that the recent hot weather has been very severe on chrysanthemum cuttings in the sand. The cooler weather which has come with the rain should give better results.

St. Louis.

MOTHERS' DAY STOCK INFERIOR.

The market the past week was greatly influenced by Mothers' day, which from all accounts was satisfactory. Retailers complained not so much about the high prices demanded but about inferior stock. Carnations at four and five cents were not as good in some instances as stock which sold for $5 and $7.50 per 1,000 the previous week. Several retailers stated that patrons walked out on them determined to honor mother in some other way. Roses, especially white, were scarce. Sweet peas have curtailed to a great extent and the prospects of outdoor stock is not yet to be counted upon. Peonies are arriving in limited quantities. Lilies are somewhat plentiful.

NOTES.

H. G. Berning had a fine stock in carnations and roses but stated that the stock was not up to standard, the quality in general being poor.

F. X. Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, said he believed there was an increase over last year in Mothers' day trade.

M. M. Ayres, Miss Newman, F. H. Weber and F. C. Weber all seemed to be very busy Saturday and Sunday.

Foster, the Florist, has installed a soda fountain in his store. This will help out during the summer season.

The Mullanphy Florists had special window decorations for Mothers' day at their downtown store.

Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney had special advertisements in the daily papers for Mothers' day.

Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had a large stock in roses and carnations for Mothers' day.

The West End stores had quite a call for all varieties of flowers for Mother's day.

Andy Hoffman, of George Waldbart's staff was a visitor at the market May 9.

Geo. H. Angermueller cleaned out everything Saturday and Sunday.

Sprinkleproof Sam, Jim Karins, and Julius Dilloff were visitors.

Miss Doussard, of East St. Louis, reports business good.

H. G. Berning is out with a new six cylinder pleasure car. W. F.

Cincinnati.

FIRM MARKET FOLLOWS MOTHERS' DAY.

After an exceptionally good Mothers' day business, the market for the first time in several "moons" is in a good, firm condition. The call for that day cleaned up practically everything, and the wholesalers opened their places Monday, May 10, with very little stock left over. Roses of all kinds are in a pretty fair supply and fairly good in quality. Some very excellent American Beauties may be had. Carnations were cut very close for Mothers' day and were rather short the early part of the week. Lilies and callas are plentiful. The cut of gladioli is much larger than it was. Enough sweet peas apparently come in to take care of requirements. Fine lily of the valley and orchids were offered. Other offerings include snapdragons, irises and some peonies. Business in greens is good.

NOTES.

The E. G. Hill Floral Co. have been showing some very prettily arranged baskets of flowers in their window displays.

C. E. Critchell had some very fine roses and American Beauties for Mothers' day.

Visitors: Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co., and Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., both of New York City. H.

MOTHER'S DAY DEMAND RESEMBLES XMAS.

Market conditions have been very much on the order of Christmas week—prices very stiff and not enough stock to fill orders. The cold and cloudy weather we have been having broke Tuesday, May 4, and business started with a rush, and continued throughout the week. With Mothers' day, weddings and funerals, everything in the way of stock cleaned up. Prices were as follows: Roses, fancy, eight cents to 12 cents; medium, six cents to 10 cents; short, four cents to six cents; carnations, two cents to 10 cents, mostly six cents to eight cents; tulips stiffened from two cents to four cents; sweet peas, 40 cents to $1 per 100; gladioli, two cents to five cents; lilies, 10 cents and scarce at that. Retail prices for cut flowers were the best ever known at this period of the year.

NOTES.

August Eckstrand was found dead in his room at the Snelling Floral Company Saturday night, May 8. His death is supposed to have been caused by a sudden attack of syncope. He was 62 years of age and leaves two sons and one daughter in this city.

Oscar Amundson was called to Superior, Wis., by the sudden death of his sister, Mrs. Mary Gough, Wednesday, May 6. His brother, Andrew, with Thos. Lyons, and his mother accompanied him.

Swanson & Co. had the decorations for the Fleck-Starnes wedding, which was a very elaborate affair. Snapdragons and foliage plants were the main feature.

Rice Bros. has an enormous amount of stock and cleaned up everything, even the floor. They had to return several orders on account of no stock to be had.

Oscar E. Amundson has his usual big run on Will Bros.' home-grown stock, but reports that the raise in price a bad feature for Mothers' day.

L. S. Donaldson Co. had a complete clean-up for Mothers' day and had to turn away orders, as they were entirely sold out.

C. G. Anderson, formerly with Poehlmann Bros. Co., is to take charge of the Minneapolis Floral Co.'s range, May 17.

Miss H. B. Whitted had her stores crowded all day, and also sold all the stock she could obtain.

The local florists had a large Mothers' day display advertisement in three daily papers, May 7.

Providence, R. I.

ALL FLOWERS POPULAR ON MOTHERS' DAY.

Business for Mothers' day this year kept every one busy. White carnations were cleaned up early, and then all other flowers sold well. The wholesale prices on all stock did not advance very much except on the white carnations, which sold from $4 to $6 per hundred. Many of the stores sold out at an early hour, the trade being heavy with many customers but small sales. Decoration day is next on the calendar and the trade is getting ready for it now with displays of magnolia wreaths and artificial flowers. The department stores feature these wreaths on a much larger scale than the regular florist does. Geraniums are good and there seems to be plenty of them this year. The seedsmen are all busy now, and report business at its top form.

Macnair had 2,500 carnations, mostly white, and disposed of them all at an early hour, the sales being heavy as they were disposed of in small lots.

E. E. Nock, of Edgewood, is cutting orchids that are of good quality and of excellent color. H. A. T.

Baltimore.

The local florists all made preparation for a busy Mothers' day trade, and while a shortage of white carnations resulted in some of the wholesalers asking what might seem exorbitant prices, the suggestions made by the local press that red flowers be used as well, helped to keep prices of white stock normal. In the cut flower market conditions are dull.

The annual flower market of the Women's Civic League was held in Mt. Vernon place, May 12. Many of the local florists arranged artistic booths, and the ladies disposed of the flowers.

Charles E. Smith will move to new quarters, 207 North Liberty street, about May 15.

Hamilton Flower Shop is cutting gerberas, which are attracting considerable attention.

Wm. J. Halliday has returned to his business after two weeks' lay-up with a fractured arm.

The Florists' Exchange has received its first cut of gladiolus.

Gus Lutz had a heavy cut of carnations for Mothers' day.

Halliday Bros. made their first cut of gladiolus this week.

Samuel Feast & Sons have been cutting a few peonies.

Edwin Seidewitz is busy at the greenhouses.

J. A. Ritter & Son report satisfactory business.

John Cook reports business good.

MOTHERS' DAY DEMAND EXCEEDS SUPPLY.

The demand for stock for Mothers' day was exceedingly large, but stock was very scarce and it was impossible to supply anywhere near the demand. Prices were very good but the dealers held to the advertised quotations pretty well, even though they could have got more for the stock if they would have asked it. Carnations brought from $4.00 to $6.00 per 100 the latter part of the week and in some instances more, but most of the wholesalers were satisfied with the prices that they advertised. Roses sold well also and cleaned up almost as quickly as carnations at good figures. American Beauty roses sold well, but prices were nothing to speak of, considering the demand and the exceptionally fine quality of the stock offered. Peonies had a good call and so did gladioli, tulips, snapdragons, sweet peas, lilies, stocks, lilac and in fact everything else in seasonable cut flowers. The market cleaned up completely as the writer predicted it would for Mothers' day three weeks ago and the buyers that placed their orders well in advance as they were advised to do then, reaped the benefit, and in nearly all cases had their orders filled in full. The real cause of the shortage of stock for Mothers' day this year was due to the fact that most of the growers started to plant earlier than usual, for the exceedingly warm weather during April brought the stock on in great shape and the market being glutted and stock not bringing anywhere near the prices that it should, the growers figured that it would be best to start planting, which they did, but it is a question whether there would have been enough stock then or not, had they not done so, for the demand exceeded all expectations and the result would most likely have been the same. The demand for Mothers' day is increasing each year and while it was Anna Jarvis that gave Mothers' day to the world, it is just as well to remember that THE AMERICAN FLORIST gave it to the florist trade of the United States, and it was in these columns, issue of May 16, 1908, page 830, that the benefit to be derived from the holiday from a flower-selling standpoint was first pointed out. Speaking of the market conditions since the opening of the present week, business is good, and what stock is arriving is cleaning up quickly at good prices. It is a question just how large the supply of stock will be for Memorial day, but the wise buyers will do well to place their orders as early as possible and avoid disappointment.

NOTES.

Mrs. Potter Palmer's large conservatory on the south of her Lake Shore drive residence, which has been one of the attractive features of the house, is being torn down. The plants have been moved to Mrs. Palmer's estate at Sarasota Bay, Fla., and the conservatory has been out of use for several years. What will take its place has not yet been decided.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. have added another American Beauty grower to their list and are receiving a large supply of fancy stock in this line. Mr. Vaughan received his new Moline-Knight car this week and made his trip to Oak Park in it on May 11. The new line of baskets that this firm is manufacturing is now on display at this store.

The large sign stretched across the building at 131 North Wabash avenue which reads that Colby & Son will occupy this building as soon as it is remodeled does not affect Bassett & Washburn, for their lease is good for another year, and according to Mr. Washburn no arrangements for new quarters have yet been made.

Robert C. Lange, 3339 North Whipple street, bought a new Ford delivery car this week.

Wm. F. Schofield, the North State street florist, had the misfortune of bruising his right hand quite severely when his horse ran away on Sunday, May 9. It seems that the harness broke and the wagon kept striking the horse until it became frightened and got beyond control and galloped madly down the street until it collided with an automobile at the corner of Chicago avenue and Clark street. Mr. Schofield is satisfied that he got off easy, even though his right hand is encased in bandages.

Davis & Steiner, of Ottawa, have just placed an order with the Garland Manufacturing Company for a new iron frame greenhouse, 76x900 feet, to be devoted to the growing of cucumbers. The Garland Co. will start work on the new house right away and expect to have it completed in a few months. D. B. Dulmage and Henry Streitlemeier are now looking after affairs at the factory and report that the outlook never was more encouraging than it is right now.

Wietor Bros. had a very satisfactory Mothers' day trade and cleaned up their stock at an early hour after taking care of their regular customers in good shape. This firm is now cutting a fine supply of roses, especially Sunburst, which are in good demand. N. J. Wietor's youngest son, Harry, is confined to the St. Francis hospital at Evanston with a light attack of scarlet fever.

Herman Rogers, of the Weiland & Risch store force, received a letter from Lawrence Mathes, who is now in the employ of the Shotwell Floral Co., Fargo, N. D. Mr. Mathes was formerly with Weiland & Risch and his many friends here are pleased to learn that he is doing nicely and is so well pleased with his present position.

A. T. Pyfer, of A. T. Pyfer & Co., had the market conditions pretty well sized up for Mothers' day, and the result was just as he predicted it would be. In speaking of the outlook for stock for Memorial day he expects to see a clean-up as far as carnations are concerned and advises placing orders early.

A. J. Budlong, who looks after the growing end of the J. A. Budlong business, was seen at the store on May 11 and never appeared in better health then he did then. A nice supply of fancy lily of the valley is one of the chief offerings at the Budlong store this week.

H. Van Gelder has increased the Percy Jones' store force in the person of Maurice Grossberg, who entered upon his duties in time to help out during the Mothers' day rush. Trade was very good at this store last week, and the demand the present week is keeping up well.

Erne & Klingel are having a good run on smilax, which they are handling in quantity and for which they have been headquarters for some time past. Chas. Erne says that it is impossible at times to supply the demand.

Some of the local dealers report that they have received word from their eastern fern dealers that they will be unable to supply them with stock after May 20, which accounts for the advance in prices this week.

M. C. Gunterberg and Sinner Bros. are well pleased with the business that they have done since they moved into their new store at 158 North Wabash avenue, and report that sales so far have increased wonderfully.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co.; H. N. Bruns and W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, visited the greenhouses of French & Salm, at Union Grove, Wis., May 12, making the trip in Mr. Keimel's auto.

Hoerber Bros. are still offering a nice supply of home-grown gladioli of fine quality for which they are having a good demand. They sold unusually well for Mothers' day and brought very satisfactory prices.

Governor Dunne has appointed A. I. Simmons depot quartermaster in the commissary department of the Illinois National guard, which will encamp at Dixon, June 25 to August 15 inclusive.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is receiving regular shipments of orchids in addition to its regular line of roses, carnations and other seasonable stock.

Dave Lavitt, who conducts the flower stand in the La Salle street depot, has blood poisoning in his left hand, which resulted from a scratch of a rose thorn.

Joseph Ziska & Sons report business as good in both the supply and wire departments. Their delivery car is kept going all the time, and is proving to be a paying investment.

The Auburn Florist, 754 West Seventy-ninth street, has opened a new store at 7844 Halsted street and will operate both places in the future.

O. A. Tonner had a brisk demand for snapdragons for Mothers' day and sold all she had to offer at an early hour at good prices.

MILLER & MUSSER

WHOLESALE FLORISTS

179-181-183 Michigan Ave., CHICAGO

A change will take place in the ownership of the wholesale firm of John Kruchten on May 23, when the books will be closed and the new corporation of John Kruchten Co. will take charge. The firm has already applied for a charter and will move into its new quarters in the Atlas Building as soon as Kyle & Foerster vacate them. The officers of the new concern are well known to the trade and are John Kruchten, president and treasurer; Henry Kruchten, vice-president, and C. L. Sherer, secretary. The new concern will no doubt build up a large business, for the proprietors have been engaged in the wholesale business for many years and are well liked by both the growers and members of the retail trade.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has bought another delivery truck and now has two 2-ton and one 1½-ton Sternberg trucks making daily trips from the greenhouses at Morton Grove to the city store. The Mothers' day trade was very good at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store this week and it has been a long time since they were sold out as completely in all lines of cut flowers so early in the day as was the case on Saturday, May 8. John Conlon will succeed C. G. Anderson as superintendent of the plant department, and is well qualified to fill the position to which he has been promoted.

The George Wittbold Co. has installed the necessary machinery to make its own boxes at its establishment at Buckingham place and now has a little factory of its own. The large shipping trade that the firm enjoys calls for so large a number of boxes that Louis Wittbold came to the conclusion that a small factory of its own was needed and would prove to be a good investment. All the stock from the Edgebrook range and the Des Plaines greenhouses is brought to the Buckingham store by Federal auto trucks and trailers, where it is packed and shipped to its destination.

Through the efforts of the committee on downtown streets, co-operating with the business men of this city, a movement was inaugurated two years ago to bring about the use of growing plants in window boxes in the central business district. The handsome displays exhibited by all lines of business and totalling one mile in length in the downtown district alone was an indication of the interest aroused.

Peter Reinberg had a big Mothers' day trade and Felix Reichling reports that the sales compared most favorably with those of last Easter. Both the local and shipping demand exceeded all expectations. Inquiries regarding stock for Memorial day are numerous and business since the opening week has been very good.

Miller & Musser had a brisk demand for southern grown gladioli for Mothers' day, which they are handling in quantity. Jack Henesch, one of the employes, received a shipment of strawberries from a friend in the south one day this week, which were distributed to the customers while they lasted.

Zeck & Mann are receiving a large supply of choice sweet peas which their growers report will be in good crop for Memorial day. Allie Zech says that the Mothers' day trade at this store was very satisfactory and everything cleaned up quickly at good prices.

Kennicott Bros. Co. started to place their peonies in cold storage this week and judging from the way the shipments are arriving one would say that this firm ought to have enough to supply their customers with for the coming big flower day.

Louis Hoeckner of the Peter Reinberg store force, is conducting his flower booth again this year at Riverview Park and expects to make enough money this season to build a new range of greenhouses on his farm at Crystal Lake.

Sullivan Bros., proprietors of the Woodlawn Floral Shop, 871 East Sixty-third street, have a contract to furnish 2,000 cut roses every day for two weeks to a movie theatre in Austin.

USE Budlong's Blue Ribbon Valley.

Jensen Bros., 3335 Lincoln avenue do a nice seed business at their florist store and report that the sales so far this season are nearly 40 per cent ahead of last year.

Weiland & Risch have started to cut quite heavily in gladioli and a good supply of Mrs. Francis King and America are now reaching the store.

F. W. Martin, 609 East Fortieth street, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, whose death occurred on Wednesday, May 5.

Albert Koehler, of Vaughan's Seed Store, has the sympathy of many friends in the loss of his mother, who died last week.

Kyle & Foerster are handling a good supply of peonies and some very fancy stock is included in the shipments.

The Raedlein Basket Co. has had a good call for window and porch baskets the past week and orders for same are still arriving. Bridal baskets are selling better, which reminds one that the month of weddings is rapidly approaching.

The Ickes-Braun Mill Co. reports business as satisfactory with the outlook encouraging. Several contracts for new houses have been closed and inquiries from prospective builders are more numerous.

Chas. Erne is wondering how market conditions will be next year about this time, for the dates of Easter, Mothers' day and Memorial day follow each other closely.

Chicago Florists' Club.

There was an excellent attendance at the regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, May 6. This was the first meeting since the consolidation of the two clubs and both of them were well represented in the members present. P. M. Palez, Little Rock, Ark.; Philip J. Foley, Jr., Thirty-first street and Spaulding avenue; H. O. S. Nichols, 5718 Kimbark avenue; C. J. Michelson, 172 North Wabash avenue, and F. S. Webb, 30 East Randolph street, were elected members, and those proposed for membership included C. O. Youngstrand, Morton Grove; Theo. Keirchner, 323 West Randolph street; Oscar Leistner, 323 West Randolph street, and H. H. Wilkerson, 56 East Randolph street.

The transportation committee presented an itinerary of the convention trip to San Francisco next August. This was adopted and is to be issued soon. Carl Cropp and N. Miller, representing the Horticultural Society, presented a preliminary report on the proposed fall show and it is the intention of committees representing this organization and the florists' club to begin work at once on the premium list. President Keimel appointed Wm. Lorman, R. E. Moore, Peter Olsem and Otto Goerish sports committee and H. N. Bruns, A. T. Pyfer and M. Mr. Fogleman has promised to talk again before the club on a similar topic and every member who has the welfare of his business in mind should make a special effort to hear it.

Cleveland.

MOTHERS' DAY DEMAND CLEANS MARKET.

Truly Mothers' day must be conceded by all to be one of the best holidays of the year. The community advertising and other articles by Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson on Mothers' day sentiment, in which she advocates the use of flowers as gifts for nearly all occasions, is certainly bearing fruit. Advertising consistently and scientifically must bring results, as has been shown. Business this year was all that could be desired; everything cleaned up nicely and prices generally were not exorbitant. The only drawback was the scarcity in the supply. After a week of hot weather, which literally cooked the stock, followed by a week of cold, wet and cloudy weather which lasted practically up to the last day, it made stock scarce when compared with the very healthy demand which had been created. Roses, carnations and sweet peas were perhaps most in demand. Of these, roses were only in fair supply, the crop being perhaps below normal, due to the weather conditions. Carnations, although more plentiful, were only a trifle, compared to the demands, but sweet peas were scarce, and many were the dissappointed customers who had sold and taken orders for them. Snapdragons in all colors was quite plentiful, but these too cleaned up entirely. Lilac, which locally just began to open the past week, sold well in both lavender and white. Darwin tulips were in good demand, as were daisies. Lily of the valley was in good supply, but not in very good demand. Easter lilies did not sell as well as expected, though considerable numbers were sold.

YARD & YARD

P. O. BOX 201, ALVIN, TEXAS

New Orleans Horticultural Society.

The flower show under the auspices of the New Orleans Horticultural Society opened at the Athenaeum May 6, and while the attendance the first day was poor, due to rainy weather, the weather cleared the following day, bringing record breaking crowds.

The exhibits were all most interesting. It was a show that took time to cover, with here and there some new plant, and to study the effect of the many artistic arrangements. Peter A. Chopin's display of hydrangeas banking the entrance was one of the show features, with great oblong baskets of maiden hair ferns.

The orchid display by Newsham and Scheurmann of the Orchid Store, was one of the first beauty spots encountered in the exhibit. Many rare specimens were shown and they were arranged most attractively.

Frank J. Reyes & Co. had a bridal bower, in which lilies of the valley, roses and carnations were most beautifully arranged, and the white satin pillow strewn with bridal blossoms.

H. Kraak's carpet beds of coleus, and E. A. Farley's similar display were considered clever features of the exhibit. It occupied the center of the show and illustrated the attractiveness of colored foliage. The columns surrounding this exhibit were all capped in great quantities of sweet peas, only the Spencer being utilized in the color scheme.

Herman Doescher's bay trees were the admiration of many, and a porch boxes added the touch of color to this exhibit that made it one of the prettiest.

Steckler Seed Co. had a group of hardy plants and vines, and other flowers, and M. Wichers, of Gretna, had some fascinating specimens of the day blooming cereus.

F. X. Becker had a beautiful bed of geraniums that would spur the most apathetic to a desire to grow them. Abele Bros.' porch boxes inspired one likewise with a desire to have every window festooned with a small hanging garden. Max Scheink had a beautiful exhibit.

E. A. Farley gave away 3,000 ferns, free of charge during the show.

MOTHERS' DAY BRINGS BIG DEMAND.

The business of the week was about normal, but wound up with a rush with the demand for Mothers' day. There may have been some attempt to turn the public from the white carnation, but if so, it had no apparent effect, as the call was for white carnations, for which the business was larger than ever, particularly from the out-of-town trade. To meet these orders taxed the wholesale men to the limit, as instanced by the purchase of more than one house at $100 a thousand for select stock. When the price soars to this figure for out-of-town orders, one gets an idea of the demand. There was also a larger local call, some florists buying two and three thousand at from $6 to $8 and higher, depending on the quality, and as far as one could judge, the date of picking. How long white carnations can be kept after being cut and yet remain salable, is a question that might be answered by the growers and the commission men. All colored sorts will fade and indicate their probable age, but the whites in their purity, look good today and bad tomorrow and there is no comeback. New York was drawn on largely by the dealers who took a chance; personal visits and spot cash did the business, and several of the venturesome cleaned up quite a little in this way. Prices of other colored carnations remained normal, $3 to $4 buying the highest grade of the other colors. The stocks of roses and all other flowers were not advanced in price, there being no extra movement in anything else but the white carnation. There was no concerted movement of the trade to boost the day or call attention to the beautiful idea and suggest the use of flowers in connection with it. Enterprise of this kind is certainly lacking with the retail trade of this city. Even individually, very little effort in window decoration was made, at least in the center of the city. There is a splendid opportunity here if the trade would only wake up to the fact and nurse it along.

NOTES.

The department stores are handling large quantities of plants at very low prices. Lit Brothers were selling rose plants in 5-inch to 5½-inch pots at 19 cents—Hybrids, ramblers, Soupperts, Hermosa, etc., all in bud. They were brought into the flower department in a truck, which was unloaded by the women customers who grabbed one in each hand. They are said to cost the firm $10 a hundred. With 2 cents off for the pot the grower will hardly go to the convention with the profits of this deal.

Spanish Iris and Darwin tulips were among the novelties with the Berger Brothers. Choice lily of the valley and Maryland roses were also a feature. There was also a large stock of white carnations for Mothers' day.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., is having the annual spring rush. To give an idea of its magnitude, a force of 60 men do nothing but select orders, which then go to the packers, who prepare them for shipment.

Ed. Reid was the "white carnation king." He had them to burn, a sale of 1,000 being a mere baggatele. He was kept busy handing them out to other dealers and had plenty for his own trade.

The Robert Craig Co. are very busy with spring bedding plants, their stock of dracænas, crotons and pandanus, together with soft wooded plants, is very large and in splendid condition.

The Leo Niessen Co. were right in it with their large stock of white carnations. Other colors also sold well. American Beauty roses are a feature here, the stock being immense.

The bedding plant season is now on with a rush. Geraniums in flower are very scarce and this situation will continue until Memorial day.

The M. Rice Co. are busy with Memorial day wreaths, crepe, roses, carnations and other artificial flowers.

The beautiful sentiment expressed in Mothers' day has taken fast hold in this section. Following a resolution passed by the state legislature, the governor issued a proclamation setting aside the day for observance and the entire community seemed to enter into the spirit of the idea with a unanimity that was gratifying and surprising, and the florists reaped a rich harvest accordingly. Plants as well as cut flowers were used as remembrances.

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company called attention to the day early in the week by arranging a beautiful window, expressive of the sentiment. Surrounded by pretty plants, as in a home scene, was a wax figure of a mother opening a fine box of cut flowers labeled, "From Joy's", of course with the legend "To Mother." Many were attracted by this window to the day who would probably never otherwise have thought of it. To stimulate trade still further they had a display advertisement five columns wide and three-quarters of a page long. The firm was rewarded by having a large demand for which they had an abundant and fine stock to select from.

Geny Bros. had a fine trade and a splendid stock of flowers to meet every demand. They have an abundance of peonies of all colors now, which are just coming on the market. Oscar Geny, the elder brother of the firm, has been, and still is, seriously ill with rheumatism of the stomach. His family and many friends have been very anxious about him.

USUAL CLEAN-UP OF WHITE CARNATIONS.

Mothers' day was very generally observed and there was a lively movement in white carnations May 6-8. By Sunday morning, May 9, the market was well cleaned out of whites, though there was a surplus of the colored, and they dropped to $1 and $2 per 100. The ruling price for good white carnations was $4 to $6 per 100. In other stocks, the situation remains about the same as quoted in our last notes. There has been a shortening in the supply of some stocks, but there is enough to supply the demand. American Beauty roses, orchids, gardenias and lily of the valley are notably cheap. The street men are selling lily of the valley for $1 and $1.50 per 100, whichever price they can get. The presence in the North river of the battleship fleet promises to bring about a large number of social functions. There will be numerous dinners to the officers of the ships, but whether there will be much decorating remains to be seen. One retail florist has humorously remarked that he did not believe his customers were of the class that gave dinners.

May 10.—The market opened very quiet this morning, with an abundance of stock. In some stores considerable stock was carried over from Saturday, May 10, particularly roses and colored carnations. White carnations were cleaned up but it now appears that many of them went to out of town points.

NOTES.

Joseph Sklenka, who has greenhouses at 285 First avenue, Long Island City, has a very clever arrangement for supporting sweet peas. It consists of a succession of stout wire rings or hoops securely fastened together, but in a way that they can, when out of service, be folded up and laid away for another year. The upper tier of rings is hung on a stout pole or rod placed at the desired height. From that to the ground or bed there is a succession of rings and when the pea vines take hold there is no chance for them to get away. Mr. Sklenka is not pushing the idea, having other business, but is glad to show it to callers.

The Flatbush growers are all very busy and the carnation growers, who comprise an important section of the trade, have their young stock planted in the field. The intermittent hot weather of April did no appreciable damage to the flowering stock because there was no continued heat, nearly every excessively hot day being followed by several that were quite cool. No fault can be found with the quality or volume of stock, but the growers are not well pleased with the prevailing low prices, though there is no help for it at present. It can be definitely stated that there will be an abundant supply of white stock for Mothers' day.

At the Mrs. Charles Snyder estate, Woodside, we have noted several houses of the Ulrich Brunner roses blooming finely and several more houses coming on. A fine stock of callas was also noted. Since the death of Mrs. Snyder, which occurred several months ago, the business has been conducted by her sister, who for a numbero of years has sold the product of the range in the New York Cut Flower Exchange.

THE MONTREAL FLORAL EXCHANGE, Ltd.
140 Manfield Street - Montreal
The Wholesale Commission House of Canada, Featuring the Products of its Best Growers

At the Henry Hession Brooklyn range a very excellent stock of flowering carnations were noted, as well as a fine stock of young plants in the field. Preparations are also being made at this range to plant chrysanthemums. At this establishment we noted two interesting seedling carnations. One is crimson, the other of a variegated type, so rare that it may be classed as a novelty.

Dailledouze Bros., Brooklyn, have a very fine stock of carnations as well as Mignon roses, sweet peas and other stocks that they grow in minor quantities. They are now preparing to plant chrysanthemums in the beds made vacant by the removal of young carnation stock. Eugene Dailledouze states that he will not attend the San Francisco convention.

The Transfer Florist, James Soteriades, Second avenue and 86th street, has a good store and a good business. Jimmie, as he is familiarly termed, was among the first of the Greeks who embarked in the florist business in this city and he has been successful.

P. J. Smith is now well settled in the store lately vacated by Traendly & Schenck, 131 West 28th street. We are pleased to state that he has good neighbors, Walter F. Sheridan at 133 and John J. Coan of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., at 129.

J. Weinmann, who has long been well known in the wholesale district of New York, has now a nice retail store at 42 West Jackson avenue, Corona, in the management of which he is ably assisted by his wife, a trained designer.

At the range of Gerard Dryer, Elmhurst, we have noted a very fine stock of English ivy in 6-inch pots. Dracænas, Pandanus Veitchii and other stocks of good quality are also seen at this range.

Victor Dorval's Sons, Woodside, have disposed of a fine stock of tulips and narcissi, and are growing on a variety of other stock, asparagus, and several beds of marigolds being noteworthy.

A large greenhouse, with cut flower and plant departments, will be a feature of the Cosmopolitan Garden, which has been opened in the Stern building in West Twenty-third street.

Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., and a number of others, have arrived early to be on hand at the organization of the dahlia society.

The Columbia Florist, 2831 Broadway, which is well managed by James Vroydas, shows good arrangement and reports good business.

Miss M. Rareshide, bookkeeper for A. H. Langjhar, had two cousins on the ill-fated Lusitania. They have not been heard from.

Frank Millang, Jr., of the Coogan building, has just returned from a week's hunting and fishing at up-state points.

Philip F. Kessler of the Coogan building is handling very fine lilies, tulips and sweet peas. A. F. F.

New York Florists' Club.

The club met in the Grand Opera House building, evening of May 10, President Bunyard in the chair. The meeting from beginning to end was replete with interesting features. Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, Pa., the founder of Mothers' day, was present and made an eloquent and touching address with an appeal for a more general observance of the day. Miss Jarvis' talk came straight from the heart and went to the hearts of her hearers. She was given a standing vote of thanks. Max Schling and John B. Nugent spoke in support of what Miss Jarvis had said. Mr. Nugent suggested that a light pink carnation might also be worn for Mothers' day. All the speakers eulogized the mothers.

The other leading feature was the stereopticon lecture by Ernest H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, Mass., on the "Gardens and Flora of Japan." The various views showed many beautiful gardens, with foliage and flowering trees, shrubs and plants. The speaker has been an extensive traveler in the Orient, his latest trip being through Japan. He has the descriptive faculty to a marked degree. He was given a standing vote of thanks.

President Bunyard appointed the flower show committee as follows: A.

Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., was present and spoke of the organization of the American Dahlia Society, and urged all to become members. He advocated a dahlia show with the co-operation of New York clubs and societies. Ex-President J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of the S. A. F., of Boston, Mass., was present and addressed the club. He complimented Mr. Vincent on his activity in the good work of horticulture.

Appropriate resolutions on the death of Mrs. John B. Nugent, Simon Rodh and John Niquet were read and adopted.

A short time ago, M. A. Bowe, president of the Retailers' Association; John B. Nugent, and Chas. H. Brown, visited the public service commissioners relating to the ban placed by the elevated, subway and surface railway lines on carrying packages of flowers in cars. The matter was brought up in the club by Mr. Nugent, and he, with A. J. Guttman and Chas. H. Brown, were appointed a committee to further confer with the public service commissioners.

There was an excellent exhibit of plants and cut flowers. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., exhibited Canterbury bells, campanulas, primulas, in variety, some of them new, saxifraga, and euphorbias. N. Langeler, for M. Van Waveren & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, exhibited a variety of tulips. John Birnie, West Hoboken, N. J., showed geraniums and verbenas. Chas. Hunt, Richmond, S. I., displayed geraniums, fuchsias and candytuft; Chas. Schemness, Elmhurst, N. Y., featured English daisies. The light pink carnation, Baroness de Brenner, was a fine showing, by Samuel Batcheler, Mamaroneck, N. Y. P. W. Popp, also of Mamaroneck, exhibited pansies. The exhibitors received a vote of thanks. The house committee furnished a substantial lunch. A. F. F.

THE SEFTON MFG. CO., 1333 W. 35th Street CHICAGO, ILL.

New Haven, Conn.

While it cannot be said that there is a boom in the florist business of this city, all the dealers, particularly those that grow and handle plants, seem to be reasonably busy. Considering all conditions, the cut-flower trade is as good as can be expected. The seed and nursery business are active. The majority of the growers are well stocked with bedding plants and the demand for them is increasing.

NOTES.

Howard P. Brooks, 755 Campbell avenue, West Haven, now owns the range formerly the property of the late A. J. Thompson. Mr. Brooks is a young man and is engaged in other business, but nevertheless, he is fond of horticultural pursuits and is an expert on dahlias. At present his range is not large, but is well stocked and well cared for by a competent foreman, Mr. Brooks spending his spare time in the work. He is also branching out into the seed and nursery business.

The Doolittle Floral Co. have a good store at Orange and Court streets. In addition to the usual line of cut flowers they have put in a fine stock of garden furniture. Their greenhouses on Sherman avenue, which are under the management of H. H. Kelsey, are well filled with good, clean stock. There are about 18,000 square feet in their range.

Robert P. Johnstone, 1228 Whitney avenue, has a fine stock of plants and is doing a good business. Mr. Johnstone is one of the veterans of the business in this city. Another veteran is James Bruce, 24 Kensington street. He has good stock and is doing business.

One of the boys who takes time to study human nature, says that Joe Sokol, the grower of 21 Hard street, is the live wire in the florist business of this city. Joe certainly is a hustler.

Thomas Pattison, 141 Campbell avenue, West Haven, is now fully recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia. He was taken ill March 11 and was bedfast for four weeks.

John M. Champion & Co. have a fine stock of bedding plants at their greenhouses. At their store, 1025 Chapel street, everything looks prosperous.

The genial Myers, of the Flower Shop, 936 Chapel street, is busy as usual and well pleased with the condition of business.

Cowan & Heller is a new firm that has taken the retail store at 748 Chapel street, formerly conducted by Wm. H. Long.

Charles Munro's store, 974 Chapel street, is well supplied with stock from his Townsend avenue range.

The Chapel street retailers seem to be propserous and their stores present attractive features.

At the store of the S. H. Moore Co., 1054 Chapel street, we found business very active.

MOTHERS' DAY BEST YET.

Mothers' day this year surpassed any previous observance of the event in this city, and as usual a number of the florists were short of supply in carnation stock. Mothers' day has come to stay, but the question again arises, why the growers and wholesalers jump the prices for this special occasion, especially in view of the fact that you cannot get fresh stock. Many of the local retailers are trying to stimulate interest in Mothers' day among the general public, and feel that an injustice is being done, when prices soar to a point almost prohibitive.

Stock of all kinds is now plentiful and can be had at your own price. Peonies are coming in, and are a big help as they are always in demand, nothing equaling this flower for show at this time of the year. Roses and carnations are about as low as they will be this year. Gladioli in variety are plentiful, and iris is glutting the market.

NOTES.

Extra business in the way of table decorations, occasioned by the horse show last week, seemed to be pretty evenly divided among the trade.

A. and W. F. Gude are attending the duck pin bowling tournament at Boston, Mass., of which the latter is president of the organization.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE

NEW YORK CHICAGO

American Seed Trade Association.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

FLOWER seeds are reported sold out close.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, left for the east this week.

SAN JOSE, ILL.—A new seed house is being erected here by W. G. Kelly.

VISITED CHICAGO: Theo. Cobb, representing D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.

CHEROKEE, OKLA.—J. W. McDonald has opened a general seed store in this city.

THE Western Seedsmen's Association has selected Omaha, Neb., for its next meeting, May 15.

A REPORT is current that late rains have caused mildew on the growing seed onions in California.

KNOXVILLE, TENN. — The Sample-Craig Co. has succeeded the Whittle Produce & Seed Company.

SIDNEY, O.—The Farmers' Grain & Milling Co. is erecting a concrete block seed warehouse, 22x64 feet.

ONION districts in Indiana suffered by a frost the night of May 4 and growers may have to resow.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—A seed department has been added to the grain and feed business of F. A. Hood & Company.

THE demand for mixed grades of gladiolus from the florist trade seems to be declining in favor of the named kinds.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 12 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—C. C. Morse & Co., seedsmen, have opened a temporary branch in the Nathan-Doorman Co.'s store.

PROVIDING for the registration of seed grain contracts with the register of deeds, Representative O'Neill has introduced into the Minnesota legislature H. B. 320.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A four-story warehouse has been leased by the newly organized St. Louis Poultry Supply & Seed Company.

NORTH VERNON, IND.—The King Seed Company has been incorporated by N. M. King, J. M. King and E. E. Walker; capital, $10,000.

THE California coast has had quite a few late rains which may cause callas and other California bulbs to mature for shipment later than usual.

THE need of seed growing centers, or districts where seeds can be produced in quantity, in Colorado, has been pointed out by James D. Marshall, of the Colorado Agricultural College, Ft. Collins.

LEM BOWEN, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., who has been cruising in Hawaiian waters, is now at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, Calif.

GREENE, N. Y.—Adolph Kruhm, formerly with W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and the Livingstone Seed Co., Columbus, O., is now with the Page Seed Co. here.

MT. STERLING, KY.—The Blue Grass Seed Co., Inc., was sold at auction April 20, to satisfy court judgment. Allie Robertson, a tobacco grower, paid $10,025 for the property.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—Free seed corn, in lots of one bushel, will be given to needy farmers in the state upon application to the Jobbers' and Manufacturers' Association of this city.

NORTHRUP, KING & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., claiming use of the word "Northland" since December 15, 1914, have registered it, in connection with a design of a wild duck, as a trade mark for their seeds.

FOURTEEN samples of Minnesota-grown clover seed recently examined by the Minnesota university farm were found to contain as high as four per cent dodder. The state law requires that all seeds containing dodder be so labeled.

PETOSKEY, MICH.—After being actively engaged in the seed trade for the past 25 years, Darling & Beahan have dissolved partnership. The business will be continued by Mr. Darling, his former partner retiring on account of poor health.

ATLANTA, GA.—H. G. Hastings & Co. has filed applications for two charters of incorporation, the object being to facilitate the handling of the retail and wholesale departments of the business. The Hastings Seed Co. will handle the retail end and the H. G. Hastings Co. will take care of the wholesale business.

FRENCH advices regarding the bulb crop and prices of April 23 are: The meeting of the "Syndicate" on May 1 for establishing prices may not reduce these as low as might be surmised, owing to the lack of competent help and subsequent difficulty of lifting the bulbs. Rather too frequent rains have not been favorable to the development of the bulbs and more particularly to the white Roman hyacinths which show some bad effects from excess humidity.

OLLIOULES, FRANCE. — Madam Paul Lemoyne writes under date of April 22, that "both members of the firm of Lemoyne Freres are engaged in war, the elder on mobilization work and the other at the front. Their foremen are also on war duty and the establishment closed, not to re-open until this dreadful war is over."

MEMPHIS, TENN.—In future, L. A. Thornton & Co. will devote their entire energies to field seeds and feed exclusively, having given up the flour line.—W. E. Rhodes has retired temporarily from the seed trade.—The seed movement in this vicinity is slow, the farmers being hard up for money, according to the Memphis Seed & Plant Co.

FRENCH WAR NOTES.—Jean de Vilmorin, one of the brothers of Philippe de Vilmorin, has been prisoner in Germany, but has been exchanged among the severely wounded and is said to be recovering in France. Lieut. Henri Louie Vilmorin, of the naval service, is now with his ship on active war duty.—Jean Denaiffe, seedsmen of Carignan, is reported as killed in battle.—E. Thiebault, seedsman of Paris, is prisoner of war.

BALTIMORE, MD.—J. Bolgiano & Son have just received information from the crimson clover section of France that the fields of that crop will be used as green fodder for war horses. In addition to the fact that the season is from two to three weeks late, this compulsory action of French growers will tend to make the supply of the new crop of crimson clover seed shorter than any previous year. This firm says its crops of selected Siberian kale, grown at the foot hills of the Blue Ridge of Maryland, is looking fine and anticipates a good harvest. The season has been a long one here, trade has been steady. They have experienced fewer heavy days than usual, which has materially helped in promptly accommodating their customers. — Griffith and Turner Co. reports business of this year compares very favorably with business of last season.—Wiseman, Downs Co. state that business has been equally as good as last year. —R. FICUS UTILIS

A species that came to us through the Botanical Gardens at Washington, D. C., which promises to be a valuable addition as a decorative house plant. The leaves are thick and leathery and are from 18 inches to 24 inches long, one-half as wide, of a rich, holly-green color, with midrib and veins of an ivory white, which stand out prominently.

Early Potato Acreage on Atlantic Coast.

The truck crop specialist of the United States bureau of crop estimates makes the following report upon the acreage in early potatoes along the Atlantic coast section:

The early potato crop of the Atlantic coast begins to move from Florida about the middle of March, the movement continuing until the second week in June, fully 90 per cent of the crop going to market in April and May. The crop from Beaufort and Charleston counties, South Carolina, is usually ready for market about the second week in May, and, as the acreage in these localities is moderate, the way is cleared for the heavy crop from the eastern shore and Norfolk districts of Virginia and the northeastern counties of North Carolina. There is a small movement of potatoes from Chatham county, Georgia, which begins about the first week in May, while the movement from Florida is still heavy. Northeastern North Carolina is practically a part of the Norfolk district as to the date of movement.

The growing season for the whole territory was unfavorable, although the potato crop seems to have suffered less than other crops, the growth being retarded by the exceptionally cold season to about the same extent from Florida to the eastern shore of Virginia. The crop seems to have suffered most on the south gulf coast of Florida, where the acreage was reduced by the seed rotting in the ground because of excessive rainfall and an unusually large number of cold and cloudy days. The crop in Florida suffered damage by the frost of March 22, to the extent of from 20 to 25 per cent. The potato belt of Charleston was damaged materially by the frost of April 2.

In the state of Florida the acreage in early potatoes is estimated at 16,400, a decrease of less than one per cent as compared with the preceding year. Nearly 73 per cent of the total acreage is grown upon the east coast and about 50 per cent of the total acreage is grown in St. Johns county, where acreage is about the same as last year.

The area of early potatoes in Beaufort county, South Carolina, for the year 1915, is estimated at 1,800 acres, a decrease of 10 per cent over 1914, when the acreage is estimated to have been 2,000 acres.

The area in Charleston county, South Carolina, including Meggitts, Youngs Island, St. Andrews, and Charleston, is estimated at 7,500 acres, an increase of 25 per cent over the previous year.

A very remarkable development of the early potato growing industry has occurred on the eastern shore of Virginia. The acreage in the counties of Accomac and Northampton, for 1914, is estimated at 75,000, and for 1915, at 100,000 acres, an increase of 25 per cent. The increase for the year 1915 over the census year 1909, when the acreage for the counties named was 30,679, is 226 per cent.

The Spring Tomato Crop Under Glass.

The spring tomato crop is gaining friends, not only among vegetable growers, but also among florists. Florists are a little slow in finding out the value of tomatoes under glass; however, many are falling in line and more will follow. A fine crop of tomatoes is certainly better than an indifferent one of flowers, for which no market can be found in June and July. At this time we want to remind the grower of a few cultural details of the utmost importance—moisture control, fertilizing and mulching.

It is absolutely necessary to control moisture early in the game. The plants must be compelled to develop a powerful root system and short solid growth. The soil should be rich, very rich will do no harm, if the moisture be restricted. The tomato is very quick to display moisture conditions in the foliage; if green or yellowish green, too much water is given; if of a bluish cast with a metallic lustre, they are right. If blue without the "shine" they are too dry. Sprinkling or syringing is not productive of best results. The ground should receive frequent shallow hoeing until the mulching period is at hand.

Tomatoes should receive a liberal dressing of phosphoric fertilizers, either bone meal or acid phosphate. This should be worked into the soil by hoeing, so it is there when the mulching becomes necessary. Under careful management the plants will get fruit readily at this time of the year and as soon as one or two clusters of fruit have set, it is best to apply the mulch. When the fruit is swelling, the plants will use much nourishment and towards the ripening period any dryness at the roots is likely to produce dry-rot of the fruit. A mulch of fairly fresh horse manure, put on about three inches deep, will help to feed the plants and also preserve much moisture. The roots can approach the surface under the mulch and make use of the fertilizer put there.

As a summary we would say: Start with a moderate moisture supply and increase after fruit has formed and keep a sharp eye on ample moisture towards the ripening period to avoid the dreaded rot. We have seen fine crops ruined the last moment by insufficient watering. We must realize that a full grown plant, laden with fruit, must have a great deal of water during the hot days of June and July.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

WE are in receipt of the Twenty-first annual report of the park department of New Bedford, Mass.

ABILENE, KAN.—Werff Bros., proprietors of the Abilene Nurseries, have sold their business to Miller Bros.

WAXAHACHIE, TEX. — The Waxahachie Nursery Co. has increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $92,500.

GENEVA, N. Y.—Mrs. Susan C. Smith, mother of W. and T. Smith, nurserymen of this city, died April 25, aged 98 years.

EDGEBROOK, ILL.—The Otto Wittbold Nursery report a very brisk season with the total sales to date considerably larger than last season. The demand during March was exceedingly heavy and the sales were almost double those of the same month last year.

MOBILE, ALA.—The Gulf Coast Horticultural Society at its annual meeting here, April 27-28, selected this city as permanent headquarters and set the last week in April, 1916, as the time of the next annual convention. Officers were elected as follows: Dr. O. F. E. Winberg, Silver Hill, Ala., president; L. T. Rhodes, Bay Minette, Ala., secretary and treasurer.

Early-Flowering Viburnums.

The two Viburnums which flower here first are among the most beautiful of all the plants in this genus which can be grown in New England. One is American and the other is a native of Korea. The American species, V. alnifolium, the moosewood of northern woods, is one of the species on which the flower-clusters are surrounded by a ring of large pure white sterile flowers. It has broad, thick, heart-shaped leaves and showy fruit, and in the woods the straggling branches often take root and thus form thickets which made traveling difficult. This plant has never really succeeded well in the arboretum and is difficult to cultivate, although good plants may occasionally be seen in other Massachusetts gardens. There is now a small plant in flower among the dwarf birches on the Bussey Hill Road opposite the viburnum collection. The Korean species, V. Carlesii, is rightly considered one of the handsomest plants recently introduced into American gardens. Its value is in the white, extremely fragrant flowers which are produced in rather small compact clusters and open from bright pink buds. As the flowers in a cluster do not all open at the same time the mixture of white flowers and pink buds adds greatly to the attractiveness of the inflorescence. It is a rather dwarf shrub of compact habit, with pale green leaves and has not yet produced fruit in the arboretum. There is a Japanese species, V. bitchuense, which somewhat resembles V. Carlesii, but the flowers are small and the habit of the plant is not so good. Mistaken by Japanese botanists for V. Carlesii, this plant has been propagated in Japanese nurseries and sent to the United States and Europe as V. Carlesii. In buying that plant care should be taken to secure the right species.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 6, 1915.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

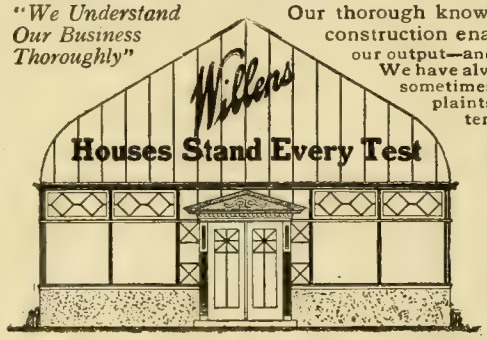
"We Understand Our Business Thoroughly"



Our thorough knowledge of the finer points in greenhouse construction enables us to save that much on the cost of our output—and we are giving you the benefit of this saving. We have always given 100 cents value for every dollar—sometimes more. As we have never yet had any complaints, we lose nothing by guaranteeing our material against defects.

Willens Personal Service

Every bit of the work is personally directed by one of the Willens'. If we do the erecting, one of the Willens' personally supervises the work. Careful attention is paid to the minutest details, each of which is conducive to longer life and better greenhouse service. If you have never tried us or are dissatisfied in your past dealings with others, begin now to benefit by our service and material. Write us today.

What They Say:

Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,
L. Buckendorf,
Norfolk, Neb.

ACTUAL RESULTS--NOT PROMISES

Kroeschell Replaces Two Cast Iron Boilers.

The Marysville Floral Co., of Marysville, O., installed a No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler in 1905. Previous to this time they used cast iron boilers. The following letter speaks for itself:

"Has the Kroeschell given entire satisfaction? Yes! We had two cast iron boilers, but yours proved by far the best. Your boiler has already outlasted the two cast iron boilers by five years, and all the expense that we have been put to was a smoke dome."

(Signed) MARYSVILLE FLORAL CO.

July 21, 1913, Marysville, O.

Get the Kroeschell First

Several years ago Mr. Ponting corresponded with us in regard to the Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler, but was persuaded to install two sectional cast iron boilers which were claimed to be superior to the Kroeschell.

In the meantime we placed a number of Kroeschell Boilers in the immediate vicinity of Mr. Ponting, and he could not help but notice their great efficiency, and last year, while at the convention, he placed his order for his first Kroeschell. The following letter speaks for itself:

"We like the Kroeschell Boiler very much. It gives entire satisfaction, and it is so easy to fire. I will trade you the two cast iron sectional boilers for another like the Kroeschell I have."

July 16, 1913, Cleveland, Ohio. (Signed) FRED PONTING.

Kroeschell Replaces Three Cast Iron Boilers.

We do not have to fire our boiler as often as our brother florists who are using different makes. The Kroeschell has replaced three cast iron sectional boilers, and it certainly has given entire satisfaction.

It only takes a few words to express the good quality of your boilers and they are as follows: "Of all firms handling boilers and advertising them truthfully, the party buying a boiler would have to get the Kroeschell, as you are certainly advertising nothing but the facts." (Signed) ALEXANDER A. LAUB.

July 18, 1913, New Hamburg, N. Y.

Kroeschell Replaces Cast Iron Boilers.

The range of C. Peterson & Son, at Escanaba, Mich., was formerly heated by cast iron boilers. Last season this firm installed their first Kroeschell, a No. 6, which is now heating 13,000 to 14,000 sq. ft. of glass. They state that they fire these boilers three to four times during the night in zero weather. Under date of June 28, 1913, they write as follows:

"The Kroeschell Boiler has given better satisfaction than any other boiler we have ever had. For years we have fired many different boilers, and really never could get one that we might say was entirely satisfactory—there was always something wrong—but now, since we have tried the Kroeschell, we have solved our boiler proposition. We have a (—— ——) cast iron sectional boiler here, only used two years, and we wish we could get rid of it and put in another Kroeschell in its place."

(Signed) C. PETERSON & SON, Escanaba, Mich., June 28, 1913.

Kroeschell Replaces Four Cast Iron Boilers.

Previous to 1909, Mr. Schultz, of Menominee, Mich., heated his entire plant with cast iron boilers. It had been claimed that cast iron boilers are superior to the Kroeschell. Mr. Schultz is now heating 18,000 sq. ft. of glass with the Kroeschell which was installed in 1909, and they are required to fire same only twice a night. The following letter speaks for itself:

"We do not have the least trouble to maintain about 60 degrees in the coldest weather. Your Kroeschell Boiler is the best I ever had. Before I heard about your boiler I had four cast iron boilers, and I would not part with the Kroeschell for a hundred cast iron boilers now." (Signed) CHARLES SCHULTZ.

Stamford, Conn.

George L. Waterbury is the pioneer florist of Stamford. The place which he sold a few years ago to the Stamford hospital, was the site on which his father, now deceased, started in the florist business in 1860. Mr. Waterbury bought another block of land near the hospital, erected new greenhouses, and now has a very neat and well stocked range.

The greenhouses, formerly connected with what was called the Fernwood Nursery, are now under the management of H. Carlson and are known as the Palmer Greenhouses, the ownership having reverted to L. M. Palmer, of New York. Aside from the greenhouses there is a fine nursery and estate where Mr. Palmer makes his summer home.

The business formerly known as M. A. Free is now conducted as the M. A. Free Company by the Free sisters. Their greenhouses on Richmond Hill are stocked with a fine lot of geraniums and other bedding plants and they have a nice store in Atlantic street.

The Stamford Seed & Nursery Co. is now under the management of G. B. Cannon, well known in the trade. They have a good store and seem to be busy.

R. Warrington, who gave up the florist business for a time, started again about five years ago. He has a small but neat and well kept range at 1 Green street.

A. F. F.

SEDALIA, MO.—C. A. Claeson, florist and grower for the State Fair Floral Company, in which capacity he has been employed since that company first started its greenhouses in this city, has resigned. Mr. Claeson has not yet formulated future plans.

PAYING HOUSES

The above illustration represents an exterior view of the range of houses that we built for V. Bezdek, the well known carnation and sweet pea grower at Wilmette, Ill. Mr. Bezdek is perfectly satisfied with his range and takes great pleasure in showing visitors through the houses, where only quality stock is grown. Near Mr. Bezdek's place are a number of other large ranges built by us, one of which is nearly 20 years old and is still in good condition, and in operation, which shows that Dietsch houses stand the test of time and are the best paying houses to build. It will be to your interest to get our sketches and estimates for your new house. Our construction is strong, lasting and efficient; at the same time it is inexpensive.

Memorial Day Preparations

The Observation of the Day.

The last floral day of the yearly season for the florist is Memorial day, May 30, and to the retailer this means a much larger amount of labor for the same return than on any other floral holiday, for where much of the trade at Christmas and Easter is in plants and cut flowers, a large proportion of the sales at Memorial day are for flowers arranged in designs and bouquets. To the grower, Memorial day is one of the best of the year for there is not only a demand for all that can be produced and at a good price, but the expense of growing is comparatively small in comparison to that of other large flower days, for the coal bill is almost at the lowest figure and the labor expended in wrapping is almost nothing. Yet both the grower and retailer must be fully prepared to meet this great demand, which will necessitate not only a large supply of flowers but also a great quantity of supplies and accessories for which there is always a large sale.

While the selection of one day in the year which was to be observed in memory of the dead by decorating their graves with flowers originated with those who desired to commemorate the deeds of the soldiers who gave their lives in the great civil war fifty years ago, yet it has been adopted by the general public, and in many places the cemeteries are covered with flowers by the relatives and friends of those who have departed. Memorial day, notwithstanding its general observance, is regarded as the day of the Grand Army of the Republic and last year was more extensively observed than ever before in many sections of the nation, and without question this will be increased this year.

It has often been remarked that the observance of the day is much more general in some sections of the country than in others, especially in New England, where the demand for everything in flowers is almost impossible to fill, notwithstanding the large supply. This may be perhaps somewhat accounted for by the intense feeling throughout that section before and during the war which has been handed down by fable and anecdote and the official observance of the day by state and municipalities which set aside the day by proclamation, making it a legal holiday and appropriating money to assist the Grand Army of the Republic in holding processions, having orations, and in decorating the graves. In some cities and towns a large proportion of the populace attend the services which are held at the cemetery and everybody decorates their family burial lot and the graves of their relatives.

At the Cemetery.

The Alburger greenhouses, conducted by Mrs. Alburger, on Ridge avenue, opposite the south Laurel Hill cemetery gate, Philadelphia, Pa., have a live wire in their manager, Charles Fliegel, who knows this particular branch of the business to perfection, catering to the every whim of the cemetery lot owner, holding the old trade and looking out for the new, and winning it with the best of stock and up to date methods. Sometime ago the business was seriously threatened by a decree of the cemetery company that all the planting and care of the lots would, after a certain date, be forbidden to outsiders and attended to by the company alone. Mr. Fliegel at once, in a counter move, with other interested members of the craft, woke up the lot holders, who took the matter to court, where the evidence presented was such that while no decision has been given, the order was not enforced, nor does it appear likely to be. In speaking of their system for caring for Memorial day business, Mr. Fliegel described his methods.

All their spring work has to be finished by May 29 and only the decoration of the graves is done on Memorial day, and that very early in the morning. There are not many set or arranged pieces used for this work, the call being mostly for sprays or small bouquets for vases. The sprays are nearly all of peonies, the great flower for memorial. The clusters run from one to three dozen flowers, which can be quickly gotten together and generally gave satisfaction.

The vase is an important feature of many cemetery lots. After years of experience Mr. Fliegel has found no center like Dracæna indivisa. It stands all kinds of weather and is always larger at the finish. Next to the center he plants crotons, geraniums, ageratums, petunias, California giant, cuphea and Pilea muscosa. Always put three or four of the latter in as they give a touch of lightness, as asparagus to a bunch of flowers. Hardy ivies, vincas, nasturtiums, thunbergias, ivy geraniums, lobelias and parlor ivy are the vine or border plants for the edge. The cemetery vases and hanging baskets are watered once every day, except in very wet weather, this added care being counted on in the care of the lot for the year. The start to fill the vases and beds is made about May 16-20, risking coleus and crotons after the latter date, although it is rather bleak in some locations for these tender plants, but as time is short some chances must be taken.

For geraniums, Nutt is preferred; it is undoubtedly the most satisfactory red. Coleus is used as a border, Golden Bedder for a large bed and alternantheras for the small ones. Wm. Pfister and John Pfister are very good dwarf coleus for small beds. The acalyphas are also very good vase and bedding plants, working in nicely with crotons. All the fancy beds are made of crotons, favoring the old tried sorts, Andreanum, Fasciotus, Queen Victoria and Baroness Rothschild, the borders of these beds being coleus. For extra large beds acalyphas for the outside row, with alternantheras as the border are effective.

As a grave covering the small leaved ivy is used, planting this along the edge of the grave in the sod at the base of the mound, beginning at the head and training the vines from both sides up over the mound, pinning the branches down to the soil, where they take root. Large quantities are grown in 2½-inch pots, two to three plants to a pot, with about 12 inch vines to a plant for this purpose.

The rose list is confined to a few, planting Grus an Teplitz, the Killarneys, white and pink, Hermosa, Magna Charta and the old reliable Jacque. Very little shrubbery is used as it soon gets too large and is ornamental but a short time in the spring.

Quite a few flowers are sold to visitors on Memorial day who desire to lay them on the grave, but the orders for most of this work are given with the care of the lot and these commissions finished the night before, as they must be in position very early on the morning of Memorial day.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Special Sales.

The season is now here, when flowers or plants can be bought at very low prices in quantity lots. The amount or the number of the plants purchased need not be so large as to stagger the timid man. Try out your commission man or grower. He will meet you half way with offers that will very likely surprise you. Daffodils are good for a special; offer them for 50 cents a dozen. Fifteen dollars a thousand will get all the stock required. A card to all customers offering these flowers at that price for a week, together with a generous display, will be sure to produce results. Carnations will soon flood the markets and the commission men, if you are running special sales, will offer exceptional bargains in good stock, if a fair sized block is taken, as they are always ready to encourage an active man, particularly when the market is full.

The retailer, who is a bit doubtful about the results and the effect on his regular business, must not lose heart if his efforts do not meet with instant success. Anything that will stir things up and create new business is worth trying and experience will be gained with each effort that will give confidence, and when the business does come, it opens up a line that can be expanded to almost any degree.

Try the dollar box idea—it is worked profitably by many live men. Make it a "Saturday Special"—a great flower bargain, if ordered by the month or season. If a trade for these can be worked up so that a quantity go out together, the stock to fill them can be bought at prices considerably below the normal.

Sales of blooming and foliage plants can be made very inviting, and also a source of profit. Buy a block of one or two hundred Primula obconica or malacoides, and the price will be considerably shaded. Have them set aside for a week or two to get full of flowers. A card, briefly and nicely worded, will bring your customers, and the excellence of the stock, together with the low prices, will do the rest. A grower will force in a lot of azaleas at one time to your order at quite a discount. They are always acceptable at this season, and will prove a drawing card. Now that many house plants are looking the worse for wear, a "fern special" meets with good response. A plant that usually sells for $1.00 can be bought in quantity to return a very fair profit at 75 cents. These are only a few of the things that can be handled in this way to help and encourage new business.

A store should each week have some new feature, something that has been made enough of to be sure to attract attention. A rearranging of the movable fixtures and fittings, tables, pedestals, rugs and the like, is worth while and helps, with the addition of the special stock that is being offered, to bring the success desired. In addition to the feature or special sales, the general trade of the store is greatly benefited, as staple articles, as well as larger sizes of plants offered are required, and regular prices are readily obtained. To get the customers there is half the battle, many sales being made if the stock is well displayed and the salesmen alive to their opportunities.

K.

Ornamental Bedding.

With the winter over a great field opens to the live florist in supplying the demand for the decoration of the lawn and home grounds. The desire to raise one's own flowers, to beautify the surroundings of the dwelling, is constantly present, especially where the occupant is also owner, but more particularly when everything is bursting into leaf and flower. Then is when the good resolutions are put into action, and the florist has his opportunity.

Following an interview with Robert A. Craig, of the Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, Pa., which makes a specialty of bedding and ornamental foliage plants for the lawn and flower garden, growing them by the hundred thousand, we are able to present a list of the latest plants used for the purpose.

Where the bedding is at all extensive, a shady border combination of Begonias luminosa, red, and Prima Donna, pink, with a row of fuchsias at the back and a border of Double Lobelia Catherine Millard in front, a very beautiful effect is produced. These dwarf begonias of the Vernon type are very free bloomers, even in the bright sunlight and should be tried where geraniums have been used; as a change they will be found equally effective. Flowering Vincas rosea and alba, also the white with the bright red eye, make a splendid bed bordered with any of the bright leaved plants. They are in flower the entire season. Lantanas are not used nearly enough. They are very decorative with their orange red blossoms, which flower continuously until frost. They can be pinched and made into a very compact bed.

People are so wedded to the geraniums that you cannot get it out of their head—they cling to their old favorite because they do not know the beauty of many other plants. There are the snapdragons, which, with a little care, make a grand bed. They come true to color in many shades and can be pinched to make them dwarf. They bloom the entire season and are valuable for cutting. Mimulus tigrinus for a shady border is aglow with its gorgeous orange and red tints and it does wonderfully well with partial shade.

Calendulas and marigolds are very showy with their brilliant yellow and orange shades; they are profuse in their flowering and very useful for cutting. Celosias are striking plants in the blooming section, their great feather-like heads and combs of brilliant red being very noticeable. They commence blooming in the seed box. As a plant useful about a bed of cannas, or in a border, or which can be used in many places, Salvia Zurich, or scarlet sage, is indispensable. We have discarded all other varieties.

Speaking of cannas, I do not know of any plant that has shown so much improvement in recent years as the canna. The varieties that have earned their place and become standards and the recent introductions of the past few years, particularly those of the so-called orchid flowered type, are superb, producing wonderful spikes of bloom, fairly dazzling in their splendor. They are particularly effective in a long strip bordering a lawn. They grow too tall for a small, round bed, although some of the dwarf varieties are useful here.

In speaking of the blooming plants we must not forget the dahlias for the early autumn. The improvement of the dahlias, particularly in the cactus type, has been very marked in the past ten years. The standard sorts of today, all introductions of the past decade, are indeed wonderful in form and coloring and dominate the cut-flower market in their season. Space should be given to chrysanthemums, which follow and close the season—they are at their best when all else has gone just before winter's cold chill puts all nature to sleep.

The foliage section must not be forgotten. Ornamental and highly colored foliage is as beautiful in its effectiveness as flowering plants; it is attractive at all times. A heavy rain, which dashes down the glory of the geranium and other flower beds, adds but a fresh beauty and lustre to the croton, the king of all plants in its class. A bed or border of crotons is effective and highly decorative from the time the plants are set until the time for their removal inside. Dracænas are another very valuable plant for beds and borders, most varieties doing best with partial shade. A very attractive bed in front of our porch facing north was D. terminalis, with its brilliant red leaves alternated with Pandanus Veitchii. This was bordered with nephrolepis todeoides. It was beautiful from June on, and the most satisfactory bed we had ever had. A bed in the same place of Begonia rubra a year or so previous, was most satisfactory, it being constantly full of its handsome clusters of coral blossoms. It is a splendid summer flowering plant in a partially shaded situation and should be in every collection.

WREATH ON EASEL.

The best dracænas are terminalis, amabilis, stricta grandis. Titworthii, Guilfoylii, Massangeana, Pere Cheron and De Smetiana, all with splendidly colored foliage that will grow wonderfully in partial shade. D. Kelleriana, with its mottled white leaves, is very striking and colors brilliantly in September. Acalphas and Sanchezia nobilis are two very brilliant foliage plants that work well into fancy bedding. Fancy leaved caladiums are also very distinctive; they favor partial shade and in their brilliant hued leaves have a very tropical appearance.

I must not forget coleus, the robust large-leaved Brilliancy, with its gorgeous hues, captivating everyone who sees it. We can never get stock enough to have any left over for propagation. The order for plants went out in February but as yet our turn has not come, the demand everywhere being so great.

Roses of the baby rambler everblooming type are very useful along driveways or in borders. They are wonderful in their first cloud of blossoms, and if the season is favorable a continuity of bloom is assured. Triumph de Orleans, Phyllis, Erna Teschendorff, Ellen Paulson, the improved Amy Muller, Jessie and W. H. Taft, are all good sorts of pleasing color and continuity of bloom.

For permanent bedding where the whole effect of the lawn is confined to shades of green the fancy evergreens, the retinisporas, arbor vitæs, junipers, and the like are very satisfactory. They can be trimmed and keep their individuality, yet when arranged in groups, are very desirable.

Early-Flowering Honeysuckles.

Some of the early bush honeysuckles are already in flower; indeed the pale yellow fragrant flowers of two Chinese species, Lonicera Standishii and L. fragrantissima, have already fallen. These plants have long been favorites in the gardens of the middle and southern states, where they grow to a large size and form round-topped shapely bushes. In New England, however, these plants are not always perfectly hardy and it is not usual for them to flower as well as they have this spring. Other species already in flower in the shrub collection are Lonicera tangutica, with small pink flowers; L. Syringantha, var. Wolfii, with very fragrant violet-colored flowers; L. Canadensis and L. utahensis, with pale yellow flowers; the geographical forms of L. coerulea, with larger yellow flowers, and the beautiful Japanese L. gracilipes, with its drooping pink flowers. For another month, at least, different honeysuckles will be opening their flowers, and these will be followed on many species by brilliant fruits which often make these plants conspicuous in summer and autumn.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 13, 1915.

Evergreens in Europe.

Any one who has seen or studied European landscape gardening is immediately impressed with the extensive use of evergreens, which furnish the bulk of the material for the basic construction of their gardens, according to A. H. Hill, of Dundee, Ill., in speaking on the subject before the North Shore Horticultural Society, Lake Forest, Ill., January 15, 1915. The English garden is chiefly famous for its evergreens, especially yews, which are, long-lived. The yew has been known and appreciated for ages and is yet one of the most esteemed evergreen trees. The Aukerwyke yew, near Staines, England, is supposed to be upwards of 1,000 years old. The evergreen in one form or another is seen everywhere throughout Europe, and from the sixteenth century onward, their popularity has been pre-eminent.

Closely associated with Shakespeare and the historical gardens of England, at Stratford on the Avon, is Ann Hathaway's garden, a masterpiece in landscape art, standing as a lasting monument to its original designer and planter. Surrounded by an evergreen hedge and filled here and there with masses of evergreens, it is a pattern and a guide to every one aiming to have his garden a thing that will live after him and cause people to remember him.

What finer monument can a man have? Our possibilities today are far greater than those of an artist who dabbles in paints, for we are handling as our materials, real growing things whose beauty and perfection is not attained in a day, but is attained year after year and down through the ages. The green of our color scheme and background cannot fade or be washed away, but is a thing of permanency, and a delight to each succeeding generation. The trend of all phases of education today is toward permanent results, and we must keep abreast of the times.

Women's National Agric. and Hort. Ass'n.

The second annual conference of the above organization was held at the New York botanical gardens, Bronx park, Friday, May 7, under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York. The attendance numbered several hundred, and those present enjoyed a programme, both interesting and instructive, speakers of national reputation as authorities in floriculture and horticulture being represented in the list of lecturers.

After brief addresses of welcome by Dr. Gilman Thompson, of the New York Botanical Garden, and George I. Powell, of the Horticultural Society of New York, Mrs. Francis King, president of the association, introduced Dr. S. E. Persons of Cazenovia, N. Y., who gave a very interesting account of what the Presbyterian church in that city had done in starting a county fair free from commercialism, and based only on co-operative effort.

Taking as his topic, "Agriculture in the Rural Schools," Arthur Dean, chief of the vocational schools division, University of the state of New York, told how by teaching horticulture, and having pupils keep strict account of profit and loss, the state was bringing home and school closer together. D. G. Mellor, manager of the order, commission and food products department of the Wells-Fargo Express Co., followed and showed the excellent work being done by express companies and common carriers in finding a market for growers for their products. Along the same line Miss Louise Klein Miller, curator of school gardens, Cleveland, O., and Dr. C. D. Jarvis, bureau of education, Washington, D. C., told of excellent results obtained from children's gardens. Dr. Samuel Fels, president of the Philadelphia Vacant Lots Association, was listened to with marked interest as he told an interesting story, showing how through the 1-6-acre plots provided by the association, every dollar invested brought a return of $4, and how many of the persons who began in this small way, were able to take up growing in earnest later on.

Maurice Fuld, president of Knight & Struck Co., New York, had for his subject, "Perennials and Their Commercial Possibilities." He emphasized the fact that the selling end is one not usually understood by amateurs, bringing out the fact that the seller must have an intimate knowledge of his plants, and so interest his customers in his product.

The personal experiences of a veteran rose grower, John Cook, Baltimore, Md., originator of My Maryland and Francis Scott Key, related by himself, was an unexpected pleasure, and the speaker was listened to with rapt interest.

Dwarf fruit trees for the suburbanite were strongly recommended by Frank A. Waugh, professor of horticulture and landscape gardening at Massachusetts Agricultural College, especially for one who wants quick results and little room.

William C. Deming, Georgetown, Conn., secretary of the Northern Nutgrowers' Association, had for his subject, "The Possibilities of Nutgrowing in the East," and spoke of the importance of nuts as food.

George T. Powell, New York, deprecated the fact that people without capital or experience, thought they could go "back to the land" and make a living from it.

I. W. Whitehall, Bronx park commissioner, spoke of the International Garden Club's plans, taking the place of Mrs. Charles Frederick Holmes, who was too ill to attend.

Among the exhibits by members was a beautiful collection of narcissi shown by Mrs. Peckham of the New Rochelle Garden Club. These were effectively placed in lovely green and blue bowls made by Mrs. Cornelius Poillon and aroused much admiration.

HILDA LOINES, Chairman.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, Wednesday, May 12, with President Westlake in the chair. Messrs. Duthie, Gray and Holloway were appointed judges and the following awards were made:

For competition. Vase of out-door flowers—H. Miller, first. Three heads cauliflower—J. T. Johnstone, first. Three heads lettuce—P. Charboniard, first.

For exhibition. Vase of tulips—P. Charboniard, honorable mention. Bunch of asparagus—A. Fournier, honorable mention.

James Duthie spoke briefly of the American Dahlia Society recently organized, outlining its proposed work and urging all interested to become members.

The Darwin tulip exhibition held at the Neighborhood Association building, May 14, was a success. Competition in the classes for prizes offered by John Scheepers & Co., New York, was especially keen. Among the prize winning exhibitors were George D. Pratt (J. F. Johnstone, Gr.), George F. Baker (G. Hutton, Gr.), and J. P. Morgan (A. McGregor, Gr.). Messrs. Duthie, Holloway and Trepass acted as judges.

GOOD MEMORIAL DAY TRADE EXPECTED.

Business the past week has been quiet, but ended up with a busy Saturday. Cut flowers of all kinds have a good sale. Floral work was very good. Everyone is ready for the Memorial day business and look for a busy time. Magnolia wreaths and bouquets will be featured as usual. Geraniums are good this year and if things stay as they are now there will be no shortage for Memorial day trade. Bedding plants and all outside stock is now selling well, and the florists that have outside men working are keeping them busy all the time, some of them having more orders than they can attend to now.

NOTES.

Miss Florence Willard is keeping eight men busy all the time with outside work, and her stock of Memorial day plants is fine. Her house of salvia plants cannot be beaten anywhere. Her three new houses are nearly finished and will soon be stocked.

The Westminster Greenhouse has a fine stock of bedding plants this year that are up to their usual standard. Good business in this line as well as in the other branches of the work that they do is reported.

The street men are now on the streets more than ever selling sweet peas and short roses. H. A. T.

West Orange, N. J.

The Manda Floral Co. has recently finished a nice building near the entrance of Llewellyn Park, West Orange, and opened a first class retail store. Joseph A. Manda, well and favorably known in the trade, is the promoter of the enterprise. Llewellyn park is a beautiful residence section and there are many fine homes, among them being that of the famous inventor, Thomas A. Edison. Joseph A. Manda and wife expect to attend the S. A. F. convention.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS BRIGHT.

Mothers' day was better than ever, but stock was scarce in carnations and roses; any kind of flower or pot plants in bloom sold. Many orders had to be turned down. The warm April forced all the stock to summer flowers, small and soft. At present we are having cool weather and stock will be in better condition for Memorial day. Business is good and has been good since May 1, and the outlook for a big Memorial day trade is assured. Bedding plants are selling well and the florists are all doing satisfactory business.

At a well attended and very successful meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association held in this city, the following officers were elected: H. A. Johns, Sioux City, Ia., president; Mel L. Webster, Independence, Ia., secretary; H. G. Windheim, Omaha, Neb., treasurer.

WONDERFUL MOTHERS' DAY BUSINESS.

Mothers' day proved a wonderful day for business amongst the florists here. An unusual amount of advertising had been accorded the occasion during the week previous through the daily papers and even the ministers of some of the churches gave publication of their intention to preach sermons on Mothers' day themes at the morning services on May 9; so taking it all in all, Mothers' day was advertised in this city to an extent never in any way approached even in any previous year. We have no estimate of just how many carnations were sold for the occasion, but the supply was about adequate for the demand as ample provision had been made for a big trade. Florists about doubled their orders of previous years and retailed at a flat price of $1.50 per dozen, 15 cents each for single flowers, and cleaned out nicely by Sunday noon. A very noticeable feature was the increase in the out of town trade, hundreds of boxes were mailed or expressed to different parts of the state on the Friday previous. This annual celebration has certainly come to be a great day for florists, so far as this state is concerned.

The general lines of trade continue to be quite brisk. The bedding season is on the wane now, but so far it has been an eminently satisfactory one. Those who have handled ordinary bedding and nursery stock have had the greatest season in the history of the state; anything salable has been disposed of and at good prices. As an indication of how things are progressing in the out-door gardens, it may be mentioned that the writer has in his garden a patch of some 600 gladioli planted April 3, and which are now 18 inches high and very robust.

S. S. B.

London, Ont

The demand for white carnations for Mothers' day was far greater than the supply. Other flowers were in good crop, and sufficient to meet the local demand. From out-of-town points there came an insistent demand for carnations, however, and orders for many thousands had to be turned away. Prices were about the same as a year ago.

Local business conditions are improving. Large orders for war munitions have caused factories to work to their capacity, and the concentration camps in Western Ontario have added an impetus to the trade.

The unseasonable weather during April has shortened up the spring planting, all trees and shrubs having started into growth at least three weeks earlier than usual.

Joseph J. Greenbacker has a range of 18,000 square feet and a considerable area of cold frames. In his houses at present, a noteworthy feature is a particularly fine stock of vincas, geraniums and other bedding plants. In his frames he has a great stock of fine tomato plants in 4-inch pots.

Blatchley's Flower Shop, 36 West Main street, which is managed by R. C. Blatchley, seems to be doing a prosperous business. They have a range of 15,000 square feet at Stillman's Corners, Waterbury road.

OBITUARY.

Frederick Weir.

Frederick Weir, a member of the well-known Weir family of Brooklyn, N. Y., many of whom have been or are now in the florist business, died May 14, in the 60th year of his age. His father, the late James Weir, was a florist and the deceased was trained in the business from boyhood. For 30 years or more he was in partnership with his brother, John, who is yet active in the business and well known in New York and Brooklyn. For the past four years Frederick Weir had been with his nephew, J. Ebb Weir, who has a range at Jamesport, L. I., N. Y. Mr. Weir was a clever man and well thought of by those with whom he had business dealings. As a tribute to his popularity it may be stated that thousands of men, women and children of the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, where he spent many years as a grower, called him "Uncle Fred." He died in the Norwegian hospital from blood poisoning, resulting from enlargement of the glands. Mr. Weir had been suffering for some time from his ailment, and it was finally decided to have an operation performed, but when he was taken to the hospital it was found that the disease had progressed too far, and he was beyond medical or surgical aid.

He was born in Brooklyn and educated in the public schools and other institutions, and spent most of his life as a grower and resided in the Bay Ridge section. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum and had been a member of Brooklyn Lodge, B. P. O. Elks, for ten years, resigning his membership when he removed to Jamesport. He is survived by a widow and one daughter, by a brother, John Weir, and a sister, Mrs. Otto Heinigke.

Edward Welch, Jr.

Edward Welch, Jr., son of Edward Welch of Welch Bros. Co., of the City Hall Flower Market, Boston, Mass., died at his home in that city May 17 of pleurisy of the heart. He had only been ill two days. He had many friends both in and out of the trade, by whom he was held in high esteem and the news of his sudden demise came as a severe shock.

CONCORD, N. H.—A partnership has been formed between S. R. Baker and Charles V. Kimball, florist, formerly of Franklin, N. H., but now of this city.

AMESBURY, MASS.—Joseph J. Comley, florist, has purchased the True property. Improvements will include a large greenhouse and extensive flower beds.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF.—Mrs. A. Warendorff, wife of the New York florist of that name, was a visitor to the botanical garden at the exposition, May 10.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—Local florists have been requested by the park commission to submit plans for the shrubbery adornment of West End Lake Shore park.

ROCHESTER, IND.—Sales of carnations for Mothers' day this year were equal to the demand a year ago, thus proving the popularity of the day, according to John H. Shelton.

ORANGE, TEX.—Henry Adams, landscape gardener for the Southern Pacific railroad, completed his work here May 13, setting out plants in the parks at the passenger station.

ARGENTA, ARK. — All flowers and plants necessary for the work of beautifying vacant lots and school grounds are being furnished to the city free of charge by J. W. Vestal & Son.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.—The following flower shows have been announced by the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society: Spring show, June 11; dahlias, October 5-6; chrysanthemums, November 2.

SUPERIOR, WIS.—Alex C. Gardiner, who was compelled by illness to retire several months ago, has recovered and has become manager of the Superior Flower Store, 1410 Tower avenue.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.—Every inmate of the state reformatory who had a mother living sent her a carnation in a special mailing tube accompanied by an appropriate message for Mothers' day.

FREDERICKTON, N. B.—May has been ushered in with unseasonable weather—rain, hail and snow have fallen. In some parts of the province four inches of snow fell in one night. Out-door planting has hardly begun.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—This city was visited by a windstorm, April 22. One small house at the range of J. E. McAdam was badly damaged, and a small amount of glass was broken at the greenhouses of L. Cowell.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Mrs. Myrtle Shepherd Francis, who has been engaged in plant breeding in Ventura, has been named as a member of the board of awards of floral exhibits at the Panama-Pacific exposition.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—John P. Logan, who has been engaged in securing exhibits, has been appointed by Governor Hays to have charge of the horticultural exhibit of Arkansas at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.—A $70,000 sulphur bath-house and swimming pool, a new and enlarged cafe and a children's play ground in Alum Rock park, are among the improvements made by Lyle W. Bush, park superintendent and landscape architect during the past year.

ABILENE, TEX.—The ladies of the City Federated Clubs have decided to maintain a flower garden at the Central West Texas Fair grounds here this year. The move is done to assist the park board to carry out the plans of the city and the association to beautify the grounds.

DES MOINES, IA.—The movement for "hanging gardens" and window flower boxes for the business district of this city was given a strong impetus by the announcement of the Chamberlain Medicine Company, that the company is making plans to install 50 window boxes at the big plant at Sixth avenue and Park street.

LIMA, O.—Rolf Zetlitz, following action of the city council in vacating an alley, will put into execution plans for an addition to his range to cost $25,000 upon the ground vacated.—Feniger's Flower Shop opened its doors to the public, Thursday, May 6, at 136 Main street. Feniger's Flower Shop, Toledo, O., is under the same management.

PASADENA, CALIF.—Horticulturists of this city and others have united in declaring that the storm which damaged the tent at the Maryland in which the flower show was to have been held serves to prove the absolute need for a horticultural and convention hall for which the Pasadena Horticultural Society has been working for years.

LINCOLN, ILL.—Construction work on the new greenhouses being erected for Gullett & Sons is progressing rapidly. One of the 60 by 500 feet houses is ready for the glass and planting will be done there by May 15. Two more houses, 26½ by 415 feet, will be ready to plant in two more weeks. The iron framework for two additional houses, 60 by 500 feet, is being placed, and the buildings will be completed by July 15 and August 15.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH. — Mothers' day has evidently come to stay and will prove a worthy addition to the calender of flower days. The call for white carnations this year was double what it was a year ago, the supply being exhausted early in the morning, and by 10 a. m. there were no carnations of any kind at any price. Local florists did little extra advertising, but the churches made a feature of the day, helping the cause more than anything else. Pot plants sold well, pelargoniums, geraniums, azaleas and lilies being favorites, is the report of Law's Nurseries.

FLORIST plant growers are now coming forward with delayed Easter payments.

TWO New York horticultural concerns are reported this week as investors in downtown real estate.

FROST is reported from many points in the middle west the past week, snow in Minnesota and hail in Illinois.

BAY TREES from Bruges, Belgium, are slow in coming through and some importers are discouraged with the prospects.

EDWIN LONSDALE, who is in a Los Angeles, Calif., sanitarium, makes very slow progress toward recovery, according to recent reports.

A bill of interest to florists has been presented to the state legislature of California, tending to prevent the sale of flowers and newspapers on the streets by children under 14 years of age.

EUROPEAN papers announce the death at the front of Claude Pernet Ducher, oldest son of M. Pernet Ducher, of Vennissieux, the well known French rose specialist.

JOHN S. CARTER, president of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., St. Louis, Mo., called on the Chicago trade this week and stated that his firm had booked several large Australian orders and is receiving inquiries from France. He adds that an early advance in the price of nicotine products may be expected.

American Peony Society.

The annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held in cooperation with the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, at Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., June 12-13.

Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

The next annual exhibition and flower show of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio will be held in the Hollenden hotel assembly rooms, as last year, Cleveland, Ohio, August 13-14, 1915. Previous exhibitions of the society have been most gratifying and successful, and a premium list is being prepared, which, it is hoped, will be equal to any yet sent forth.

WILBUR A. CHRISTY, Sec'y-Treas.

Sweet Pea Show Postponed.

On account of the recent prolonged wet weather the exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, scheduled to be held at the Palace of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific exposition grounds, San Francisco, Calif., June 4, has been postponed to June 23-24. The California sweet peas are now in vigorous growth, but all the buds have dropped.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that the Conard & Jones Company, West Grove, Pa., offers for registration the canna described below. Any person objecting to the registration or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Raiser's description: Mrs. Alfred F. Conard x Venus. This remarkable canna produces flowers in great profusion on erect branching stalks. Color of flower a rich, glowing pink, deeper than Mrs. Alfred F. Conard, early bloomer, very free. Green foliage. Height, 3½ feet. Name—City of Portland.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING.

At the executive committee meeting of the American Rose Society held in New York May 10, the registration of the new rose, Champ Weiland, was ordered published. The description of it by Messrs. Weiland & Risch, Evanston, Ill., is as follows:

A sport of Pink Killarney, originating in our establishment at Evanston, Ill., and under deepest scrutiny for the past three seasons. Buds large and full. Color a bright, clear glistening pink, inner and reverse side of petals identical and fadeless. More free than the parent and more sweetly scented. Foliage remarkable, of a glowing reddish character prevalent from planting time to end of season. It may be said that this rose represents a distinct advance in growth and grandeur over any of its predecessors."

According to the rules adopted by the American Rose Society for registration of new roses, at the end of three (3) weeks if there is no objection received it will stand as a registered variety.

The June rose show to be held in Bronx park was a matter of discussion, and it was resolved to offer a silver medal and two bronze medals as special prizes in addition to the regular prizes offered in the schedule of the New York Horticultural Society; that is to offer these three medals as sweepstake prizes for the following:

A silver medal for the best collection of out-door grown roses.

A bronze medal for the best vase of hybrid teas out-door grown.

A bronze medal for the best vase of hybrid perpetuals out-door grown.

The matter of affiliated societies was considered and the societies that have already joined under the present arrangement are: the Syracuse Rose Society, Rev. E. M. Mills, president, with 244 members; Garden Association of Newport, R. I., Dr. Roderick Terry, president, with 100 members; the Newport Garden Club of Newport, R. I., Mrs. C. F. Hoffman, president, with 50 members; the Brooklands Rose Society of Brooklands, D. C., Mrs. Carrie Harrison, secretary, with 39 members; the Country Club of Joplin, Mo., Burt W. Lyon, president, with 72 members.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Soil Suit.

Ten thousand dollars damages are asked in a suit filed May 15 in the circuit court by Hattibel C. Howard, doing business as the Glencoe Violet farm, Glencoe, Ill., of Fred Ebert, also of Glencoe, because of alleged deceitful and fraudulent delivery of 103 wagon loads of soil in which the plaintiff's violet crop was so inferior to the usual production as to cause an immediate loss of $4,500. She asserts the violets were pale and shorter lived than she had the reputation of growing. Fertilizing, water, extra care, and injury to the reputation of the Glencoe Violet farm brought the damage up to $10,000, it is alleged.

Buffalo Botanical Garden Director.

The vacancy caused by the death of John F. Cowell, director of the botanical garden at South park, Buffalo, N. Y., has been filled by the board of park commissioners, who have appointed H. H. Elbers, for the past 17 years superintendent of Humboldt park, Buffalo, to act as director of the garden. His promotion came without solicitation, a fitting reward for his efficiency. Humboldt park, under his supervision, has become one of the most beautiful of its class in the United States.

New York Central Gardener.

W. A. Hagenberger, who has had charge of the gardening of the New York Central railroad, east of Toledo, Ohio, has been appointed to succeed the late Carl Hirsch, of Hillsdale, Mich., who was gardener for that company for the Chicago-Toledo division. He will have his headquarters at Mentor, O.

PRICES HOLD FIRM.

While business cannot be said to be very good, there seems to be no great abundance of stock. As a matter of fact, quite a few articles are on the scarce list. Carnations in particular are in very limited supply at the present time and prices are being held rather firm. The only item of greenhouse stock that is abundant is roses. There are more than enough of these to go around, accounted for, no doubt, by the very large supply of outdoor stock, such as Cecile Brunner, Ulrich Brunner, Kaiserin and Druski. Cattleyas are plentiful and are all gradually absorbed, eventually. There is a very large quantity of Spanish iris coming in and this particular flower is moved with much difficulty. Gladiolus America is coming in freely and bringing $4 per 100. Most of this stock is exceptionally fine and it seems a pity to see such grand stock go begging at the price named. There are quite a few fine liliums arriving, but the prices brought the growers are far from encouraging. Sweet peas are still in limited supply, but the stock of Spencers coming in is rapidly bought up. The very inclement weather is the cause of no large cut of this popular annual. Most of the growers complain that the very severe wind storm of last week has put the cut off another month. It has also cut short the supply of other out-door annuals that appear at this season of the year, and from present indications there is going to be a shortage of out-door stock for Memorial day. While on this subject I might add that the florists of this city made little or no attempt to exploit the sale of flowers for Mothers' day. Perhaps their efforts last year met with little response, or made no appreciable increase in their sales.

NOTES.

The show that closed at the Palace of Horticulture Sunday, May 9, after three days, was a very creditable one. It was held under the auspices of the California State Floral Society and the Alameda County Floral Society in conjunction with the department of horticulture. The California Nursery Company showed a grand collection of outdoor roses of nearly 400 varieties; also a splendid exhibit of flowering shrubs. Nels Peterson, as usual, carried off first prize for carnations. There were large entries by amateurs in all the different classes. Also a very comprehensive exhibit of wild flowers of the state. The attendance was very large, as the show had been extensively advertised. The judges were Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., Frank Pelicano and H. Plath of this city.

Frank G. Cuthbertson, assistant secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society, has made an inspection of the growing sections of the Spencer sweet peas and has issued notice postponing the sweet pea show, scheduled to be held in the Palace of Horticulture on June 4, until June 23-24. The recent wind storm has done a great amount of damage to sweet peas, and as there is practically no likelihood of any being in bloom, or at their best, on that date, it would seem that a postponment is the wisest course to pursue. Mr. Cuthbertson reports that sweet peas in nearly all sections are in the same fix and under those conditions does not feel that it is for the best to hold the show on the date originally fixed.

The international jury of awards for the department of horticulture are now busily engaged in their very difficult task of determining the winners at the exposition at the present time. Among the names very familiar to the trade are Sidney Clock, H. Plath and Frank Pelicano of this city, Chas. H. Totty of Madison, N. J., Peter Bisset of Washington, D. C., and Geo. C. Roeding of Fresno, Calif. All of these men have a nation-wide reputation and there is not the slightest doubt but what their decisions will meet with the approval of all.

Auditor Boyle of this city has withheld payment on bills of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. for trees and shrubs for the civic center plaza, pending investigation into charter regulations governing the purchase of the plants. The board of public works and the supervisors had ordered the bills paid. The bills, amounting to $3,720, were incurred by the city architects, whose bureau forms a department of the board of public works. According to the charter, competitive bids must be obtained by this department for work over $500.

The exhibition committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held a special meeting in the office of Dan MacRorie in the Phelan building last week and adopted a schedule for the fall show. There are to be quite a lot of extra prizes, besides the prizes offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America. The Panama-Pacific department of horticulture are offering many cash prizes as well as gold medals. Much interest was manifested by the members present and the show no doubt will be a splendid one.

Work on the convention garden is progressing rapidly, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather. The greater part of the space has been applied for and the workmen, of whom there are quite a number, have the ground in splendid condition. Nearly all the prominent eastern and western members of the trade have applied for space at this writing. All we need is some sunshine to finish the planting. Vice-president Dan MacRorie is giving this his personal attention.

The severe hurricane which swept this section of California last week, the worst experienced in thirteen years, worked a great deal of damage among the florists and nursery men. Nearly all the growers report the loss of large quantities of glass and outdoor stock that happened to be in flower at the time. A peculiar freak of the storm was that it omitted to visit the growers across the bay and none of them suffered any loss whatever.

The annual spring show of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society is to be held May 20. The society has been making active preparations for this show for some time and all the members are hoping for its success. The preliminary schedule for the annual fall show is now ready and is being mailed to all intending exhibitors. Judging from the valuable prizes offered, this is going to be the best show this society ever held.

Harry Bayersdorffer, of Philadelphia, is spending a few days in this city seeing the exposition, getting acquainted with some of his numerous customers and waiting for the steamer that is to carry him to Japan. He says we have the finest exposition ever and will finish his inspection on his return from Japan.

H. Plath has added a new Overland truck to his delivery service. Eric James has also added a truck to facilitate his deliveries. This does not look as though the plant growers were affected by the money stringency to any great extent, and we might add that we are glad of it.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. have a large gang of men employed at their nurseries, planting out young stock that they recently imported from Europe. The weather has been ideal for this sort of work and the stock looks to be in the very best of condition.

The Art Floral Co. had some extensive decorations at the exposition grounds during the past week. A. O. Stein also was busily engaged on some of the state buildings. P. Orr of this store says business is exceptionally good in this section of the city.

Lester L. Morse, whose health has not been of the best lately, is spending a few weeks at Paso Robles Hot Springs. He is expected home shortly to make final arrangements for the reception of the American Seed Trade Association convention in June.

The United Flower and Supply Co. are now comfortably located with S. T. Beatie as sales manager. The Bush street store has been enlarged and renovated to take care of the large business expected next fall.

Chas. C. Navlet is in town daily, looking out for his new store in the Emporium. He reports very gratifying results since the opening of this shop in this large department store.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, is in town and reports business as being very quiet in the Capitol City. Mr. Ebel is arranging for stock for Memorial day.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co.'s display of orchids in pots during the past week has drawn large crowds to this beautiful store. G. N.

Boston.

CUT FLOWER PRICES BELOW NORMAL.

During the past week the bottom seemed to drop out of the business. Every line of cut flower prices dropped far below normal. The business, wholesale and retail, was exceptionally quiet and not much can be expected until Memorial day trade commences. Carnations sold very poorly, $1 to $2 per hundred, being about the best prices. Roses also took a slump; from 50 cents per 100 to $8.00 on fancy varieties were the prices received. Sweet peas, lilies, bulbous stock, Marguerites, snapdragons and irises all felt the effects of the slump. Gladioli of the better type, such as America and Mrs. Francis King, sold very well, as did gypsophila, but these sold well only because there was a shortage in these lines. The plant trade has been very good. Hydrangeas, roses and all kinds of bedding stock sell very well.

NOTES.

W. W. Edgar & Co., of Waverley, Mass., have a fine lot of hydrangeas, spiræas and rambler rose plants, all of which are selling very well. They also have a good demand for bedding stock, of which they have a large assortment. They will have a good crop of outdoor tulips of various varieties for the Memorial day business.

The annual flower show held at Horticultural hall Saturday and Sunday, May 15-16, was a very fine exhibition and a remarkable attendance for this show. The exhibits of vegetables seemed to attract a great amount of attention, although the beauty of the exhibition was the flowers.

A. W. Holbrow is receiving from Robt. McGorum, of Natick, Mass., a good crop of roses and the beginning of a large crop of candytuft. Mr. McGorum, by advertising, has nearly doubled his retail business and expects a record breaking Memorial day trade.

Edward Welch, Jr., son of Edward Welch, of Welch Bros., died Monday morning, May 17, of pleurisy of the heart after only two days' sickness. His death was a great shock to his many friends among the trade, all of whom held him in great esteem.

C. S. Andem, of Putman, Conn., is cutting a good crop of carnations. Matchless, Philadelphia, White Wonder and Pink Delight are his leading varieties. He also is cutting Gladiolus America, Mrs. Francis King and Pink Augusta.

S. J. Goddard of Framingham is shipping some extra fine Pink Delight, Beacon and White Perfection carnations. He has a good retail trade for his bedding stock, of which he grows a large quantity for this purpose.

OUTDOOR STOCK AT PREMIUM.

Continued cool weather and rain has not helped trade or the supply of flowers in this vicinity during the past week. Outdoor stock, which helps so much at present, has been at a premium and only a few lilac and tulips, which show the need of warm weather, have been on sale as yet. Roses are in good supply and of good quality. Carnations also are plentiful, excepting the white. The balance of May and all of June look promising for the trade. Many weddings and graduations are on the calendar. The first graduation is scheduled for June 3 and then a daily occurrence until July. At the greenhouses stock never looked more promising and orders for cemetery vases, veranda boxes and other out-door work is coming in fast.

NOTES.

Edward Fancourt of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., vice-president of the Cleveland Florists' Club; F. C. Brown, of J. M. Gasser Co.; M. A. Vinson, manager of the Cleveland flower show, the latter three returning from the affiliation meeting of ad clubs held in Rochester, N. Y., stopped off here. They, as emissaries of the Cleveland flower show, entered Anderson's greenhouses and as they passed through his house of Belgian laurels, warbled the sweet strains of Lohengrin. They were filled with "Judge Thompson." No, not what you think. Judge Thompson was one of the orators at Rochester and they had his speech almost committed to memory. The judge was from Canadaigua, N. Y., the home of great men. "Near To Governor" Mahoney, of S. A. Anderson's staff, was first seen without a "collar" in Canandaigua. As one of the attractions to the Cleveland show they have offered a silver trophy to be bowled for by the Rochester and Buffalo florists' bowling clubs, who are known far and wide for their even bowling. Both cities will have a good crowd at Cleveland.

The park commissioners in appointing a successor to the late Prof. John F. Cowell at South Park botanical garden chose Henry Elbers, who for 17 years has been superintendent at Humboldt park. His ability as a superintendent is evidenced by the beautiful park and greenhouses under his control. The best wishes of the Buffalo Florists' Club are extended to Mr. Elbers.

Main street store fronts are now attractive with box trees of all sizes. From W. J. Palmer & Sons's to Wm. Scott Co.'s you see very pretty plants and at reasonable prices.

S. A. Anderson has returned from his fishing trip. BISON.

DEKALB, ILL.—A. J. Riggs has opened a flower shop in the Bee Hive building, South Third street.

Tacoma, Wash.

UNUSUAL DEMAND FOR PLANTS.

Business is improving all along the line with better call for all florists' stock, but collections were never so hard to make. An unusual call for all kinds of bedding and other small plants has already cleaned up stocks of many sorts of smaller plants. There seems to be a spirit of "most beautiful Tacoma," and we are going to make good a promise of this becoming the most beautiful city of the west. We promise all tourists a feast of roses for the next three or four months.

Mother's day was never before observed as completely as it was this year. The call for flowers generally exceeded the supply and carnations doubled in price, for a great scarcity was general. Thousands more could have been sold, if they could have been furnished, but so many growers have put them out and filled the spaces with tomatoes that a general scarcity will no doubt prevail for several months to come and of course prices will continue on a profitable basis. All sorts of outdoor flowers are over abundant with a great lot of outside roses beginning to bloom. No doubt great quantities of flowers for Memorial day will be ready.

NOTES.

The new Public Sanitary Market lately opened on Pacific avenue has a floral booth conducted by Fred May. Saturday, May 8, the opening day, was a busy day for the three who were attending to the call for flowers of all kinds. The location is excellent and a full assortment of plants and cut flowers will be supplied to all comers. Arrangements have been made so they will be open to cater to Sunday calls.

No report of the recovery of the body of Joe Gillarduchi, son of the proprietor of "California Florists," who was drowned in the bay, has come up to present writing.

The Hayden, Watson Co. sold out practically everything in the shape of a bloom on Mothers' day, even to blooming pot plants. S. L. H.

Worcester, Mass.

The second spring exhibition of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural hall, this city, May 13. An excellent display of calceolarias by H. F. A. Lange attracted much attention, and table decorations by Miss Lucy M. Couslon and Leonard C. Midgley were exceptionally good. The awards were as follows:

Cut flowers—H. F. A. Lange, first; Mrs. Percy G. Forbes, second; Hodwen Arboretum, third.

Round basket—H. F. A. Lange, first; Miss Lucy M. Coulson, second; Mrs. P. G. Forbes, third; Mrs. Wallace E. Sargent, fourth.

Hyacinths—Mrs. Herbert L. White, first.

Tulips—Mrs. H. L. White, first; Walter L. Rice, second; H. F. A. Lange, third; Mrs. W. E. Sargent, fourth.

Pansies—Mrs. H. L. White, first; William Loynd, second; Mrs. W. E. Sargent, third; L. C. Midgley, fourth.

Table decorations—Miss L. M. Coulson, first; L. C. Midgley, second; H. F. A. Lange, third; Mrs. W. E. Sargent, fourth.

Calceolarias—H. F. A. Lange, first.

Cut flowers—Walter D. Ross, first.

Wild flowers—Mrs. M. A. Maynard, first.

The demand for flowers for Mothers' day was very much greater than the demand in other years. Carnations were very popular. Co-operative advertising was done on a large scale in the daily papers, and the window decorations also helped to make the day more conspicuous in the eye of the public.

Wholesale Florist

WASHINGTON, - NEW JERSEY

The advertising campaign of H. F. A. Lange and Randall, the Florist, to make the flower buying public better acquainted with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery system attracted considerable attention. At Lange's, one of the show windows was converted into a temporary telegraph office, with an operator from the local office in charge. A messenger boy in uniform was also in attendance. Scattered about the floor were thousands of telegraph orders which the firm had received. Wires ran from the office back through the store, which was converted into a forest by means of everygreen trees. There was a similar display at Randall's. R.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Kent Garden club will hold a flower show in the art gallery in the St. Cecilia building Saturday, May 22, for the purpose of helping to promote better lawns and a love of flowers. The contest will be open to the public and there will be an exhibit of garden supplies.

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING.

Trade has been rather quiet the past week, but business is improving at this writing. There is plenty of stock of all kinds to go around and prices are not what they should be. A good supply of American Beauty roses are arriving now, but are not selling as well as they should, considering the fine quality of the stock offered. Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are arriving in good supply and are moving well, considering the market conditions. Sunburst roses are seen in large numbers, and the same holds good for Ophelia, Hadley, Mrs. George Shawyer, Richmond, Milady, Rhea Reid, Prince de Bulgaria, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney Queen, Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, My Maryland, Lady Hillingdon and Cecile Brunner. Carnations are moving better than they have been, but there are still more than enough to go around. Orchids are more plentiful and very fancy stock is obtainable. Peonies are arriving in larger supply and the first home-grown stock of the season made its appearance this week. Gladioli are to be had in quantity. Sweet peas are seen at nearly all the stores, but the supply does not appear to be any too large. Snapdragons, stocks, lilies, callas, lily of the valley, daisies, lilac, pansies, tulips, iris, mignonette and other miscellaneous seasonable stock are among the offerings, and the retail florist now has a splendid chance to make a selection from a large variety at reasonable prices. A large number of orders have already been placed for Memorial day, especially for carnations, and those that have placed their orders well in advance have protected their supply, for several of the dealers are already refusing orders for carnations. Memorial day is rapidly approaching and those who have not placed their orders yet should do so immediately, for certain lines are going to be scarce and it would not be at all surprising if the market cleaned up completely before the rush is really over.

NOTES.

Joseph Ziska, Jr., made a trip to Hammond, Ind., in Art Schutz's new car and it is needless to add that they had a most enjoyable time. Art thinks that he made a good selection when he bought a Lexicon and will use it considerably in making his frequent visits to the market, for it is only about an hour's run from his store to the city.

A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s sales for May so far are several hundred dollars ahead of the same period last year, and the indications are that the Memorial day business will be the best in years, for the early demand is very encouraging. Miss Thelma Vaughan has been bringing her father down to work with his new auto considerably of late.

A. L. Glaser, of Dubuque, Ia., was a welcome visitor in the market this week. He reports business as good and is thinking seriously of adding a new car to his delivery system in the near future.

The John C. Moninger Co. has received an order from Thos. F. Brown of Redford, Mich., for a house 84x600 feet of its new type of steel construction, which will be equipped with its new ventilating machine. The Moninger people have also booked an order for three new semi-iron frame houses, 32x300 feet, for the Ann Arbor Greenhouse Co., Ann Arbor, Mich., and when the new addition is completed the Ann Arbor firm will have three blocks of Moninger houses.

Bassett & Washburn's greenhouses at Greggs station were struck by lightning on Saturday, May 15, but outside of a few panes of broken glass no great damage was done. This firm is cutting heavily in roses at present and will be in heavy crop with Killarney for Memorial day. Mr. Washburn looks for a brisk business Memorial week, for the early demand is very satisfactory and never was better in previous years than it is at present.

Thos. Heaven, of Benton Harbor, Mich., was in the city on May 15 buying stock for his Memorial day trade. His "Go to Heaven" advertisements for cut flowers in the Benton Harbor papers have attracted considerable attention and caused much favorable comment. He is a pretty jolly fellow and believes in live and let live and would not tell anyone to go to ——; well, you know, just because he or she did not care to "Go to Heaven."

Percy Jones will have as many carnations for Memorial day as the firm did for Mothers' day, which is saying a great deal, and while a large number of orders have already been booked, they are still accepting all that are arriving, with expectation of filling every one. Carnations have always been a leader at this house in former years at Memorial day and this year will be no exception.

Thos. Fogarty, who does the buying in the market for O. J. Friedman, is the proud father of an eight-pound girl, born on May 15. Mrs. Fogarty is a sister of O. A. Tonner who is about as happy over the arrival of the young lady as Mr. Fogarty is himself.

Frank Hlavacek, superintendent of F. F. Scheel's greenhouses at Shermerville, has rented the Zeutschel range at Wilmette and will take possession July 1. He will grow carnations and the output will be consigned to A. T. Pyfer & Co.

Adolph Malchow, 3743 North Clark street, is giving all of his customers a dandy little weapon to swat the fly with. His business card is printed on the handle and taken all in all it is a pretty clever advertising scheme.

B. Zima, 3053 West Twenty-second street, has invested in a new Overland delivery car. He does a big bedding plant trade in his neighborhood and the new car comes in mighty handy in making deliveries.

F. J. Connor, of the Minnehaha Floral Co., West Sioux Falls, S. D., placed an order for two new greenhouses, 25x125, and one 12x125 feet, with A. Dietsch Company, while he was in the city this week.

George J. Kaspar, 4005 West Twenty-sixth street, had a nice wedding order on May 18 that called for quite a number of orchids, lily of the valley and roses.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. cut its first peonies on May 17 and to the writer's knowledge this is the first local grown stock to reach the market.

E. C. Pruner, one of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s traveling representatives, is back from a successful trip through the south and southwestern states.

Chas. H. Fisk, 1581 Ogden avenue, bought a new eight-cylinder Cadillac passenger car this week.

C. G. Anderson left for Minneapolis, Minn., to assume management of the Minneapolis Greenhouses.

MEMORIAL DAY

Carnations have always been our leader, but this year our supply exceeds that of any previous year. You can get what you want here in White, Pink and Red.

Abraham Iralson, 356 East Forty-third street, says that business is fair and that so far he has no cause to complain of dull times.

F. F. Scheel, of Shermerville, has returned from a business trip to St. Louis, Mo.

Joe Bieber is now with Ronsley the Florist at 106 South Dearborn street.

ANNOUNCEMENT

WE move into our new home on Monday, May 24th. We will occupy the main floor and basement at 160 N. Wabash Ave. It is the opinion of many in the trade that we will have the best located and most practical wholesale house in this market. The floor space will be nearly three times what we now have. The increased space and the most up-to-date appointments will give us unusual facilities for properly handling large quantities of flowers and greens. We will be pleased to have everyone in all branches of the trade, call upon us in the new location.

KYLE & FOERSTER

Attention! Peony Growers!

If you have any Cut Peonies that you would like to consign to the Chicago market, ship them to us immediately and you will receive your returns promptly. Do not wait to write to us, but send in a shipment as soon as the stock is ready to cut, for we have a ready market for all that we can handle.

Send in a shipment today if possible!

MILLER & MUSSER

WHOLESALE FLORISTS

179-181-183 North Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will have a large cut of carnations for Memorial day, for the crops were never in better condition for this occasion than they are right now, but orders have been arriving so plentifully the past week that they should experience no difficulty in moving all that they can cut. A large supply of fancy orchids are reaching the store each day now, which means a good cut for some time to come. American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses of fine quality are seen in large numbers alongside of each other at the store, and while some prefer the latter there are others that still insist upon having American Beauties. Otto W. Frese says that demand for stock for Memorial day is very good and that many orders for this occasion have already been booked. T. E. Waters is busy compiling a new supply catalogue, which will be ready for distribution in a short time.

Miller & Musser had quite an exciting time at their wholesale store on May 16, when a tarantula crawled out of a bunch of bananas which a friend had left in their care for a few minutes. Before they could kill the terror it crawled in the wrapping paper, and it was some time before they could locate and kill it. Some of the florists have been trying to make the force believe that it was only a wood spider, but this is impossible, for they have got the tarantula to back up their story. If you want to start something, just tell them it is a wood spider, and you will find it is almost as serious a problem as moving their store over to Michigan avenue without permission.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association have another year's lease on the store they occupy on North Michigan avenue, but will very likely move to a more suitable location as soon as it expires. Paul Klingsporn says that the outlook for a brisk Memorial day trade is very bright, for several large orders have been booked during the past week.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are very enthusiastic over the outlook for a brisk Memorial day trade, for orders for the big flower day have been very numerous the past week, especially for carnations. Mr. Pyfer is well pleased with the business that his firm has enjoyed since it has been in business.

August Lange is planning to join the S. A. F. convention party to San Francisco, with Mrs. Lange and Homer.

H. B. Kennicott, president of the firm of Kennicott Bros. Co., bought a new Saxon this week.

Wietor Bros. will have a large supply of roses and carnations for Memorial day for the crops are in excellent condition, especially Killarney, White Killarney, Sunburst, Richmond, Mrs. Chas. Russell and American Beauty. Carnations in all the leading varieties are grown, and some especially fine Matchless, White Wonder, White Perfection, White Enchantress, Bonfire, Victory, Champion and Rosette were seen as N. J. Wietor escorted the writer through the houses. The planting is well along and a nice supply of young chrysanthemum stock is in splendid condition and ready to ship out. This firm will have a very good Memorial day trade if business is at all good, but will have the stock to do business with and it appears as if they will also have their share of orders, for they have been plentiful the past week, particularly for carnations.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a nice supply of roses, especially Richmond and Killarney, and will be in good crop for Memorial day. Business has been good at this house according to Felix Reichling and the demand has improved considerably during the past few days. This firm has received several nice testimonial letters from customers they supplied with stock for Mothers' day and the report at this store is that many orders for Memorial day have already been received. Miss McNulty, who keeps the Reinberg books, will attend the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco, leaving the latter part of July or early in August.

Kyle & Foerster will move into their new store on the main floor of the Atlas building, 160 North Wabash avenue, on Monday, May 24, and extend a cordial invitation to everyone to visit them in their new quarters. They have one of the best equipped wholesale stores in the country, and the location is all that can be desired. This firm is now showing a fancy grade of American Beauty roses.

Erne & Klingel received word on May 17 from the El Paso Carnation Co., El Paso, that its range of greenhouses suffered considerable damage during the hailstorm which visited that vicinity on the evening of Sunday, May 16. Erne & Klingel are showing some very fancy peonies which compare favorably in quality with the best stock that is reaching this market.

August Poehlmann's son Roland is ill with the mumps at the Western Military Academy at Alton, where he is attending school. Adolph Poehlmann's son Walter will graduate from the Western Military Academy in June and John Poehlmann, Jr., will graduate from the Culver Military Academy at Culver, Ind.

John Kruchten Co. will move into the old Kyle & Foerster store next week, where they will be in a better position than ever to look after the welfare of their many customers. Archie Spencer will occupy the store that the Kruchten company vacates.

James Novak has accepted a position as foreman with the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., and is now in charge at the greenhouses. Mr. Novak is well known here, for he was formerly with Wietor Bros. and later worked the Weber place on shares.

J. A. Budlong has added a peony grower to the list of consignors and will have a good supply from now until the end of the season to supply its customers with, in addition to the regular line of stock.

Allie Zech reports that Zech & Mann have already booked a large number of orders for carnations for Memorial day, and that more are arriving in the mails each day.

Frank Kral, 1907 South Halsted street, is another one of the progressive florists who have bought autos this week. His is a Haynes.

The E. C. Amling Co. is showing its usual supply of fancy peonies in all the seasonable varieties.

S. S. Skidelsky, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., called on the trade here this week.

Nellessen Bros. of Niles Center have bought a Sternberg delivery truck.

Visitors: Robt. Spiro, with Chas. Zinn & Co., New York; F. C. Viereek, Columbus, O.; John S. Carter, president of the Nicotine Manufacturing Co., St. Louis, Mo.; M. M. Dickinson, Carbondale.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—E. N. Talkacz, director of public welfare, has caused $4,000 to be set aside for a new greenhouse in Forest park, and next year will ask for $10,000 for extension of greenhouses.

Hail Storm at El Paso, Ill.

C. L. W. Snyder, secretary and manager of the El Paso Carnation Co., Inc., writes that the roofs of their entire plant of 11 houses were completely pelted out by hail, averaging in size from shelled walnuts to hen eggs. The storm broke out on Saturday, May 15, about 5:15 p. m., and was over in about 15 minutes. The stock inside the houses was greatly damaged, but the broken glass has all been removed and repairs are well under way and the trade is being supplied as usual with daily shipments of stock to meet all wants. This firm has been enjoying a fine run of trade since it started nine years ago and the year ending July 1, 1915, will still run ahead of any former year. Insurance is carried in the Florists' Hail Association, which is quite an item. Carnation plants out in the field suffered considerable damage also and will show a loss of at least half. The entire place will be repainted and glazing started at an early date. All told this firm has in the neighborhood of 30,000 feet of glass. Dr. R. E. Gordon is president, and L. K. Evans, treasurer of the company.

MOTHERS' DAY TRADE BIGGER.

Judging by the trade conditions in this city, Mothers' day must hereafter be put in the same class by florists with Christmas and Easter, due to the great volume of business which is now transacted on that day. The entire trade in this vicinity is unanimous in returning a verdict of a magnificent and profitable day's business. Remembering the tremendous demand of last year, all florists stocked up and when Sunday evening came, every one was entirely cleaned out. While the demand was still principally for carnations, it was noted that many more roses, sweet peas and other seasonable cut flowers were sold than ever before. Just as many colored carnations were sold as white. One of the most profitable surprises of the day was the number of plants that were sold. For the purpose of boosting sales for this day the publicity man of the Toledo Florists' Club succeeded in getting ten florists to go into a co-operative ad. which helped materially in increasing sales. Taking it all in all the day was a gratifying success from every standpoint.

NOTES.

Schramm Bros. attribute the increase in business which came to them this year to the consistent and creative advertising that was done prior to this day. A pleasing feature of their business was the number of plants that were sold. They succeeded also in shifting the demand from carnations to sweet peas, roses, snapdragons and Darwin tulips of which they had a great quantity.

Great credit is due Robert Blake, designer for Mrs. J. B. Freeman, Superior street florist, for the very artistic and beautifully appealing Mothers' day window that he conceived. It was the only advertising that Mrs. Freeman did for Mothers' day and brought splendid results, as her business was exceedingly good.

Spanner on Summit street had a very satisfactory Mothers' day trade and cleaned up exceptionally well. He says that he satisfied all his regular patrons and sold many hydrangeas.

Metz and Bateman were simply overwhelmed on Mothers' day, for besides their city business, which was great, orders exceeding $100 came in from outside for funeral work. K.

Cleveland.

GOOD DEMAND FOLLOWS MOTHERS' DAY.

The demand for cut flowers was good the week following Mothers' day, and stock, until the last week, was none too plentiful. American Beauty roses of exceptional size, beauty and color were in good supply and sold well, the medium grade not coming in in quantity. Wards and Sunburst were also popular. Snapdragon cleans up daily, shipments seeming to be limited, and sweet peas are also scarce. Swainsona, lilacs, forget-me-nots, calendulas, Darwin tulips, larkspurs and daisies are part of the daily supply. Lily of the valley has been plentiful. Greens arrive in good quantity. Blue iris has made its first appearance and good

Mr. Boddy is an expert in his line and will assist board members in any of their individual problems.

Selling flowers to boost the fund for the Zionist movement by the Jewish organizations of this city Sunday, May 16th, was the largest for this purpose ever attempted. In the neighborhood of 30,000 flowers were sold on the streets by about 500 women, who took anything from a nickel up. Last year Cleveland Jewish organizations ranked fourth in money taken in for this movement.

The Cleveland Florists' Club head pin bowling tournament took place as scheduled on the Erie alleys, Wednesday, May 12, at 8 p. m. Frank Friedley lead the test with 93 pins. Herbert Bates and Chas. F. Bastian second with 88 each; Frank Ritzenthaler third with 83 and H. P. Knoble fourth with 77 pins.

Herman A. Hart and Adam Graham are again judges who will award prizes for the garden contest. This contest is growing yearly and is now one of the largest movements toward a city beautiful ever attempted.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held Monday evening, June 7. Details of the coming show will be discussed.

STOCK IN SHORT SUPPLY.

There has been a marked shortage in the supply of flowers for the local market of late, and stock of all kinds is bringing good returns, with the exception of roses and lilies. American Beauties are in good supply, however, and the prices realized are very low. Carnations, sweet peas, irises, peonies and daisies are holding up very well. Very few sweet peas are seen here any more, and the carnation season is shortening up also. Peonies are quite plentiful now and are of fine quality, being mostly local stock. Some very good outdoor lily of the valley is seen daily at inducing prices. Gladioli have appeared, grown in the south, and show up very well. The wholesale men are booking many large orders for Memorial day peonies, and also report that the stock will by far surpass the quality of last year. Carnations are expected to be quite scarce, however, for this holiday, but there will be plenty of peonies and roses on hand. Of course, the plant business is booming greatly, and wagon after wagonload can be seen driving around the city every day of the week.

NOTES.

The McCallum Company are making great preparations for their peony business for Memorial day, and will, as usual, live up to their reputation of being the "Pittsburgh peony kings." They are cutting some fancy Killarney at Allison Park.

Theodore Verscharen reports this as his banner year in the plant business, and says that there's lots more to come before the thirtieth. He has just added a Ford truck to his delivery service.

F. H. Riegelmeier has purchased a new Chandler automobile for pleasure use, having converted his Studebaker touring car into a truck.

Mr. Smith, recently of C. H. Cramer's, Uniontown, is now managing the retail store of J. S. Hennon & Son, Beaver Falls, Pa.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is strong on fine cattleyas and carnations.

STOCK OF ALL KINDS FILLS COUNTERS.

The weather during the past week was very warm but at this time of writing it is cool with prospects of frost. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and the counters of the wholesalers are filled. Sweet peas are in abundance. Peonies are plentiful, especially those of poor quality. Roses are also cheap and plentiful. Of course, there is always a limited supply of fancy stock.

NOTES.

The local florists' club met May 13, W. Pilcher in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and the trustees were instructed to prepare for a picnic in July. A suitable affair will be in order of celebrating the twenty-ninth anniversary of the club next month.

Mullanphy Florists are very busy planting out stocks. A heavy sale in rose bushes took place at their downtown store May 15.

The Moss Floral Co. has repainted its store and everything looks bright. Mrs. Moss reports trade is growing and improving.

Geo. H. Angermueller is out with a new six cylinder pleasure car, and a new delivery car is in course of construction.

The park department has been very busy fixing up flower beds and general overhauling in all the parks and playgrounds.

Ed. Buechel of the Riessen Floral Co. and J. J. Beneke are doing jury duty at the circuit court this week.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120 page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

CARNATIONS IN SHORT SUPPLY.

The supply of flowers coming to the market is more than ample—with the exception of carnations there is a great excess of everything. Carnations for some reason, possibly the close picking in the desire to get it in anything or everything that might be salable for Mothers' day, have been shy the past week. They are showing the effects of their long season and the warmer weather and are getting smaller. Roses are plentiful and it takes the week-end sales started recently by several of the stores at the suggestion of the growers to clean them up. This is a move in the right direction, as liberal price concessions are made by the growers and some of the commission men, which enables the dealer to offer stock at one-half the ordinary price, inducing the public to buy what they have no particular use for, "because it is so cheap." Men who would not sell more than 100 to 200 short Killarneys a day handle under these cut-price sales, 1,500 to 2,000 on Saturdays. The aggregate of these sales helps very much to relieve the situation, although they interfere considerably with stability in prices, as everything cannot be sold cheap, except in a shop which makes this their specialty.

New crop sweet peas are anxiously looked for, the present stock of fag ends being very unsatisfactory. Snapdragons have been good stock, being handled in quantity at low prices. Miniature gladioli sell fairly well, as does Spanish iris, which finds much favor with discriminating flower buyers. Cornflower is now seen in quantity and is popular for boutonnieres. Callas and Easter lilies are very plentiful. Now that there has been time to exchange views on the business of Mothers' day, it is very uncertain whether the trade generally profited to any extent. Several of the dealers plunged or bought for speculation and after holding for a while and not finding the market, were compelled to sell for one and two dollars, stock that cost them from four to six. Mothers' day is based on sentiment, but of course there is no sentiment in business. It is, or should be, a matter of dollars and cents, or a principle of live and let live, but there should be honor. The white carnation lends itself unconsciously to very reprehensible methods. Flowers that have been cut from a week to ten days, or ever longer, if kept in an ice box are very difficult to distinguish from fresh stock, the colored sorts pale out, but the white appear all right at first, only to go to pieces in a few hours after coming into the heat. The working off of this "pickled" stock at high prices to the trade has done much to disgust the stock keepers with any movement to push their sale. Many stores had stock left over for this reason. There was little or no advertising done; a few small cards, but nothing collectively. The publicity movement, started so auspiciously a few years ago, and which was generously supported by all classes of trade, has for some reason gone a glimmering; it promised to be a bright, shining light to attract the lovers of flowers, but its rays are now very feeble if they have not died out altogether. Why this failure? The bedding plant men are now in the midst of things. The demand for geraniums, particularly for plants in flower, is much greater than the supply. They must be in flower to sell, yet if the people only knew it and they should be told, to have them coming in is much better than when they are about going.

BUSINESS IS DULL.

There has been considerable complaint, during the past week, of dull business. Relating to that, we only say that what people have before their eyes impresses them more forcibly than something that has passed and gone. It is true that business has been dull, but there have been other times when it was as bad, probably worse than now. Considering the great volume of stock that reaches this market, it has sometimes been a surprise to the writer, not that it occasionally caused a congestion, but that so much of it sold. It is true that prices are low, but that is to be expected just now. Roses are blooming freely and there are yet many carnations coming in. Sweet peas, lily of the valley, tulips, grown in the open, stocks and various other flowers are plentiful. There is yet an abundance of lilac and much of it is very good and moves freely. The advance guard of the peonies is already here and in a week or two there is likely to be battalions of them. When we consider all this, and various other matters that leave a depressing effect on business, times might be worse.

May 17.—The market is quiet. Rain has been falling intermittently since Sunday morning, which does not improve conditions. American Beauty roses are in lighter supply and specials bring $20 and in some instances $25 per 100; in other stocks prices remain about the same as our quotation of May 12.

NOTES.

George Schlegel, of Brooklyn, though engaged in other business, is a great orchid fancier. In S. G. Milosy he has in his employ an excellent grower. Calling recently at this range, which comprises about 15,000 square feet of glass, we found a great variety of fine orchid stock. He has a plant of the epidendrum family, said to be valued at $2,000. It is pure white and is said to be the rarest white orchid known to the trade and to fanciers. There is a collection of 250 plants of Cattleya and Brassia, and Phalænopsis, Schilleriana and amabilis were also noted.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., secretary of the Associated Retail Florists, Inc., of New York, advises us that the association maintains a list of names of florists out of employment, and they would be pleased at any time to hear from persons connected with the retail business who are looking for positions, or from those who are looking for help. Mr. Siebrecht's office is in Queens Plaza court, Long Island City, N. Y.

At the store of Malandre Brothers, 2703 Broadway, we have noted a fine decoration of foliage plants. On each side of the entrances there are four boxes filled with plants, fastened to the wall and a larger one over the door. The boxes at the threshold are so filled and arranged with English ivy and other plants, that to the top of the doorway they present an unbroken mass of foliage.

A. Demeusey, Brooklyn, has a very fine stock of flowering carnations and his young stock in the field is exceptionally good. All the Flatbush carnation growers are strong on the propagation and care of young stock. At the John A. Wocker estate we noted good carnations and a fine stock of young plants of A. plumosus nanus were being planted.

Myer, who has been for ten years a retailer at Madison avenue and 58th street, has made great progress with his business. He now has one of the finest buildings, for the retail florist business in the city. He states that in the building he has an investment of $125,000 and expects to have it clear of any mortgage within a year.

Edward Dupuy, son of Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, L. I., reached nome May 9, after several weeks spent in France and England. He did not make the trip on business connected with horticulture, but took note of what was doing over there. He says the cut flower trade is good, but plants are very slow.

Philip F. Kessler, the wholesaler of the Coogan building, will close his place of business, July 15, and it will remain closed until September 15. In the interim he will visit the Panama-Pacific exposition and, as a matter of course, attend the convention of the Society of American Florists.

Young & Nugent had a very large amount of funeral work, May 5, for the funeral of Robert A. McCord, vice-president of the Hecla-Winslow Architectural Iron Co., who died at his home, Greenwich, Conn. The stock used was largely orchids.

G. W. Peters, of George Peters & Sons, Hempstead, who is their salesman in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co., is being congratulated over the stork's visit to his home. The wise old bird left a boy. Mother and child are doing well.

John ("Shorty") Hart, at one time a prosperous wholesale florist of this city, died suddenly in a hospital May 13. Fifteen years ago he was considered one of the best salesmen in the district. He was about 50 years old.

The florists of Conway street, at Evergreen Cemetery, are now doing a good business. At K. Rodman's, the W. H. Hall estate, Fred. Albrecht Jr.'s and the store of John J. Ehrhardt & Son we noted activity.

G. E. M. Stumpp is very busy getting ready his new store at Southampton, L. I. The building he bought had to be completely remodeled, but he hopes to be ready to open in a very short time.

The noted brothers, William, Louis and Charles Kuebler, are always busy. In addition to a wholesale cut flower business they also have a supply business which is managed by Louis.

The Broadway, Brooklyn, florists seem prosperous, and there are several good stores on that thoroughfare, noteworthy being Joe Trepel's, J. M. Thielmann's and Metcalf's.

Alexander Donaldson is marketing good lilies. He is selling out a large stock of geraniums and planting the beds made vacant with chrysanthemums.

Wm. J. Ruppert, Brooklyn, now conducts two retail flower shops, one at Cooper street and Central avenue, the other at Jamaica avenue and Wyona street.

Albany, N. Y.

Among the recent visitors to the city was Alexander J. Guttman, well known florist of New York. He called on Governor and Mrs. Charles S. Whitman at the executive mansion, bringing with him some plants of a new scarlet carnation, together with three dozen of the flowers which Mr. Guttman has named in honor of Mrs. Whitman. The latter were used the same evening for decorations at a function held in the executive mansion. Samples of the flower were left also with Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange. A few years ago Mr. Guttman introduced Carnation Beacon to the trade and this variety is well known. The new carnation is scarlet in color, flower of large size, and with a long strong stem. It may be introduced to the trade next year.

Local retailers are well satisfied with the business done on Mothers' day. The supply of carnations was not equal to the demand and although an effort was made to persuade some of the public to buy roses, there was little or no response as the minds of purchasers seemed to be set on carnations only. The demand for white carnations was extraordinary. Calls for flowers were heavy Saturday evening and Sunday nearly all the retailers were out of stock before 11 a. m.

Morris Cohen, a well known ribbon salesman of New York, has recently started in business for himself. Morris has many friends hereabouts and all wish him well in his new venture.

PEONY CROP EXCELLENT.

The supply in the market, while not as large as it was, is still easily able to take care of all immediate requirements. The demand for stock is fair and is of about the same volume as during the last several weeks. Shipping business is pretty good. Peonies this year are apparently better than in other years. The supply is large and steady and is generally in a most excellent condition. The rose cut, including American Beauties, continues large. Carnations are plentiful, but are rapidly deteriorating in size and quality, owing probably to the advent of warmer weather. The Easter lily supply is more than able to take care of all present needs. Orchid and lily of the valley offerings, as well as outdoor sweet peas, are very good. The first cornflower of the season has made its appearance. Irises have a very poor market.

NOTES.

The E. G. Hill Floral Co. had a very prettily arranged basket of peonies in one of their windows the first of this week.

Miss Jennie Adrian left the first of last week on an extended trip to California and the exposition.

C. E. Critchell has been getting some fine hardy shrubbery from Thos. Windram.

Visitors: J. Meiklejohn, representing H. Frank Darrow Co., New York; T. Weltz, Wilmington, O., and Miss Fannie White, Lexington, Ky.

MARKET CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY.

Market conditions the past week have been very satisfactory, although prices have been lower than the week previous. Roses cleaned up well at from three cents to eight cents, carnations vary from two cents to four cents, and sweet peas are scarce at 75 cents per hundred for old stock, with very few Butterfly to be seen. Tulips are being held at two cents to three cents but the quality is poor. Daisies are quoted at $1 per 100 and find ready sale.

NOTES.

L. S. Donaldson Co.'s greenhouse force are having a very busy time of it and Wm. Vasatka says that bedding stock is all the people in the country know anything about, by the way they keep writing and telephoning for it.

Mr. Swanson of Minneapolis Floral Co. is using extra men getting out bedding stock at the cemeteries and has one eye open looking for C. G. Anderson to relieve him. Mr. Anderson has not arrived as yet to take charge.

The Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., has operated a store at 702 Hennepin avenue for several weeks past and report sales as much heavier than expected, with their large force of salespeople all busy.

W. D. Desmond, Robert Newcomb and Wm. Opal went to Lake Minnetonka on a fishing trip May 16. They are all back but have made no report.

Eldridge Floral Company is busy with country orders and says out-of-town business is much larger than in former years.

Rice Bros. say that the peony crop is starting to come in and that they expect to handle a great many for Memorial day.

Hans Rosacker has his two houses all closed in and is nearly ready to start two more the same size, 28x260 feet.

The flower show committee has not done anything final as yet but expects to make a full report next week.

The Sunshine Florists are having some very attractive windows and report business very good.

American Seed Trade Association.

Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif., President; J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y., First Vice-President; E. C. Dungan, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer; S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O., Assistant Secretary.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

NEW YORK.—Seed and plant counter trade is slowing down.

FRENCH reports indicate that definite bulb prices are not yet agreed upon by interested producers.

THE Japanese steamer carrying Robert Fulton to Japan has been reported on fire two days out from Yokohama.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 19 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND. — The Crabb, Reynolds, Taylor Co. will install new seed cleaning machinery. They are erecting a three-story addition to their establishment.

THE Chinese Narcissus Combine at Amoy is again holding out for prohibitive prices, notwithstanding the heavy loss sustained on account of similar action last year.

THE flurry on blue grass seed seems to be subsiding with very good Kentucky prospects for the new crop. It is hinted that some 1912 seed was moved at the late advance.

VAUGHAN'S Hoodoo melon continues to be sold as Ordway just as Vaughan's Osage Gem was falsely changed to Burrell's Gem and is so catalogued by many firms, who are aware of the fraud.

POLMAN MOOY is offering to the American trade his Excelsior pink Roman hyacinth, spikes larger than ordinary Romans, graceful without being clumsy, a delicate pink, slightly scented.

ST. JOSEPH, MO. — William Mitchelhill, member of the firm of Mitchelhill Bros., was one of the passengers on the Lusitania. Despite the efforts of friends and the steamship company, no trace has been found of him.

NEW YORK.—Charles D. Boyles, now president of the Hoboken Shore Railroad here, is spending most of his time in this city, making his headquarters at the New York Athletic club.—J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, is a visitor this week.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.—As a trade mark, descriptive of its alfalfa, clover, timothy, blue grass, millet grass, blue top, and blue grass seeds, Wood-Beazley Seed Co. has registered the trade mark, "Seegro Brand, Ser. No. 84,472." Use of the term is claimed since December 15, 1914.

COLLECTORS of customs are required to forward to the seed laboratory, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., two-ounce samples of each lot of all grass, clover and other forage-plant seeds imported into the United States in conformity with an amendment of the seed importation act of 1912.

THE Fabre line (French) has advanced its freight rates from 25 shillings to 25 shillings plus 10 per cent plus 25 per cent per ton of 1,000 kilos. It begins to look as if there would be some "frills" for the buyers who accept prices f. o. b. French growing stations.

BALTIMORE, MD.—J. Bolgiano & Son are making a very attractive window display of bird houses of all shapes and styles, including wren's bungalows, red and blue birds' open houses, cardinal's corn crib, flicker logs, feeding shelves, etc., artistically arranged throughout the window among plenty of bush and material for making nests. Several dozen canary birds are flying about, earnestly toiling building nests in which to rear their young. The floor is covered with sand upon which are several fountains of water for drinking and bathing. Crowds of people are continuously attracted to the window by this beautiful display and the firm reports sales of the bird boxes very large.

Clover Seed.

Clover seed prices usually advance somewhat during May, but this year the changes have been very slight. The weather conditions have been about perfect for the new crop, and this has made the bulls cautious. On the other hand the period of crop damage is still ahead, and bears are not inclined to sell freely at this stage, even with growing conditions as favorable as they are. From all we can learn the acreage is a liberal average and on present prospects a good-sized crop is indicated.

San Francisco Convention.

S. F. Leonard, chairman of the American Seed Trade Association's transportation committee for the annual convention to be held at San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, reports that 50 reservations have been made thus far and that 125 are necessary to make up a special train. Mr. Leonard urges members to send in their reservations as early as convenient and to induce as many friends as possible, whether in the trade or otherwise, to join the party. The train leaves Chicago June 12, at 8:05 p. m., via the Santa Fe, Kansas City, June 13, at 9:00 a. m., where any number can join the party if reservations are made before the train starts June 12. Particulars of the programme, itinerary and rates appeared in our issue of April 3, page 590. For reservations and all further information address S. F. Leonard, care of the Leonard Seed Co., 226-230 West Kinzie street, Chicago.

Western Seedsmen's Association.

The annual meeting of the Western Seedsmen's Association was held at the Rome hotel, Omaha, Neb., May 15, with quite a full attendance of members. The general business of the association was transacted during the morning hours. Resolutions were passed touching the loss of Wm. Mitchelhill, of Mitchelhill Bros., St. Joseph, Mo., in the Lusitania disaster, also resolutions expressing appreciation of the great work done in behalf of the association by the late Jesse E. Northrup, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., one of the founders of the organization. The former officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: H. A. Johns, Sioux City, Ia., president; C. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn., vice-president; M. L. Webster, Independence, Ia., secretary; Henry Windheim, Omaha, Neb., treasurer.

After a family dinner automobiles were furnished by the Nebraska Seed Co. and the J. C. Robinson Seed Co., of Waterloo, and all visited the latter firm's establishment at that place and had a delightful reception at the home of the senior member of the firm.

United States Continues War on Beans.

Another 100 bags of beans have been seized by federal authorities on the charge that 50 per cent are decomposed and unfit for food. These beans were found at a west side warehouse, where they had been shipped by the McDonald Bean Co., Bay City, Mich., consigned to John Sexton & Co.—Chicago Herald, May 6.

MUSCATINE, IA.—J. E. Hoopes & Co. report that they have had a fine spring so far and are busy now planting pepper, egg plant and tomato for their contract seed crops.

BISMARCK, N. D.—Oscar H. Will & Co. are preparing to add an up-to-date greenhouse plant to their seed and nursery business. The location selected will be on Fourth street above their seed store.

WITH many steamers of the Morgan line and the Porto Rico line tied up by the general strike of deck officers, large quantities of onions are held up at various ports, including Galveston and New Orleans.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The first crate of Imperial Valley cantaloupes of the 1915 crop was started for New York May 14. It will arrive Monday or Tuesday. It is expected the crate of about 45 cantaloupes will bring $20 to $25. Imperial Valley this year will produce between 4,500 and 5,000 cars of cantaloupes.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

New York, May 18.—Cauliflower, per dozen, $1.50 to $2.50. Cucumbers, 75 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 25 cents to $1.00 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to 50 cents; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 25 cents to 40 cents.

New Tomato Rot.

Many carloads of Florida tomatoes have been injured or destroyed during the past few months by a block rot or black speck disease which has been more prevalent this season than heretofore, although known to have occurred in that state to some extent for three or four years. It is reported from some sections that the losses in the fields amounted to 50 per cent and that some large fields were so completely infected as to be almost worthless. In addition to the field losses, tomatoes packed and shipped in an apparently sound condition develop the rot in transit and reach their destination in such condition that they can not be sold as first-class stock. A Denver commission house writes that practically every car that has arrived in Denver this year has shown this disease to quite an extent. The Canadian government inspector reports cars arriving there quite ruined.

The United States department of agriculture has completed and published a technical study of this trouble, extending over three years. It finds that the disease, which will be called the phoma rot, is new and not to be confused with other tomato rots. The fungus causing it is a parasite belonging to a genus which includes several serious fruit and tuber rots and stem blights of other crops, but this particular species appears to occur mainly on tomatoes, though under certain conditions it may attack potatoes. It occurs in the fields, causing black specks on the leaves, stems, and fruit. The fruit spots enlarge and become very black, with pin-point-like pustules filled with spores. Both green and ripe tomatoes are affected, most of the spots usually appearing at the stem end. An important point brought out by this study is that the fungus seems to be unable to attack unmutilated fruit. Some injury, either by insects, bruises, or natural cracks, must be present to permit infection. It is probable that in many instances where there is little or no field infection the tomatoes become injured during harvesting or packing and are infected in the packing houses. It is likely that by more careful handling and the prompt destruction of all infected material the loss during shipment can be reduced. The disease will not develop at a temperature of 44° Fahrenheit, or lower.

White Fly on Tomatoes.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please advise remedy to rid greenhouses of white fly. Tomatoes, especially, are affected. W. B.

Connecticut.

The bureau of entomology of the United States department of agriculture recommends hydrocyanic-acid gas, but where the use of this is impossible or for some reason undesirable, sprays are recommended as follows: "Among the sprays, the best brands of whale-oil soap, used in the proportion of one to one and one-half ounces per gallon of water, have been found to destroy all of the white flies except the eggs, a small percentage of the nearly mature pupæ, and from 25 to 50 per cent of the adults which escape the spray by flying from the plants.

"It is not advisable to syringe tomato plants in greenhouses at any time, when avoidable, as syringing interferes with pollination and produces a damp atmosphere which promotes rot, but the injury by syringing may be as nothing compared with that which is caused daily by the insects. When the use of hydrocyanic-acid gas is impractical, an all-night fumigation with a tobacco extract is recommended, followed during the next day by a syringing with a solution of whale-oil soap or its equivalent."

Protecting Seeds Against Pheasants.

By soaking seeds of any kind which are to be planted, overnight, and then sprinkling them with powdered red lead, one teaspoonful to every quart of seeds, the seeds remain uninjured and pheasants will not touch them, according to W. B. Fraser, state game and fish commissioner for Colorado. Every spring he receives complaints from growers that the pheasants eat their seeds and that they are forced to replant two and three times, according to the Denver Post.

According to the commissioner, only market gardeners who are trying to make a living on one or two acres of land are troubled by the pheasants. Each year the department has received complaints from this source and has furnished seeds to the farmers for replanting. This year, instead of seeds, Fraser is supplying complainants with red lead.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—Flower day, May 1, supplanted the annual tag day of the City Federation of Women's Clubs. The women decided the public preferred a pretty flower to a piece of paste-board. Funds obtained from this source support the charity, civic and educational work of the organization.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

TRENTON, MO.—L. G. Miller has purchased three acres of land here and will establish a nursery.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—The Moon Nursery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000.

BOGALUSA, LA.—The Bogalusa Nursery & Floral Co. has been organized with Walter Statter, landscape gardener in charge.

ANNAPOLIS, MD.—F. W. Hambruck, Ridge avenue, will conduct a nursery business here, representing a Pittsburgh, Pa., firm.

HOUSTON, TEX.—A plan has been formulated to organize a system of city parks and work will begin immediately under the supervision of Park Superintendent C. L. Brock.

UTICA, N. Y.—Rev. Edward P. Powell, formerly of Clinton, known as a prominent fruit raiser, is dead at Sorrento, Fla., where he had lived three years. He was 82 years old.

CENTRAL ISLIP, N. Y.—About 250,000 pine and fir trees will be planted by the conservation commission, which has made arrangements to use some of the state ground for cultivation of trees.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.—Ten thousand fruit trees donated by Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Lousiana, Mo., have been planted along roads leading out of this city and on school grounds.

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL.—Thomas A. Bean, nurseryman, near Dahlgren, Ill., was brought here May 11 for trial, accused by United States authorities of using the mails to defraud in ordering plants and supplies for which he failed to pay.

FARMERS' bulletin No. 662, entitled The Apple-Tree Tent Caterpillar, has been issued by the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C. Spraying with arsenicals is recommended as a method of destroying the pest.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH.—Thousands of oil burners were aglow the night of May 17 in the vineyards and orchards of the fruit belt as protection against a probable killing frost which threatens $1,000,000 damage. A frost through the grape district of Van Buren county around Paw Paw and Lawton a few nights ago inflicted a loss of $250,000.

Early Lilacs.

Two Chinese lilacs Syringa affinis, with white flowers, and the lilac-colored form of this species, var. Giraldii, are already in flower in the lilac group. The white-flowered form is largely cultivated in the gardens of Pekin, and the variety comes from the Province of Shensi. The flowers of these two lilacs are fragrant and beautiful, but their open and irregular habit of growth is not attractive. They are certainly valuable, however, for the earliness of their flowers.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 13, 1915.

Nursery Stock Quarantine Act Amendment

Regulation 6 of the rules and regulations of the secretary of agriculture is hereby amended, effective immediately, by striking out the first sentence in the second paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

Nursery stock, except orchids and tree seeds, from countries which do not maintain nursery-stock inspection, will be admitted into the United States only for experimental purposes and in limited quantities, under special permit through ports designated therein. (See regulation 5.) Orchids and tree seeds may be imported from such countries in commercial quantities under special permit.

THE ALLIED TRADES

"Red Devils" Lower Greenhouse Costs.

It is but natural that the wise, thrifty florist should want to cut the glass needed for his greenhouse himself. In doing this work it is highly important to use the right sort of tool —otherwise breakage from glass will cause a painful impression in the cash book, and splinters from broken glass will cause a painful impression on the hands. Florists who wish to cut glass as easily as snipping off a bud, with a clean cut free from splinters, will find the "Red Devil" glass cutters very useful and economical for the purpose. They have genuine, hand-honed steel wheels, each tested and inspected before it leaves the factory. When you consider that glass is so hard that points have been used until recently to cut it you will appreciate in its full light the importance of devising a cutter like the "Red Devil." Just as a horse is no better than its feet, so a glass cutter is no better than its wheels. The accompanying illustrations show types of "Red Devil" cutters adapted to florists' use. Enthusiastic users of "Red Devil" glass cutters proclaim that "it's all in the wheel," but sight must not be lost of the fatigue-proof handles and the scientific shape of the entire tool.

"Red Devil" cutter No. 024 sells at the remarkably low price of 10 cents. "Red Devil" cutter No. 3-in-1 cuts hard or plate glass; thin, thick, medium—all equally smoothly with clean, clear edges. This cutter in leather case costs 25 cents.

"Red Devil" cutters No. 5 and 6 are of the "magazine" type, with 5 and 6 wheels respectively stored away in an airtight, rustproof chamber in the handle, ready for instant use. The price of No. 5 is 35 cents, of No. 6 with kid case, 50 cents.

Readers interested further in the subject will do well to write for a booklet of 40 styles of "Red Devil" glass cutters to the manufacturers, Smith & Hemenway Co., Inc., 170 Chambers street, New York.

Pruning Shears for Women.

A light, handsome six-inch pruning shear for use by women promises to have great popularity and a large sale. When milady goes into her garden hereafter to clip the flowers for her dinner table or trim her rosebushes, she need no longer depend upon an ordinary pair of scissors when she can have a tool perfectly adapted to the purpose in the new ladies' pruning shear, manufactured by the Peck, Stow & Wilcox Company of Southington, Conn.

This little pruning shear is nickel-plated and is very attractive as well as serviceable. It is not cast or malleable, but is forged from good steel, highly polished. Shears of this kind heretofore have been made almost exclusively abroad, and of course, under present conditions the supply is limited. The "Pexto" shear will not only take the place of the imported, but will undoubtedly result in increased use of this convenient tool in the United States and Canada. It is made in one size only (six inches) carefully wrapped in anti-tarnish paper and packed in neat, individual boxes.

Utah Potash.

The report that Armour & Company is to build works in Utah or Wyoming for the extraction of potash from a mineral known as alunite is important in view of the fact that the bulk of the potash which was consumed in this country before the war came from Germany.

Englewood, N. J.

Another fine range is that of John M. Hunter & Son. Some fourteen or fifteen years ago Mr. Hunter took this place, on which there were several small greenhouses. He erected new houses, beautified the grounds, and being a thoroughly trained grower has brought the business to a high state of efficiency. In this he has been assisted by his son, a clever and capable young man. They grow a fine variety of plants and cut flowers, and have a good local trade. We regret to state that John M. Hunter has been in poor health for some time and his physician has ordered a change of climate, presumably California. For this reason, as Mrs. Hunter and the son wish to be with him, they are offering the place for sale. There are 25,000 square feet of glass, three acres of land and a fine and well furnished dwelling house.

The McQuaid brothers are to the manor born, their father having first been a private gardener and eventually going into business for himself. The two brothers, Grant and Samuel McQuaid, have carried on the business with success. Their range is neat and well managed and they grow a variety of stock. They have a large local trade in bedding plants and cut flowers and are prepared to do everything in the line of landscape work, and also funeral work.

Englewood, a well located and fast growing city, has a number of up-to-date and prosperous florists. The city has well paved streets, most of which are made attractive by rows of fine shade trees. There are also many fine homes with attractive grounds, the planting and care of which make business for the florists.

About two years ago, Herman Mamitch took the T. W. Lydecker range of about 25,000 square feet. He has been very successful with carnations and sweet peas and expects to have about 25,000 carnation plants to sell this season. These comprise all the best of both new and old varieties.

John Lange has a fine range and grows a variety of plants and cut flowers. Of the latter, his snapdragons are noteworthy. All his stock is used in local trade. A. F. F.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

The attendance was very good, indeed, at the monthly meeting of this society, held Friday evening, May 14, at Doran's hall, Greenwich, Conn., President Sealy officiating. Several new members were elected and a number of new names were presented for membership in the society. Both the summer and fall show committees made satisfactory reports of progress. The schedules for the summer exhibition are all ready for distribution and copies may be had on application to the secretary. This exhibition will be held June 18-19 in the Town hall, Greenwich, Conn. The preliminary schedule of the fall exhibition was read, and when finally published will be very attractive and interesting to intending exhibitors. The annual outing will be held as usual at Edward's Rye Beach Inn, Rye Beach, N. Y., the date to be announced later. Among the visitors present was Harry Turner of the Morris Nursery Co., New York, who favored us with a few very complimentary remarks. The lecturer of the evening, P. W. Popp, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., read a paper on "Dahlia Culture" that was well received and accorded the thanks of the society.

The exhibits of the evening, while not so numerous as usual, were, however, of superior quality. The judges made the following awards: Cultural certificate to James Stuart for Calceolaria hybrida; honorable mention to Wm. Morrow for a fine vase of Encharis Amazonica. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the other exhibitors, Dehn & Bertolf, Greenwich, Conn., for display of cut flowering shrubs and perennials; Robt. Williamson for display of tulips; A. Whitelaw for vase of mixed tulips; Jas. Linane for specimen Calceolaria hybrida; J. Guermousprey for Aralia cordata; also a dish of salad prepared from same; P. W. Popp for Halesia tetraptera and dwarf calceolarias. The next meeting will be held June 11.

P. W. POPP, Cor. Sec'y.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The society was treated to an unusually fine exhibition of tulips and hardy flowers and shrubs at its regular meeting Friday evening, May 14, the display being staged by President Warren S. Mason, superintendent of the Pope estate of Farmington, and by ex-President John F. Huss, superintendent of the Goodwin estate, Hartford. The collection of Mr. Mason contained such specimens as Physche, Edne, Clara Butt, Baroness de Tomege, Glow, Pride of Haarlem, Parrot, Madam Kielage, King Harold, Isis, and Rembrandt. A vase of fritallaria (guinea hen flower) was in the collection; also four varieties of lilac: Lord Vegnon, Marie Legraye, Spaghke, and Persian. The exhibit of Mr. Huss was composed of a variety of hardy flowers and shrubs such as Primula Sieboldii, Exochorda grandiflora, Peony Japonica, Iberis grandiflora superba, Iris alba nana compacta, Viola Wermingi, Arabis albida floraplena, Alyssum saxitile compactum, and ten varieties polyanthus. The judges, William Deming, J. M. Adams and Alfred Cebelius, awarded the above exhibits a first-class certificate each, which was duly approved by vote of the members.

Much interest was manifested in the flower show to be held June 10 in Unity hall, Pratt street, Hartford. The committee in charge has been increased from three to six members, and is now made up of the following members: G. H. Hollister, Ed. A. Brassill, J. M. Adams, C. O. Becher, William Deming, and Alfred Dixon. The entire profits of this exhibition will be turned over to the Union for Home Work, a local charitable organization.

One new member was admitted to the society. The next meeting will be held May 28, and will be "Hardy Perennials" night.

ALFRED DIXON, Sec'y.

June Wedding Appointments

Wedding Flowers and Decorations.

With the advent of June, the month of roses, there is again ushered in, the bride. As if expecting the visit of the lady and her bevy of maids, all nature is at her best; flowers are everywhere, the whole landscape is gay with color—it is truly the blossom time of life.

With such a wealth of material, the florist is called on to show his art in the decoration of the house and lawn.

In many cases, the ceremony and reception take place on the lawn under a floral arch or canopy erected on a portion of the grounds adjacent to the dwelling. Should the weather be fair, everything passes off smoothly, but in the case of wet weather, the scene of action is transferred to the house, which must often be hurriedly put in order.

For the lawn setting, a tent-like canopy made of garlands of laurel is effective. A background of palms and cibotium ferns give a color tone with peonies, Easter lilies or long stemed roses, together with a rose-decked kneeling stool, decorates the space admirably for the ceremony and makes a pretty picture for the pleasure of the company while waiting for the bride to appear. The aisle from the dwelling to the canopy should be on the grass, across the lawn, not following the graveled path. Garlands of laurel, decorated with snowballs or other flowers suspended from shepherds' crooks stuck into the ground, should outline the way. A large floral arch may take the place of the canopied enclosure, the garlands of the pathway spreading out and enclosing the limits of the necessary space. The refreshments are generally served at small tables on the lawn, the center of each bearing its more or less elaborate vase of flowers.

If, on account of inclement weather, the ceremony must take place in the dwelling, the decorations will consist of a bank or graceful arrangement of palms and ferns at the place of the ceremony and given touches of color with flowers in tall floor vases placed at intervals. The mantels should have low bowls of flowers. Vases or blooming pot plants, such as well flowered hydrangeas, are very decorative if placed on the seats and ledges. The tops of book-cases and china-closets and also the sideboards should have low bowls filled with flower blossoms to harmonize with the furnishing of the rooms. Over all doorways are decorative points that when touched up with garlands of green and color are very noticeable.

Perhaps the flowers that attract the most attention are those carried by the bridal party and at this time there is great variety to choose from. The bride can carry lily of the valley and roses or orchids or just plain lilies. All white sweet peas are good in shower effect, as is also the lily of the valley; for the maids blue or pink hydrangeas, with the same colored ribbons in contrast. Baskets made of light material, when nicely filled with any of the above flowers and tied with appropriate ribbons, are an agreeable change from the bouquets. Striking color effects are always good and are sure to make a hit, providing they do not clash with the dresses or millinery. Large shower bunches of pink sweet peas are very effective at this time as they seem so seasonable, as are also baskets or hats filled with them.

For the buffet dining table, a tall vase of American Beauty roses, if not interfered with by the chandelier, is nearly always a winner. A vase is always better than a plateau on a table of this kind as there is generally so little room. For the boutonnieres there is a choice of lily of the valley, gardenias, or sweet peas. The supply men offer very pretty and dainty baskets, with or without handles, for flower girls, to be carried by bows of ribbon on the arm, or held in the hand. When nicely filled they are very suitable for the purpose.

Church Decoration.

The decoration of the church for the wedding is an important branch of the business. In public such a wedding is always more or less elaborate and in most cases gives the artist an opportunity to add to his laurels and at the same time increase substantially his bank account.

There are as many different ways in which the decorations can be arranged as there are changes of architecture in the churches. In many buildings the platform on which stands the pulpit is high, and the ceremony is performed at the head of the middle aisle on the main floor directly in front of the pulpit. In this case the platform not being used, is banked with palms. In many churches the front of the platform contains a wooden or sometimes a stone bannister or railing, which will support mossed boards or shelves of cut flowers with drapings of greens and flowers to the floor. If the platform is without the railing and is three or four feet in height, a ledge or border of potted flowering plants and cut flowers can be arranged to fall over the edge with the taller palms as a background. There is a general rule to be followed in decorations of large buildings of this character, and that is that everything is to work in together for the general effect; there are certain points to be emphasized, but it is the view that spreads out before one and that is seen at once, that pleases. With the ceremony at the head of the aisle it is nearly always necessary to remove a few of the front pews to make room for the bridal party. A raised platform one foot high, made solid and covered with denim or crash, places the ceremony within the view of all the guests, and is well worth the small additional expense. On this is placed the kneeling stool, which should be well decortaed, as it is the central point to which all eyes are turned.

The treatment of the main aisle is important. This may be decorated with bunches of flowers and ribbon at ends of every pew or at intervals, or only on the pews reserved for the family and special guests. From one to two arches, or more, placed at regular intervals over the whole length of the aisle make an elaborate showing. Another beautiful effect is with standards of cut flowers on either side of the aisle at intervals, these can be more or less elaborate. Iron plant stands about three feet high make a good foundation on which to place tall American Beauty wicker vases which, when filled, make fine standards. Quite tall stands mossed up to resemble tree trunks with a cybotium fern at the top are very effective. If all these are considered too heavy, one-inch poles painted or wrapped with white cheese cloth with a more or less elaborate tree or basket of ferns at the top, or just a bunch of long-stemmed roses and a bow of ribbon or chiffon tied to the pole will be found very decorative. Arches or canopies are sometimes erected at the place where the ceremony is to be performed. The old-time bell is now seldom used, but can be suspended from the arch or canopy.

In the churches where the choristers' pews occupy the front of the chancel the pew ends fronting the audience should be decorated with baskets of cut flowers and green or heavy garlands of the same, all arranged so as not to hide the view of the ceremony at the altar. The rear of the chancel each side of the altar will contain the palms in this case, and tall American Beauty wicker vases of cut flowers will relieve the somber green. The altar vases should be well filled with choice blooms and the font with a handsome fern or a basket of long-stemmed flowers of the season. The window ledges can also be banked with foliage and blooming plants, and add much to the effect. In many churches columns are to be reckoned with, and these can be garlanded or made to support a climbing rose. Wrap the column with a stout green cord, using small blocks to leave a space behind the cord and fill this with short branches of laurel. This can be done the day before. Have a lot of roses, stemmed loosely, several together, and as late as possible stick them through the green. If nicely done, the effect of the climbing rose is well brought out, particularly if a pot cover mossed and filled with bunches is placed on a pedestal and the bush appears to be growing from this.

After the company have assembled the ushers should tie them in with the strip of ribbon across the pew ends. This, by the way, is best done by having the right lengths of ribbon wound on two round sticks about a foot in length. These sticks are painted white or wrapped with ribbon. These rolls are placed in the last reserved pews on each side of the aisles with the loose end of the ribbon securely fastened. With this preparation it is but the work of a moment for two ushers to walk to the rear and fasten the ribbon to the extreme end pews. Another last minute touch that is worth the trouble is made with a roll of white muslin the length of the middle aisle and from 36 to 48 inches in width. This is rolled on a stick which projects six inches or more from either end so that it may be carried. The loose end is tacked to the floor or platform where the ceremony takes place and left rolled up. Just as the bridal party are arriving and the guests are all seated two of the ushers or two boys selected for the work pick up the roll and carry it down the aisle, the roll unwinding as they proceed, and the other end is then quickly drawn taut and tacked to the floor strip of the front door. This gives a finished path that adds much to the bridal procession.

Protect the Legitimate Florist.

A LETTER TO WHOLESALERS.

There are some things each and every individual wholesaler or jobber can do to protect the legitimate florist without hurting himself or anyone else, and one of them is to quote stock at one-half to one cent higher than market prices to all one-horse candy stores, cigar shops and so-called department stores. Time and again it has been called to our attention where either the shipment was refused or delayed and the express companies come to us for relief.

We have before us a shipment to a cigar store with carnations invoiced at two cents and Darwin tulips at two cents. Now this is not a fair way to do. There is no reason whatever why this stock could not have been billed at two and a half or three cents. That would have given us protection so that when they want stock again they will buy it through the local dealer. We sold today to candy stores carnations at three cents and figured a legitimate profit.

The wholesalers will say that if you don't sell to these one-horse concerns they will get it somewhere else. Well and good, let them get it somewhere else. If all the wholesale dealers would be decent about quoting prices to non-florists there would not be any advantage for anyone. The regular florist, of course, cannot be expected to buy from every house, but can distribute his business as much as possible, which we believe is usually done.

We cannot say to wholesale dealers, "Here, if you don't stop shipping to these peanut stands, dice shops, and taffy pulls at ridiculous wholesale prices, we will discontinue trading with you." We cannot say that to you gentlemen, because we cannot patronize you all, but we do patronize a number of firms and do the best we can to split up the business. It is up to one and all alike to protect the legitimate merchant whether you are individually getting his business or not. All that is necessary is to ship goods to non-florists at 25 or 30 per cent higher prices than you ship to the legitimate trade.

We are sending this letter to a number of wholesale dealers for fair consideration and hope that you will agree that it is no more than right, also to THE AMERICAN FLORIST and hope that it will perhaps do a little good compared to the incalculable harm these petty shipments do throughout the country. Certainly there is no money in this non-florist business for the wholesaler, as he will sell just as much stock anyway.

DULUTH FLORAL COMPANY.

PLANT NOTES.

Peonies.

The work on these plants is not finished by any means when the blooms are cut, for they must be taken care of to insure a good crop for another year. Where the plants are grown in rows the constant traveling has packed the soil down hard and the ground should be given a good cultivation in order to lighten it up. The weeds should be kept down all summer and not allowed to rob the soil of its richness. If the plants were severely cut in harvesting the bloom, so that there is not much foliage left on the plant, it is well to spread a mulch of strawy manure on the surface. This is often the case with the officinalis varieties which do not make the heavy growth of the later varieties, and as it is natural for the roots of the peonies to have the shade of the heavy foliage of the plants during the summer, the cutting of the stems and foliage of these varieties robs the roots of this, and a mulch that will protect the ground from the hot summer sun is very beneficial and will also reduce the labor of weeding. Any old blooms left on the plant should be cut and thrown away. Plants that have become broken down by high winds or heavy rains should be tied up in shape.

Small Ferns.

The fern spores that were sown in late winter should now be in condition to transplant into flats. It will be difficult to separate the plants yet into individual specimens, but little clumps can be lifted with a toothpick and planted in flats about an inch apart. The flats or boxes should not be deep; about an inch and a half of soil is sufficient. The soil should be composed of two parts live loam and one part leaf mold, with a generous sprinkling of sand and sifted through a fine sieve. The flats should be placed in a moist house that is well shaded, and the walks kept well wet down all through the hot weather. If a nice warm moist temperature is maintained, the plants themselves will not require much watering, only light sprinklings, and they will very rapidly root into the new soil and send forth their fronds. If the grower has not grown his own ferns, it is a good time now to place an order for them with the fern specialists, for they can be purchased at very low prices and they are very easily grown on, and where there are many fern dishes to be filled in the fall, the difference in cost of the young plants lifted from the flats in midsummer and those purchased out of small pots in the fall is considerable; plants that will cost three and four dollars a hundred at that time can now be obtained for one-third of that amount, and a thousand or more of this small stock does not take up much space and will be disposed of before the bench room is needed in winter.

Solanums.

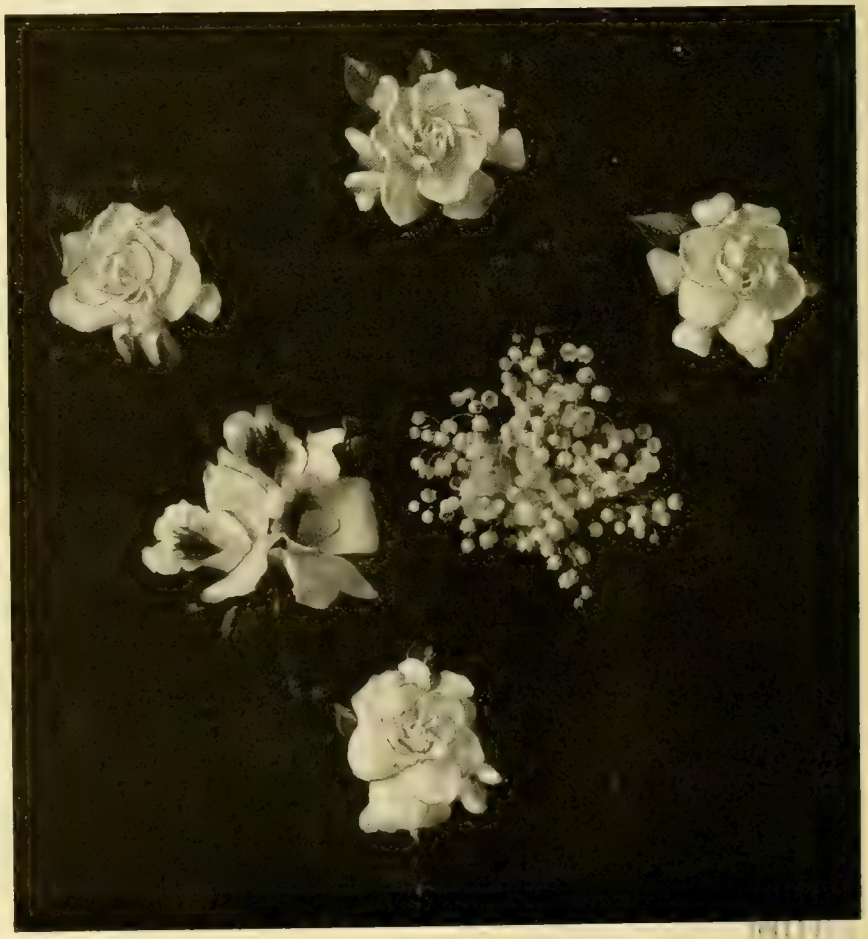
These little Christmas plants should not be allowed to stand around in the hot greenhouses badly pot bound and drying up every day, for they will grow hard and it cannot be expected to obtain a good plant under these conditions. They will stand lots of abuse and do fairly well, and that is the reason probably that they are so often neglected during these busy days. But it is much better to plant them out in the field than to carry them along in this condition. They can be easily handled in this manner, lifting them early in the fall. They will need to be kept pinched back into shape—any strong leading shoots should be cut back when they are soft. They can be planted fairly close together and will need frequent cultivation. If there is no suitable outside location where they can be planted out they can be plunged in a frame and potted up as it becomes necessary, but outside treatment of some kind is far preferable to the greenhouse, which is too warm, unless shaded, and they make better growth and bloom more freely in the bright sunlight.

Primulas.

The young primulas that were sown early should now be in 3-inch pots and be given as cool and airy a location as possible. To get the best growth on these plants, they should never be subjected to great heat, for the species are naturally a cool growing plant on the edges of the woodland in their native state. Outside in a frame with a lath covering is the best place that they can be grown, the pots sunk in the soil even to the rim. In potting these plants they should be placed in the soil deep enough for them to stand firmly; they will not stand deep potting, but many growers do not pot them deep enough, and they frequently get turned over sideways during the watering. They must be watered carefully and preferably with a can with a fine rose. The later sowings will have to be carried on in the houses until they are large enough to be placed outside. They will have to be shaded, but do not shade them heavily enough to cause them to get drawn.

Cinerarias.

The sowing of cinerarias is better done in June than later. Many postpone this until July, but during the extremely hot days of that month it is often difficult to obtain good germination, and the seed pans or boxes will have to be watched carefully or they will become dry and the young seedlings burn off. The soil should be well shaded until the young seedlings show themselves, when the shade should be made lighter. As soon as the plants have one or two well defined leaves, they should be potted in small pots and given a nice airy position near the glass, which should be shaded, but care should be taken that the young stock does not get drawn.



JUNE WEDDING FLOWERS.

Boutonnieres by J. H. Small & Sons, Washington, D. C. and New York.

ASTER PLANTING MACHINES ON VICK'S SEED FARM, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Always bear in mind that the one thing in growing cinerarias to be on the watch for is the aphis. These insects quickly infest these plants and rapidly suck the life out of them. Constant fumigation will keep them in check, but if not attended to regularly it will be time and money thrown away to attempt their culture. Cineraria hybrida is the variety most grown, and these are obtainable in some elegant strains with large high-colored flowers. The cineraria stellata is a much larger and more rapid growing plant which is very showy, but is not so well adapted for house culture when in flower.

Larkspur.

Larkspur or "poison weed" is treated of in a recent bulletin of the department of agriculture, in which it is pointed out that many losses are suffered each year by western ranchmen by reason of the stock eating the weed. There are two groups of these larkspurs on the ranges, the tall and the low varieties. The low larkspurs prefer the hills and rather dry ground, while the tall kinds grow in the gulches and canyons. Among the tall species are Delphinium barbeye and D. cucullatum. The tall larkspur is easily distinguished after it blossoms, but in the early stages is often confused with the geranium and aconite. Of the low larkspurs D. Nelsoni is a type. It grows in considerable abundance in Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Utah. The root is short and tuberous and the plant never exceeds a foot in height. The blossoms are a violet blue. They appear, arranged in a loose raceme, in May.

Transplanting Machines.

The transplanting machine, or planter as it is called in some localities, is nearly as common in certain parts of the country as any piece of modern farm machinery. To those unfamiliar with the work of the machine, especially where the planting of large areas is done, the possibilities of facilitating the work is of interest. The accompanying illustration shows two transplanting machines in use in setting out asters at the seed farm of James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y. The machine, as shown here, is drawn by two horses, the driver seated in front, two men who do the planting occupying seats at the rear that just clear the ground, and a barrel of water, which the machine applies to the roots of the plants as they are placed, is carried amidships.

A wedge shaped plow makes an opening in the soil that is continuous, and the operators place the plants, one at a time, at intervals of 12 to 15 inches. Water is fed into the opening at a point behind the plow, through a tube connecting with the water barrel. As the machine moves along the opening is continuously closed behind it, and the planting is done. Where desired the water supply can be regulated by an automatic arrangement, which releases a certain amount at regular intervals, but in aster planting at close intervals, the flow is continuous. The watering can be regulated in quantity, depending upon the condition of the soil. Under unusually dry conditions the barrel is filled after each round of 1100 feet. The amount of pressure required to compact the soil around the plants, the flow of water, and the depth of planting are all easily regulated.

By the aid of the machine, with close setting (12 to 15 inch intervals in three foot rows) and frequent stops for water, one and one-half acres of asters have been planted in five hours. With large plants, which are more easily handled, three to five acres is considered a days work. Using a wider plow, one designed for potatoes, the machines have been used for planting dahlias, gladioli, lilies, Jerusalem artichoke, montbretias, etc. Setting strawberry and tomato plants are among the uses of the machine and it is especially useful for "leggy" tomato plants, they being held until the machine has covered all but the tops.

Planters like those in the illustration are manufactured by the Madison Plow Co., Madison, Wis.; J. I. Case Plow Works, Racine, Wis.

Irrigation for Florists.

When one plants one or more acres of ground with crops, which to be profitable, should make a rapid and sustained growth, and does this entirely dependent on the average rainfall to supply the necessary moisture, he is taking great chances, for nothing is so uncertain as the weather. Carnations in the field often make but a stunted growth, owing to continued hot dry spells. Asters, gladioli, dahlias and other field flowers require copious rains to produce the best results. Too often by just depending entirely on the weather the result is half a crop or perhaps total failure, owing to long, protracted droughts against which no provision had been made. In certain parts of the United States, particularly in the arid west, no crops can be grown without irrigation, but wonderful results are obtained through this agency.

In all the other parts of the country where rainfalls are comparatively frequent, it has been found advantageous to have a never failing water supply that is available for irrigation whenever necessary.

In 1898, the Johnson & Stokes Co., seedsmen of Philadelphia, Pa., published a volume entitled, "Irrigation by Cheap Modern Methods." This contained much valuable information and showed the splendid results obtained by the trench or ditch system of irrigation, which appeared at that time to be the only plan thought feasible. The water was recommended first to be obtained if possible by gravity, then from wells or dams by the aid of the windmill or the gasoline engine. Repeated examples are cited to show that crops were increased fully 100 per cent by irrigation. A quotation from a United States farmers' bulletin, reads: "It is true that thorough and careful irrigation in most parts of the United States east of the one hundredth meridian, would more than double the average yield per acre of almost all crops now raised."

Of late years, the use of watering systems in the cultivation of field crops has increased at a rapid rate, and various devices have been placed on the market, all of which produce more or less wonderful results, the only drawback being the expense of their installation, which, while considerable, is not at all prohibitive, and soon pays for itself in the good results obtained. The trench or ditch system has given way to elevated perforated pipes and spraying nozzles, through which the water is forced through the air and falls like rain, sinking gradually into the ground. It is claimed that water falling through the air in fine particles, collects ammonia, as do the rain drops, which is of great advantage to the soil. It is claimed that as much can be grown on one acre of irrigated ground as will be obtained from ten acres of land, which depends entirely on the rainfall. Such an intensive system of cultivation saves land and labor and produces this excellent result. To quote from Johnson & Stokes' book, "A Great Secret" is the heading of a paragraph which reads as follows: "The great secret of profitable plant growth is, that there shall be no check, hindrance or setback from start to finish; some things like trees, shrubs and perennials are able to bridge over periods of unfavorable weather, and many vegetables will somehow pull through long droughts. The very best results with vegetables and fruits, however, come from quick, steady, vigorous development, and no matter how good the soil and care may be, nothing can atone for a prolonged scarcity of water during the critical period of ripening or filling out. The right time to irrigate is a matter of no small importance, and the rains frequently fail us just when we need them most."

One of the most practical irrigation systems is that of J. P. Campbell of Jacksonville, Fla., who has invented a spinning nozzle, which works from an upright standard or pipe. These pipes, seven to eight feet in height, are placed about 50 feet apart and alternated in the rows, so that each when in action, covers a circle of 50 feet in diameter. A large main with lateral pipes about 15 inches deep in the ground, carries the water to the standards. From 100 to 150 gallons of water per minute is required for each acre to which application is made simultaneously. To get good results the water should be delivered to the sprinklers at a pressure of not less than 20 to 25 pounds. There must, of course, be a power installation to pump water from its source and through the pipes with the necessary force. With such a system installed, the dry season has no terrors, the ground being kept in any condition of moisture required at the will of the grower.

An apparatus or outfit that would deliver 220 gallons of water per minute, would cover a two-acre plot with ½-inch of water in two hours. The cost of installation per acre without pump or engine is from $125 to $175—depending on the quantity of pipe ordered. The progressive South Jersey truck farmers are fast adopting various systems of irrigation, the largely increased productiveness for nearly all of the crops showing a splendid return on the investment.

The Campbell Turbo-Irrigator is another new Campbell device that covers a very large area and is especially adapted for irrigating vegetables, small fruits, etc., is intended for use where a permanent installation is desired, combined with efficient distribution and minimum expense. It is equipped with tubes of various sizes, and the capacity varies from eight and one-half gallons to 15 gallons per minute, requiring a total run of one and one-half hours to make the quarter-inch application necessary for vegetables, and about three hours for a heavy application of one-half inch for fruit trees. This device weighs about two pounds. The Portable Oscillator Irrigator, also a J. P. Campbell product, while not recommended for general irrigation purposes, can be used to splendid advantage for seed beds, nurseries, etc., and is especially suitable for irrigating large lawns, parks and cemeteries. This machine is 20 feet in length, the distributing pipe is self-oscillating, and within a very short space of time a strip 50 to 60 feet wide, the length of the machine, can be thoroughly wet down. The machine is mounted on wheels and can be easily moved from one position to another.

With scarcely any exception, those who have installed systems of irrigation are well satisfied with the results, which, in most cases, have exceeded their expectations. For the florists or market gardeners who depend on full crops of rapid growth that must be ready for the market at special seasons, irrigation will be found most beneficial, as not only will the crops be in on time, but the productiveness and quality will be very greatly enhanced.

Bedding Plants.

At the April meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club, the feature of the evening was an interesting discussion led by Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., the subject being, "Bedding Plants." In opening the discussion he said:

"Now, when it comes to the general trend of the trade, being a neutral, I hear considerable from all sides as to prices and unfair competition. All competition in this free country of ours is fair; some of it may be mighty embarrassing for the time being, but will eventually straighten itself out. The man who is running his business on business principles, is the one who is going to win out; the man who competes with a cut in prices is injuring the whole trade, but himself more than any one else, and it is only a matter of time until he sees his mistake and either gets out of the business or starts all over again. Being an outsider, it is easy to say what I would do, and possibly if I were in your shoes, I would do exactly as you are doing, but the few remarks here to follow are given in a friendly spirit and I trust will be taken in the same spirit.

"If I were a store man I would sell and handle only high grade stock; that is I would have the quality in the stock so evident that the buyer could not help but notice it, and I would make the price accordingly, with instructions to my clerks that if any objection was raised to the price, the reply would be, 'We want every plant we sell to bring the buyer back to us when in need of another and on this account can not afford to handle any but the best. If you want cheaper stock, we have some at the greenhouses, or you can get it on the markets.' This I would bring out strong in my advertisements and then live up to it. Simply announcing that you have plants and flowers is not advertising; put some ginger in your ads. But the best advertising of all is the wagging tongue of a satisfied customer.

"If I were selling plants on the market or the street, I would get the costs down to the lowest possible point, and then make my selling price high enough to allow a reasonable profit. I would explain to my customers that I could afford to sell a bit lower than the store man and that my plants, with proper care and attention, will give satisfactory results. If I had any second class stock, which came from the continual handling of plants sold by this method, they would be sold as such and my customer given a bit of advice as to how to handle them. If this is followed up carefully and conscientiously your customers would soon become suspicious of the competitor who is cutting prices. Advertising the number of your stand or where you can be found on the street would pay this class of trade and especially if worked out on a good basis.

"Stop kicking, start studying and do not value your own time too low. Give your customers stock that will give them satisfaction. It is the only way to build up a permanent and profitable business and unless you are in the business merely for the pleasure of growing flowers and plants, you can not give your customers satisfaction unless you in return make a reasonable profit for yourself."

In the discussion which followed and which centered on geraniums, J. P. Seibold, who is growing a variety for the wholesale trade, spoke very strongly in favor of American Beauty. H. K. Rohrer said that they found Ricard their best seller, with some half a dozen other varieties called for to a smaller extent. John R. Shreiner found a good market for a general assortment, those who do bedding on a large scale found Nutt, Ricard, Poitevine and some good white in most demand, and R. Nagle thought Scarlet Bedder a winner when better known. Prices were discussed and given up as a conundrum.

M. J. Brinton of Christiana, Pa., read a paper on leaks of the trade, using big business as a comparison, and brought out very forcibly the fact that thousands of dollars worth of stock is reduced in price by the handling it gets with the express companies, and other thousands by the fact that when stock gets plentiful it is improperly handled by the grower and sent in to the markets regardless, with the usual glut conditions at once brought about. He cited examples for the month of April, when the unseasonable weather conditions brought everything to full crop, and said that he had been on the wholesale market when sweet peas were coming in by the ten thousands, and yet it was almost impossible to fill an order for 1,000 with strictly first class stock, due largely to the rush by the grower to get everything into the market somehow and any way.

In the discussion on the handling of flowers and plants by the express companies it was brought out that a large proportion of the loss is due to lack of knowledge, and being a small body ourselves, it was moved and carried that we appeal to the S. A. F. to appoint a committee to work out a set of instructions to express employes for the handling of our products and if practical to give assistance to the individual in getting a claim where flagrant carelessness was shown by the express company.

While the attendance at the meeting was not large, due no doubt that a number of the members were busy, the 18 or 20 members who were present enjoyed a very interesting session. H. E. Hostetter and Alphonso Peters were elected to membership.

The Aquarium Society asked that they be allowed to hold a fish show in conjunction with the flower show this fall, but as we had already decided that it was not advisable to hold a show annually this was deferred for one year. This would not make a bad combination and might be worked out in cities of this size to good advantage.

Lancaster is quite a center for amateur dahlia growers and the club has decided to hold a small dahlia show in conjunction with the Lancaster County fair association. Albert M. Herr, M. S. Hostetter, George Goldbach and H. K. Rohrer were appointed a committee to work the matter out. The fair association has fallen in line handsomely and is arranging to give us a liberal space.

For the next meeting, June 17, Ira Landis of Paradise, Pa., is to read a paper on "Summer Culture of Carnations for Results Next Winter."

Visitor: H. S. Royer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Los Angeles.

D. W. Coolidge, of the Coolidge Rare Plant Gardens of Pasadena, Calif., who makes a specialty of new and rare plants, states that the two new roses, Mad. Eduard Herriott and Willowmere, are the coming roses. He is also in praise of Tauchendschoen, the Blue Rose, the climbing Orleans and the Thornless Beauty. A visit to his nursery soon proves that he is in a class by himself on rare plants. The accompanying photo of Mr. Coolidge is taken on his place standing beside an elegant specimen of Ceanothus thrysiflorus, which is one of the California native plants and should be in everybody's garden.

John S. Armstrong, of the Armstrong Nurseries, Ontario, Calif., states that they have had a very good season, moving olives, avocados and other tropical fruits in addition to the roses and ornamentals. Favorable comment must be added on the cleanliness of the field and the orderly arrangement of specimen plants in the sales yard.

The Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen and the California Association of Nurserymen will hold a joint meeting August 12-14 and then follows the convention of the Society of American Florists, August 17-20. Monday, August 16, 1915, is to be "nurserymens' day."

Roeding & Wood Nursery are preparing a special exhibit of horticultural subjects at the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco for the benefit of the Society of American Florists and other horticultural bodies that are to convene there during August.

G. E. Elster, who for the past five years has been connected with the Roeding & Wood Nursery Company, of Los Angeles, has tendered his resignation to take effect June 1, 1915.

Edwin Lonsdale's condition has materially improved since last reports.

HAL STRAW.

San Francisco Exposition.

A recent visitor to the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco writes as follows regarding it:

"I am so impressed with the wonders of the Panama-Pacific International exposition here in San Francisco, I feel that I would not be doing my duty if I did not let others know some of the wonders I have seen here.

"In the first place, I came to the exposition purely for no other reason than, being in California, I thought it might be worth while to perhaps run up to San Francisco and spend a day at the exposition. I had not the slightest idea of the wonders I was to see. I have been here a week now and I cannot keep away from the exposition. I am exposition mad.

"The exhibits themselves are fine, but it is not the exhibits—it is the wonder and beauty of the buildings and grounds; they are so entrancing.

"I am not enough of a word artist to describe the buildings as they are by day: their wonderful lines and colors, the flowers, the trees, the fountains, and all on land made within the last few years. Think of it, vine-covered buildings, palms, groves of eucalyptus, all kinds of tropical and semi-tropical foliage, planted within a year, but looking as if centuries old.

"If one cannot describe the scene by day, words, especially written words, are not adequate to describe the fairyland at night.

"The Court of Abundance, with its lights and shadows, the Tower of Jewels, the Court of the Universe, Fine Arts Palace, and so I could go on. The mystery, the wonders, the charm of lights and colors are indescribable.

"San Francisco and the people of San Francisco are hosts; they are hosts as no one else could be; they are hosts in the same way they have rebuilt their city, with their whole hearts; they are mighty hosts; no one can resist them, and they act as if to be hospitable and kind was the aim of their existence.

"If I can repay them the splendid time they have given me and the hundreds of thousands of other strangers one little bit by urging all my friends to come and partake of their hospitality, and see their new city and their wonderful fair, I shall be happy; and if this letter can induce any of you to come I shall have made you equally happy and you will be rewarded by the wonders you will see.

"If I followed my own inclination and had the ability, I should do nothing else from now on but sing the praises of San Francisco, the wonderful, its people and its fair."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. James Conlon.

Mrs. James Conlon, wife of the well known Brooklyn, N. Y., florist, who has a store at 46 Smith street, died May 19, aged 48 years. She was born in Athlone, County Westmeath, Ireland, and had lived in Brooklyn 30 years. She is survived by her husband, three daughters, three sons, two sisters and two brothers. She was a member of St. Paul's Roman Catholic church of Brooklyn, where high mass was celebrated on the morning of May 22. Interment was in Holy Cross cemetery.

A. F. F.

Robert Leonard.

Robert Leonard, son of Simeon F. Leonard, president of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, died at the home of his brother, Edward, at Antigo, Wis., May 17, from diabetes, at the age of 30. He was employed at the store up to two years ago, when his condition became so serious that he was obliged to take a rest and his health gradually failed since then. The funeral was held from the family residence at Oak Park, May 20, with interment at Rose Hill cemetery.

Ernest T. Cook.

Ernest T. Cook, ardent advocate of horticulture and writer, former vice-president of the National Rose Society of England, and president for the first two years of the Rose Society of Ontario, of which he was one of the organizers, died suddenly at his residence in Toronto, Ont., recently at the age of 45 years.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Boehner's Flower Shop has opened for business at John and Park streets.

WATERVILLE, ME.—Damage to the extent of $75 was the result of fire at the greenhouse of Allen R. Young, May 10.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed by Sidney A. Saunders, florist; liabilities $6,236, assets $4,711.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—W. M. Cunningham has sold his business at 69 Division avenue to Arthur F. Crabb, of Crabb & Hunter.

THERE is one retail florist in Chicago who handles carnations only when they are specially ordered and will not carry them in stock.

LATE Easter for 1916 (April 23) makes Giganteum the favorite forcing lily for late, while Formosum will be used for mid-season work.

CROTONS in small sizes continue to increase in popularity for basket work and the large over-grown plants are cut up and freely used in designs.

WINDOW BOXES at New York this season contain much more blooming plants than usual, the greenery more subdued. Formerly the entire box was green.

PLAINFIELD, CONN.—The worst May frost ever remembered here occurred on the nineteenth. The mercury dropped to 30 during the night. Beans, corn, grapevines and peach trees were ruined.

HAIL INSURANCE against damage to growing crops is issued by two national mutual societies in Switzerland. One of these in a recent year paid 650,000 francs, approximately $130,000, in claims.

American Rose Society.

MEETING AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

The meeting of the American Rose Society to view the rose garden established at Arlington will take place Wednesday, June 2. The members who can attend are requested to meet at the store of Gude Bros., 1214 F street,, N. W., Washington, at one p. m. sharp on that day and proceed to Arlington.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Cut-Worm Moth Trap.

A remarkably effective method for destroying the cut-worm moth and other insect pests is being used in California. The arrangement consists of a high candle-power electric light, enclosed in a glass globe, directly below which is a pan about four feet in diameter, filled with oil.

The moths, attracted to the light, strike against the glass, are stunned and fall into the oil, from which there is no escape. As many as 7,000 moths have been captured by a single light trap in one night.

Medicinal Plant Cultivation.

A paper by Dr. Fred B. Kilmer, entitled, "Cultivation of Medicinal Plants," read at the 1915 meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers of Medicinal Products is about to be printed by that organization. Of merit in itself, its value is greatly enhanced by a comprehensive bibliology that will give practically all the sources of information to any one desiring to study the subject further. Any agriculturist interested in the cultivation of medicinal plants may obtain a copy, an interesting article, by sending his address and a two cent stamp to C. M. Woodruff, secretary, 475 East Grand boulevard, Detroit, Mich.

Carnation House and Bench Cleaning.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Please inform me of the best method of treating a greenhouse to put it in a satisfactory sanitary state and to destroy all insects before planting carnations.

In changing soil of solid beds for carnations how many inches of top soil is it necessary to remove?

New York. J. W. G.

We give our houses a thorough cleaning out by removing all the old soil from the benches and collect any decayed wood or rubbish of any kind from underneath the benches or from the corners of the building. After the clearing out is attended to, the benches, ends and sides of the house are thoroughly washed down by a strong force from the hose; then, a good lime wash is given the inside of the benches and the end and side walls. This is the best method we know of to make the houses sanitary and sweet.

If the drainage is good in the solid bed five to six inches of top soil is plenty to remove for carnations.

Kerr's Cut Flower Catalogue.

Many florists carrying a plant line specialize on that branch of the business, and catalogues listing varieties and prices are quite common. Kerr, the Florist, Houston, Tex., has reversed the idea, however, and has issued a cut flower catalogue, exploiting cut flowers as the big business, with the plant department as an auxiliary.

The brochure is nicely illustrated with views of the Kerr flower shop, greenhouses, conservatory and suggestions in floral arrangement for various occasions. The price list is most complete, naming practically every flower in demand, the dates when in bloom and giving prices at which sold at Christmas, Easter and at other times.

Washington Park Foreman.

The Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., will hold an examination, June 19, for the vacancy in the position of division park foreman in Washington, D. C., at a salary of $90 per month. Applicants must be between the ages of 25 and 45 years and must have been for not less than five years in charge of men engaged in gardening work, park maintenance and park improvement, and must demonstrate practical knowledge of gardening and a thorough knowledge of care of trees, shrubs, flowers and lawns. A statement is also required as to whether applicant can ride a bicycle.

Scale on Palms.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What is the best remedy for scale on palms and the best way to apply it?

Hawaiian Territory. T. A. H.

A solution of sulpho-tobacco soap, used in the proportion of one ounce of the soap dissolved in one gallon of water and applied with a spray pump would be most likely to give results. Apply once a week for several applications. I take it that these palms are growing outdoors, and may be of considerable size. W. H. T.

LARGE DEMAND FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

The demand for stock for Memorial day is unusually heavy and it appears as if stock will clean up completely before the rush is over, as the writer predicted it would several weeks ago. Memorial day will be celebrated on May 31 this year, which should help the market considerably, and Saturday, Sunday and Monday should all be good days. Nearly all the wholesale houses are refusing orders for carnations and one house alone claims to have turned back orders for over 100,000 during the past week. With carnations in short supply the demand will naturally turn to roses and peonies, and while both seemed to be in good supply the opening of the week, they are not quite as plentiful now, for the shipping trade has started in earnest. Some very fancy stock in all lines was seen in the market this week, especially in roses, and the offerings include choice American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Sunburst, Mrs. George Shawyer, Ophelia, Hadley, Richmond, Milady, Prince de Bulgaria, Killarney Brilliant, Killarney, Killarney Queen, White Killarney, Double White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, My Maryland, Rhea Reid, Lady Hillingdon and Cecile Brunner. Peonies are reaching the market in good condition, but the supply is not as large as in previous years, and while a little home-grown stock is reaching the market the main crop will be about a week late this year. Cape Jasmine are not arriving in any great quantities yet, and the supply of Double White narcissus will not be as heavy as last season. Orchids are in larger supply, but are cleaning up nicely. Home-grown gardenias are none too plentiful. Lily of the valley is moving well and the same holds good for sweet peas, which are bringing very satisfactory prices. Gladioli, lilies, daisies, pansies and other miscellaneous stock is to be had, but is moving quite well, as are snapdragons, which are in much shorter supply than they were last week. Taken all in all, the wholesale florists seem to be pretty well satisfied with the orders that have been booked and nearly everyone agrees that it appears as if the Memorial day business this year will be much more satisfactory than it was in 1914. The florists that placed their orders well in advance, as they were advised to do, played safe, and in nearly all instances will be pretty well taken care of. The majority of the dealers were careful not to book too many orders and advised those to that effect who could not be taken care of, so as to give them every opportunity to look elsewhere for their supply.

Home-Grown Peonies

Sweet Peas - Roses - Carnations - Lilies
Candytuft - Yellow Daisies
Greens of all kinds.

NOTES.

Miss Martha G. Gunterberg, the popular young wholesale florist, played the leading role in "The Divorce," which was presented last Sunday afternoon and evening by St. Francis' Dramatic Club at St. Alphonsus Athenaeum, Lincoln and Southport avenues, in honor of the fiftieth jubilee of Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum. Her photograph appeared in the Saturday, May 22, edition of the Herald and occupied about an 8-inch, double column space.

2,000,000 Feet of Modern Glass

C. Frauenfelder, 3343 West Madison street, is having a very busy season with a brisk demand for window boxes and bedding plants. The cold weather the past week has kept things back some in the landscape department, according to Chas. Werner, the proprietor's chief lieutenant, who has charge of this work. Mr. Werner and his men have just finished placing the grounds in condition adjoining Roger C. Sullivan's new home in Hinsdale, which was quite a nice order, and kept them busy for several days.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting quite heavily in Mrs. Chas. Russell roses right now and five houses, 38x300 feet, are in good crop and is a beautiful sight to see. Mr. Washburn speaks very highly of the rose Mrs. George Shawyer, which is just coming into its own, and says that this variety is in good demand with the local buyers and cleans up quicker than any other on their list. A good supply of Ophelia is now reaching the store, and the receipts of yellow roses are unusually large now.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. are supplying their trade with fancy roses from the Pyfer & Olsem range at Wilmette, where everything is in good crop for Memorial day. Sweet peas of fine quality are in good supply at this store this week. Mr. Pyfer says that the demand for stock for Memorial day is surprisingly large this year and that an unusually large number of orders for carnations have been refused the past week.

At Peter Reinberg's store the daily shipments of stock include a good supply of sweet peas, which are being grown quite extensively this year. Business has been very brisk this week at this house and everything so far points to a most satisfactory Memorial day trade. Killarney, My Maryland and Richmond roses are arriving in good supply now.

CHICAGO FLOWER GROWERS' ASSOCIATION

Wholesale Growers of Cut Flowers and Plants

176 North Michigan Ave., L. D. Phone, Randolph 5449. Chicago

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is featuring a large quantity of peonies this week in addition to its regular line of stock. Paul Klingsporn acknowledges a pleasant visit on May 25 from his old friend, I. Rosnosky, representing Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

At J. A. Budlong's store the shipping trade is very brisk for Memorial day and the force is working like bees to get all the orders out on time. Peonies and roses are both selling well, and it is impossible to supply anywhere near the demand for carnations.

A. Bauman, of Niles Centre, has placed an order with A. Dietsch Co. for three new houses, 25x200 feet, which will be devoted exclusively to the growing of carnations.

C. Clemenson, 7801 South Shore avenue, does a little wholesale business in plants occasionally and now has to offer a good stock of hardy myrtle.

USE Budlong's Blue Ribbon Valley.

Frank Schramm will grow carnations in his two new Foley greenhouses, 80x225 feet, at Crystal Lake, the first year, which will be followed by roses.

Hoerber Bros. are having their share of the Memorial day business and stock is cleaning up quickly at their store each day.

Miller & Musser are showing a good supply of the rose Minnetonka at their establishment this week.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a very good trade on May 23 when the receipts for the half day that the store was open were nearly as large as those of a normal day. The shipping trade is very good at this house this week, but Wm. Johnson, who has charge of the shipping department, is equal to the occasion and the orders cannot come too fast to suit him. American Beauty roses are arriving in larger quantities at this house now and are one of the chief offerings this week.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a large supply of choice Sunburst roses this week in addition to its regular line of stock, and is having a brisk demand for same. Business is very good at this house and it appears as if the Memorial day trade this year will be larger than ever, for they are in heavy crop with both roses and carnations. N. J. Wietor's son Harry, who is confined to the Evanston hospital with scarlet fever, is doing nicely and will be discharged soon.

Zech & Mann are receiving a large quantity of fancy spring blooming sweet peas which are in good demand and bringing good prices. Allie Zech, Fred Ottenbacher and Matt Mann called on several of their growers in Niles Centre on May 23 to get a line on stock for Memorial day. With the exception of carnations, everything appeared to be in fairly good supply and many orders have been refused for this item during the past week.

The John Kruchten Co. is occupying the old Kyle & Forester store and is featuring a fancy grade of Mrs. Chas. Russell and American Beauty roses. Archie Spencer is making the old Kruchten store his headquarters and where he will be located in the future.

H. Van Gelder says that the firm of Percy Jones never had as many orders for cut flowers for Memorial day as it did this year. Carnations as usual are the principal offerings at this store, and the supply this week has been unusually good.

Mike Seganos, of Hammond, Ind., was in the city this week buying stock for his Memorial day trade. He reports business as good and is a firm believer in advertising and is using considerable space in the papers there.

H. B. Kennicott, president of Kennicott Bros. Co., has returned from a business trip to Cleveland, O., and Max Ringier, secretary of the same firm, is back from a similar mission to Des Moines, Ia.

The Raedlein Basket Co. has had an unusually brisk demand for baskets the past few days, especially for bridal staff baskets, which is one of their leaders for the month of weddings.

Kyle & Foerster are now located in their new store on the main floor of the Atlas building, where they are better situated than ever to handle their increasing business.

W. H. Troyer, of Plymouth, Ind., was a visitor at Erne & Klingel's store this week. He reports business as good and is looking forward to a good Memorial day trade.

Chas. Moravek, 3226 Ogden avenue, has remodeled the interior of his store and everything is now in tip-top shape for a banner Memorial day trade.

Robert Newcomb, one of Vaughan's Seed Store's hustling traveling representatives, is back from a western trip, feeling as fine as ever.

Emil Blameuser, of Niles Center, has sold his rose range to a vegetable growing concern, who will take possession about July 1.

The next regular meeting of the Chicago Florist' Club will be held at the Hotel Bismarck, Thursday, June 10, at 8 p. m.

L. R. Bohannon, of the the Bohannon Floral Co., has returned from a visit to St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.

A. F. Longren, one of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s traveling representatives, is back from a successful business trip.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. has received an order from Wm. Wiechtendahl, of Maywood, for the Kroeschell threaded tube heating system, to be installed in his new Dietsch house, 27.4x118 feet. This is the fourth order that Kroeschell Bros. Co. has received of this kind and reports from the users are that the threaded tube system is giving very satisfactory results. Fred Lautenschlager still likes the florist business and after he stops selling boilers for the day he waters the plants in his window boxes, of which he has 34 running feet at his home at 3500 North Herndon street. He thinks that fringed petunias are about as good a plant as there is for filling boxes at present, and one cannot help but agree with him after he sees what splendid condition his plants are in.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a fine line of stock for Memorial day, which is selling briskly at the store each day. Some fancy American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are arriving in large supply, but are selling readily at good prices. Everything is going along nicely at Plant A, where Tony Gabel is now in charge of the carnation range, and Math. Yehl, assisted by his brother, Tom, is in charge of the roses. Tom Conlon is looking after affairs in the plant department, and H. M. Oeser is still on deck in the palm range. A large importation of palms arrived last week, and three more are due to arrive at almost any moment now.

Wm. Mailander, of Morton Grove, has received word from Germany that his two nephews, Hans and Herbert Mailander, were killed in recent battles, one on the French frontier and the other in the Carpathian mountains. The young men assisted their father in the florist business at Breslau before the war.

John Welsh, 4910 North Hoyne avenue, has found business fairly good the past season, especially in the bedding plant line, and while trade has slackened up a trifle during the recent cold spell, he expects to experience no difficulty in moving what stock he still has to offer at retail.

Harry Conn says that business has been good at the Englewood Flower Shop, 703 West Sixty-third street, and a nice trade is gradually being established. This store, which was equipped by Buchbinder Bros., is one of the neatest and prettiest in the city.

W. J. Ritterskamp, manager of the Princeton Gardens, Princeton, Ind., visited several of the large greenhouse establishments here this week and was most favorably impressed with the rose Mrs. Chas. Russell, as it is grown for the local market.

Emil Jehlik, 1825 South Ashland avenue, says that business has been very good the past few weeks as far as the demand for bedding plants was concerned, but that cut flowers have not moved any too well.

The Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. was awarded the contract for an extensive addition to the Ohio State University plant at Columbus, last week.

Weiland & Risch are starting to cut from their spring crop of sweet peas and are now showing nice stock in this line at their store.

O. A. Tonner is supplying her trade with a fancy grade of home-grown peonies.

Chicago Fall Show.

Plans are in progress for a big fall exhibition to be held at Chicago next November. Committees representing the Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club met May 20, August Poehlmann, Carl Cropp, Arnold Ringier, A. Henderson, Geo. Asmus and N. Miller in attendance. A guarantee fund of $10,000 is suggested and the Coliseum and the Municipal Pier building have been mentioned as suitable places for the show. It is stated that the Association of Commerce will assist in making this the Chicago event of 1915 and the largest and best floral exhibition ever held in this city.

BERLIN, ONT.—N. M. Critchison, who has conducted a flower shop at Walkerton, Ont. for several years has taken the management of the Berlin Floral Co., this city.

CRESTON, IA.—Carl Gehrecke, proprietor of the Creston Greenhouses & Floral Co., was awarded contracts to plant flower beds at the Elks' club and court house grounds.

MEMORIAL DAY BUYING HEAVY.

The local trade is expecting a good business for Memorial day. Outdoor spring flowers, generally, will be done for and the people, to a large extent, will have to depend on the florist and their greenhouse flowers. Orders placed with the wholesalers have been very heavy. At the time of this writing business is fair. The call for stock is steady, but not as large as it might be. Shipping business is good. Roses are in a good supply and the receipts include excellent offerings in all the standard varieties as well as the newer ones. Carnations are not as plentiful as they were. Peony receipts take care of all present requirements and will probably be able to care for all for Memorial day. Other offerings include a good supply of lilies, lily of the valley, orchids, gladioli, cornflower and marguerites.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell has been having excellent supplies of the new Radiance, Ophelia, Hillingdon and Ward roses.

H. Greensmith brought a fine lot of forced cactus dahlias into L. H. Kyrk's store last week.

E. G. Gillett's wire-working force, for the first time in several months, has about caught up with orders for wire baskets.

Geo. Klother is cutting some excellent sweet williams and outdoor Jack roses. They find a fairly good market.

Visitors: Joseph Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. L. A. Fennell, Cynthiana, Ky.; J. Donaldson of the Willowdeen nurseries, Sparta, Ky.; N. Kiger and wife, Marietta, O.; Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa. H.

OUT-DOOR STOCK INFLUENCES MARKET.

The market the past week was influenced greatly by the weather and outdoor stock. Rains were general. Peonies have become more plentiful and sweet peas show a surplus. Outdoor roses are seen everywhere, and daisies are plentiful and cheap. Some good Mrs. Chas. Russell and Minnetonka roses are noted, a great deal of the general rose stock coming in open and soft. Fancy carnations are limited but much inferior stock is on hand. Good smilax is scarce. Hardy ferns are in and $2 per 1,000 is asked. Sprengeri and plumosus are selling well. The prospects for Memorial day are scarcity in fancy stock.

NOTES.

HEAVY RECEIPTS GLUT MARKET.

There is considerable complaint in the wholesale market, as stock is not moving as fast as it should, but this, from the writer's viewpoint, comes from over-production just at this time of the year. It seems as if every grower in this vicinity is trying to show how large a shipment he can send to the local market. Peonies, which are over-plentiful just now, are taking the place of all other flowers and can be had at from $2 to $4 for the very finest of varieties. Extra fine gladioli, such as America and Northern Light, bring $6 to $8 per hundred. Roses of all kinds, such as Killarney, Radiance, Hillingdon, Sunburst, Hadley, Richmond, Shawyer, Aaron Ward, Carnot, My Maryland and Mock, can be had at from $2 to $8 for fancy per hundred. Carnations, sweet peas, snapdragons and daisies, both colors, are plentiful and can be had at buyer's prices.

BUSINESS SHOWS BETTER TONE.

Although business during the first three days of the past week was very quiet, it took a decided change for the better during the last half. The supply in nearly every line has perceptibly shortened as growers are holding back for Memorial day business. From all reports, it seems as though there would not be such an abundance of flowers as there was last year and it is hoped that prices will continue strong. Thousands of artificial wreaths have been prepared by the retailers and the sale on them is being pushed in an effort to cut the high prices on cut flowers for the occasion. It looks, though, as if the retailers were overdoing their wreath business. The temporary stores which have sprung up all over the city have stocked heavily and nearly all the larger stores have doubled the amount for this season. Perhaps after wreaths become so common, the public will demand the real thing, rather than these paper imitations.

NOTES.

A bowling match between the Boston Flower Exchange and The Boston Co-operative Flower Market was held May 20. The boys from the co-operative market won by a margin of 25 pins. The highest individual average for the three strings was rolled by A. Harrington, employed by W. H. Elliot, his total being 302.

The pink Supreme carnations from J. H. Leach & Son, of North Easton, Mass., are coming very fine just now. This variety, which was originated by them, seems to improve rather than depreciate in color and size under the hot sun. They will have a good cut of assorted carnations for May 30.

McAlpin & McDonald at 250 Devonshire street have built a new refrigerator 40 feet in length. They have also added a new automobile to their delivery service. They are receiving an especially fine cut of carnations from Frank Putnam, of Tewksbury.

Joseph Kopelman, of Providence, R. I., reports business in his vicinity to be very good. He is cutting from his range in East Providence, carnations, callas, stocks and gladioli, all of which are used at the wholesole house on Eddy street.

The Gardeners' and Florists' club had a "field day" at the Arnold Arboretum, May 21. There were 65 in the party and a most enjoyable and interesting day was spent.

The Mishawum Flower Co., of Woburn, has a fine crop of pink spiræas for the holiday trade. Their entire plant will be devoted to cucumbers after May 30.

The stork visited the home of John Cummings in Woburn, with an eight-pound boy, May 18. His friends at the markets join in offering their congratulations.

Some of the finest Spencer sweet peas seen are being cut by J. W. Simpson, of Woburn. He also has a good crop of yellow marguerites.

John Davie, of Wakefield, is cutting some of the finest ixias coming to the city. He also has a nice lot of Blanche Ferry sweet peas.

John R. Shield has a good crop of very fine feverfew for Memorial day. His Spencer sweet peas are of very high quality.

MEMORIAL DAY SHORTAGE ANTICIPATED.

There has been a splendid demand for cut flowers the past week and the stock has been in excellent shape to meet the call. Wedding, pre-nuptial parties, commencements and funeral work constitute the heavy demand and the improvement in the weather conditions has opened up the season for bedding plants. Flowers for Memorial day will in all probability be scarce. Out-of-door peonies are in the market, but only in small quantities and it is feared that unless warmer temperatures prevail, they will be at a premium. German iris is on the market and miniature gladioli have made their appearance and find much public favor.

AMPLE MEMORIAL DAY SUPPLY PREDICTED.

A good amount of muchly needed and appreciated rain fell at the end of the week, but was more or less detrimental to transient business, however. It is exactly what the peony growers wanted, in order to get their crops in for Memorial day, but even at that, there are many who will not be able to cut any flowers at all for this day. But, on summing it up, the wholesalers predict that there will be enough to supply all needs, and look for one of the best years ever in the line of peonies. Carnations are very scarce at the present time and, most probably, will be the same from now until the end of the season, which, by the way, is not so far off. Roses are still plentiful, and heavy crops of Kaiserins are being disposed of daily. The sales of American Beauties have been poor, but, at the last minute, seem to have taken a brace, and are moving a little better now. Lilies are very plentiful, and the market is well supplied with outside lily of the valley and gladioli from the Virginia fields. Some of them are being shipped from as far as Florida, but the long journey is a little too much for them. Sweet peas still appear, although their season is officially over. The market is overstocked greatly on green goods. The plantsmen are all very busy, of course, and the prices realized on pot stock is comparativley low this year. But, in the long run, there is not much money in this end of the business, and the retailer barely gets enough in return to pay for his work and delivery.

NOTES.

The big subject around the downtown flower markets is the wedding of Abe Krongold, proprietor of the Victoria Flower Shop, which took place Sunday evening at the home of the bride, formerly Miss Lena Simon, of Locust street. After much merry-making they eluded their friends and made away to their new home in Beechview. The trade extends hearty congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Krongold.

De Forest Ludwig, of the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., writes from the heart of the Canadian Rockies that he will be on his way back home in a week, after having spent three wonderful months throughout the Pacific coast. The firm is cutting a heavy crop of lilies at Mars. Business is good, especially in artificial floral pieces, and this firm probably does more of this work than any of the other retailers in the city.

Texas State Florists' Association.

As announced in the columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST of May 15, the convention of the Texas State Florists' Association, will be held at Ft. Worth, July 6-7, and in extending a cordial invitation to florists in general to attend. R. C. Kerr, president of the Texas state organization, has addressed the following to presidents of different southern societies:

"You have probably heard of our coming state convention to be held in Ft. Worth July 6-7. The florists of Texas especially urge that ..... which I understand is composed of all the florists of the city, attend this convention. It is not our intention to make this just a state affair, as we are inviting the florists of the entire south to be with us.

"Will you be so kind as to see that every member of the organization gets a copy of this invitation? If it will not be too much trouble, please send me a complete list of the members of the society, and I will try to get in direct touch with them also. Take advantage of this opportunity and see the good that is being derived from our Texas organization."

President Kerr also states that in addition to the programme published in these columns May 15, page 873, additional papers in the "Round Table Discussion," scheduled for the first day, July 6, will be given as follows:

"Carnations as a Profitable Crop in Texas"—Led by Bird Forrest, Waxahachie, assisted by H. Kaden, Gainesville, and E. O. Wessinger, Beaumont.

"How to Treat Our Competitors"—Led by H. O. Hannah, Sherman, assisted by J. E. McAdams, Ft. Worth, and H. Kuhlmann, Jr., Houston.

"The Retail Flower Store and its Management—Some Methods of Saving Time and Material"—Led by H. Greve, Dallas, assisted by F. C. Suchy, San Antonio and Chas. Alff, Jr., Austin.

"Why Woman Is Indispensible in the Florist Business"—Led by Mrs. Annie Brigance Wolfe, Waco, joined by all ladies present.

"Florists as Advertisers and Bookkeepers"—Led by R. C. Kerr, Houston, assisted by A. F. Koehle, Sherman.

NORWICH, CONN.—William B. Foster has sold his greenhouse business to Louis Rankin.

NEWTON FALLS, O.—The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. will add another greenhouse to its range here this summer.

JOPLIN, MO.—H. A. Hall, florist, has been awarded a contract for 6,000 plants to be set out in Fairview cemetery in June.

OWOSSO, MICH.—The Owosso Floral Co. will erect a two-story brick building, 25x65 feet, at Main and Ball streets, replacing its former store.

WEATHER CONDITIONS HARD ON STOCK

The extremes of weather usual with us at this season have alternated with the days of the past week. This is hard on the roses and much of the stock shows signs of mildew. For all the business there is, however, a surplus exists in many lines. Peonies are coming in fast and will apparently be at their height about Memorial day. The quality promises to be very fine and prices are about the same as last season. Sweet peas are off, the inside crops being about over, with the outside stock not yet in evidence. Carnations appear not overly plentiful and prices will hold stiff until after Memorial day.

NOTES.

Many claims have been made for the newer sorts of roses. Mrs. Shawyer, which showed up well last fall and during the early winter, is now a poor color and very soft. Mrs. Ward is a winner. Sunburst is also good, but pales out very soon, only the tight buds holding the beautiful orange or coppery tint that is so admired. The Killarney, while it develops rather rapidly at this time, holds its wonderful color to the very last; it is not a "has been" or even open to this suspicion, and the grower who discards it for an untried introduction may live to regret his action. Little Sweetheart has made a place for itself and is sure to be found in next year's list. Killarney Brilliant is just now very near a red, and is called by some the red Killarney.

The annual flower market held under society auspices in Rittenhouse square was a great success. Its proceeds being for charity, the trade was expected to chip in and did so liberally. H. H. Battles donated 1,000 4-inch geraniums; others gave window boxes, pot plants, baskets of cut flowers and loose flowers. Edward Reiger, 267 South Twentieth street, captured the first prize of $5.00 for the best window box, and the Pansy Shop, the second. A riot of color was the theme, the flower pots and tubs being painted in solid reds, blues, green, yellow with contrasting kinds of other colors. Awnings over the booths were very gay as were the dresses of the society ladies who acted as salesladies.

A grower, in speaking of Spencer sweet peas, claims that there is but one strain of the Spencer, and wonders how the seedsman can get the wonderful difference in the price of the seed of the summer and so-called winter forcing varieties. The seed is raised in the Lompoc region of California, flowers and ripens all together, and the summer sorts would do just as well inside, taking the difference in the weather conditions and sunshine of the winter, as they do in the open air. Who knows differently, and why?

Edward Reid's total of white carnations for Mother's day week was something over 106,000. We have no doubt that a bunch of the finest found its way to the desk of Miss Anna Jarvis as a tribute to the founder of this day, and a beautiful custom which has so benefitted the florist's business.

The Robt. Craig Co. is having wonderful run on crotons and high colored dracænas. The stock is very large, but is cleaned up every season, the demand seeming, in spite of wars and other obstacles, to be ever on the increase.

The Leo Niessen Co. is well prepared for Memorial day, having the largest stock of peonies coming they have ever handled. Carnations will also be a feature.

Berger Bros. are there with a fine line of gladioli and peonies for the coming week. Choice lily of the valley and Maryland roses are also a feature.

The Jos. Heacock Co. is cutting a heavy crop of Killarneys which are free from mildew and a splendid color. Mrs. Ward is also a feature.

The M. Rice Co. are busy with June wedding accessories. There is a great demand for their shepherd's crooks.

Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

At the next monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, June 1, the subject of "Automobile Delivery" will be treated in a paper to be read by F. W. Beirn, of the White Company, Philadelphia. Some interesting facts regarding the efficiency, operating costs and general uses of motors in the delivery of floral products will be furnished.

ST. CATHARINES, ONT.—Local florists report the best Mothers' day demand since its inception, with great difficulty to supply call for carnations. Indications are for a splendid spring business.

INDEPENDENCE, KANS.—W. H. Barnes, former state secretary of horticulture, threw the first spadeful of soil from the $40,000 city hall, May 18. Mr. Barnes was one of the early settlers of this county.

LANSDOWNE, PA.—At the flower show to be given here June 5, under the auspices of the Natural History club, of which George L. Pennock is president, three medals offered by the American Rose Society are included in the prize schedule. Samuel S. Pennock, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, has over 200 varieties of outdoor roses growing on his home grounds here.

BACKWARD WEATHER RETARDS TRADE.

At this writing "balmy spring" has not arrived. If the few warm days in April raised high hopes in the breasts of horticulturists, agriculturists or ice cream vendors, said high hopes have been dashed. We now, in this country, have so many days that we are expected to observe or celebrate that it is hard for a busy man to keep track of all of them, but if our memory does not fail us, it was May 15 that was fixed for "straw hat day." Now, it is a fact that since that date the weather has been getting worse and worse, and it looks odd to see many men going about in straw hats and winter overcoats. The past week opened very cool and continued cool. On the morning of May 21 rain began to fall and the day was thoroughly disagreeable. The supply of stock has been considerably reduced, notably in carnations and roses. In times past it would have been said that indications point to a short supply of these stocks, particularly carnations, for Memorial day. However, this market draws its supply from such a wide field that no accurate forecast can be made. Carnations are not plentiful and prices are advancing, but if a week of sunshine follows this cold spell, conditions may greatly change. Special American Beauty roses remained steady at $25 per 100 throughout the week. On May 20 there was some talk of $30, but if a few reached that figure the price dropped back to $25 on May 21. If the retail business was good, stock would go up with a jump, but as it is, if a stock goes up one day it is liable to go down the next. Orchids and gardenias remain very cheap. We have noted placards in retail stores offering the "best" cattleyas for 50 cents each. Whether they were the best or not, the best can be bought, wholesale, for 30 cents and 35 cents each, or at that rate. The orchid flowering sweet peas seem to be doing fairly well, but short and inferior stock is hard to move. We may now say good-bye to the jonquils and tulips, but the peonies are well started and it will only take a week of warm weather to bring them in great volume. There is quite a stock of outdoor lily of the valley on the market, selling cheap. There is an average supply of lilies and prices are about the same as our quotation of last week. To sum up prospects for Memorial day, no strong demand is expected from local retailers, but neighboring cities and towns may buy heavily in this market.

May 22.—The day brought a disappointment. Bad as business may be throughout the week a clean-up is expected on Saturday. In the New York Cut Flower Exchange, the early morning market, there was considerable activity, and the New York Cut Flower Co. opened under favorable conditions. About noon, rain began to fall and by 2 p. m. it was a deluge. From that time on practically everything was tied up.

May 24.—The market is quiet. Carnations are moving upward in price, $4 per 100 being now paid for the best. Other stocks remain about the same. There is a marked increase in the supply of peonies.

NOTES.

The news of a shocking tragedy comes from Catskill, this state. On May 23 Henry Lang, a florist, shot and killed Ruth Hammer, aged 13, and Ida Beach, aged 14 years. Lang then went to his boarding house, locked himself in his room and put a bullet through his own heart. It is stated that Lang was formerly in business in Albany and that he never drank and was never seen in the company of women, but was believed to be eccentric. It is now believed that he had an insane infatuation for Ruth Hammer. He had sent her many flowers and several of her photographs were found in his room, which it is believed he had taken. As he was over thirty years old, no notice was taken of these attentions to the child, it being supposed they were merely friendly acts. The girls were out for a walk when he overtook them. What he said will never be known, but both started to run. It was then he fired, first killing Ida Beach and then Ruth Hammer.

J. Ebb Weir & Co., Inc., Brooklyn, successors to James Weir, Jr. & Son, have a very ornamental conservatory and retail store opposite the main entrance to Greenwood cemetery. There are also several houses for plant growing at that place. Their largest glass area is on Fort Hamilton avenue on the opposite side of the cemetery, where they have 42 medium sized houses, their total glass area being about 100,000 square feet. At the Fort Hamilton avenue range they have a great stock of finely flowered geraniums and other plants, nearly all of which will be used in cemetery work. They also manage the cemetery service of the Charles Krombach estate. The firm of J. Ebb Weir and Son have a range of 35,000 square feet at Jamesport. L. I., N. Y.

Frank Manker, Gravesend and Fort Hamilton avenues, has recently taken his two sons, Frank, Jr., and Philip, into partnership, the firm name being Frank Manker & Sons. They have a fine range of nearly 50,000 square feet of glass, and a store. Several new houses have been erected in recent years, the construction being iron frame and concrete walls. They grow both cut flowers and bedding plants, having lilies coming on throughout the year. They also have a large cemetery business.

We copy the following interesting horticultural item from the "Gotham Weekly Gazette" (in New York Tribune):

"New Rochelle Nubbins."

"The Pk. dept. was recipient this wk. of a rare cactus plant from Charley Kammermeyer, the city clerk, which was placed at the entrance to Hud Pk. The cactus is 55 yrs. old & has been named after Mr. Kammembeyer's twins, Alberta & Marion."

John Cuff, Sr., father of John Cuff, the well known retail florist of 428 east 138th St., died at Lincoln Park, N. Y., May 21, aged 84 years. Mr. Cuff was a native of England and came to New York in 1841. He followed his trade, that of a hatter, in this city for many years. Since his retirement from business he occasionally visited here, and was fond of comparing conditions in this city with what they were when he first arrived.

John Condon is another of the Greenwood cemetery florists who has an extensive range, and does a large business. He too, has a store and range on Fifth avenue and another on Fort Hamilton avenue. At the latter range we found an old friend, and capable foreman, in the person of Fred H. Wilshire, who is known to many who attend conventions and flower shows.

Isaac Abrams, who has a good store at 123 Seventh avenue, Brooklyn, makes a specialty of fine window decorations, his latest being well flowered hydrangeas, daisies and cut orchids. Isaac says he has bought a new automobile and with Mrs. Abrams and S. Masur and Mrs. Masur will travel by that conveyance to the Panama-Pacific exposition, but some of the boys think he is joking.

Frank Supplee, manager of the retail store of Thomas Young, Jr., had an addition to his family May 20, a boy. He now has three girls and two boys. No race suicide in that family.

J. C. Vaughan, who has been spending a week at Vaughan's Seed Store in this city, visited the wholesale district May 22.

Guttman & Raynor, Inc., in addition to other good stock, are offering fine centaureas.

MEMORIAL DAY PROSPECTS PROMISING.

Bedding business is extra good this season. Some florists are swamped with orders and geraniums and other bedding stock are growing scarce. Trade in a general way is quite satisfactory. With anything like reasonable weather there will be a great supply of peonies for Memorial day. Orders already placed by consumers indicate a heavy demand, in spite of the outdoor competition. The output of local greenhouses and shipments from near-by surrounding points will be equal to demand, it is believed, without drawing very heavily upon western growers. The prevailing price asked for Memorial day delivery of peonies is $1 per dozen, but some very choice stock will be held at $1.25 and $1.50. Carnations are of good yield, but not too plentiful to force down prices. They are bringing 75 cents per dozen. Lilies are also available in free quantities. There is much activity in magnolia, galax and French moss wreaths for cemetery purposes. Some of the florists are giving much attention to baskets as a Memorial day feature this year.

NOTES.

For the past week the retail seed and cut flower department of the Livingston Seed Company has had a very striking window, showing the importance of its mail order seed business. The entire space is devoted to cancelled envelopes, received from eighteen different countries of the world, with orders inclosed for seeds. A large portion of the envelops are tied in packets. A tape reaches from each packet to a map, a thumb-tack fastening the other end of the tape to the country on the map from which the envelopes in the packet were mailed. This not only shows the wide distribution of the responses to the company's mail order activities, but also shows the relative importance in volume of correspondence with respect to each country. Prizes are offered for the retail customers at the store who come nearest to guessing the total number of envelopes in the window.

The possibilities of co-operative window displays on the part of florists in connection with other lines of business is shown by an attractive porch furniture window, put on by a leading furniture store, in which the porch itself appears, with appropriate flowers and greenery. The florist supplying the same is given credit by placards, the window serving as an advertisement for both the furniture man and the florist.

Frank Miller, one of the members of the Columbus Floral Company, wholesale growers, who has been in a sanitarium in the east, has returned to his home at Valley Crossing, just south of town, but is still confined to his bed.

T. J. Ludwig has been attracting attention with special sales of small baskets and contents, one price covering both, displayed in large variety in his show window. C. C. J.

FUNERAL WORK KEEPS TRADE BUSY.

The weather is cold and the supply of stock limited, with the exception of some varieties of roses, lily of the valley, snapdragons and daisies. Outdoor stock has been retarded by the cold. Lilacs have been only fair, while peonies are very scarce for home grown, and not many being sent in.

The first part of the past week was an unusually busy one for some of the florists. The death of S. H. Knox, vice-president of the F. H. Woolworth syndicate, and a man of world-wide acquaintance, naturally called for an unusual number of flowers and the richest and most elaborate lot of flowers ever used at a funeral in Buffalo were handled on this occasion, and were used in every conceivable way, but at no time was a gaudy design or any monstrosity sent out; the most artistic arrangement, the best flowers being used and the finest work produced. Loose flowers were more in evidence than the designs, and these were all sent to the different hospitals —only the designs being sent to the cemetary. Some orders were sent from other cities, but in nearly every instance commissions were telegraphed and filled by the Buffalo florists, Palmer & Son, S. A. Anderson, Wm. Scott Co., and L. H. Neubeck all having a number of orders. All flowers, and everything pertaining to flowers at the funeral were under the charge of S. A. Anderson.

Thirty-Third annual meeting, San Francisco, Calif., June 22-24, 1915.

DIRECTORS of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League held a meeting at New York May 26.

VERSEILLES, FRANCE.—George Truffaut's publication, "Jardinage," has been discontinued, owing to the general mobilization.

RAINY cool weather continues and is very favorable for onion sets in the Chicago district. Counter trade is, however, badly handicapped by it.

LOMPOC, CALIF. — Anton Zvolanek writes that green aphis prevails broadly over California and will have a bad effect on the yield of sweet pea seed.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Local seedsmen report the demand for field seeds this spring has been exceptionally good, due probably to a reduction in the planting of cotton.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. — W. Atlee Burpee & Co. announce that employes of their mail order departments will have a full day's holiday on Saturdays during July and August.

THE Henry Fish Seed Co. extends a cordial invitation to members of the American Seed Trade Association and all others interested in beans to call at the firm's Carpinteria establishment while in California.

THE Japanese steamer Chiyo Maru, with Robert Fulton on board, reported on fire two days out from Yokohama in last week's issue, arrived at that Japanese port safe, the fire having been confined to a few bales of cotton.

VISITED CHICAGO: John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., returning from California; A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; A. T. Ferrell, of A. T. Ferrell & Co., Saginaw, Mich.; D. P. Durban, manager Amzi Godden Seed & Grain Co., Birmingham, Ala.

CHICAGO.—Prices for grass seed on the Board of Trade May 26 were as follows: Timothy, $5.25 to $6.75 per 100 pounds.—Albert A. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., has returned from Indianapolis, Ind., where he attended the semi-annual meeting of the State Canners' Association, May 20-21.—S. F. Leonard and family have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their son, Robert, who died May 17.—J. C. Vaughan has returned from the east.

FRENCH BULBS. — The preliminary prices made by the French growers' syndicate are not thought to be such as will prevail later, being nearly as high as last year, in the face of a good crop prospect. Buyers of large lots will, it is thought, await the harvest. The American demand is said to be off 20 to 30 per cent. The suggestion is made that grading will be more general than before, possibly only one grade of Paper White narcissus and only two grades of white Roman hyacinths. Freesias will surely be lower.

The Late William Horatio Grenell.

William Horatio Grenell, of Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., and Saginaw, W. S., Mich., the well-known seed grower, died at noon May 19, at his home at Pierrepont Manor. Mr. Grenell's health began to fail last fall and after he went home in December to be with his family during the holiday season he declined rapidly. In January he went to Clifton Springs, where he remained about two months, going from there to Baltimore, where he was treated with radium. By this time he was so weak the trip from Baltimore to his home at Pierrepont Manor had to be made by private car. Mr. Grenell suffered with cancer, but the immediate cause of death was heart failure. While it was known he was seriously ill and a physician and nurse were in constant attendance, it was not known that the end was so near, and he passed away unexpectedly.

The Late W. H. Grenell.

Mr. Grenell was born at Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., January 26, 1846. He was a student at Union Academy, Cazenovia Seminary and Eastman's business college at Poughkeepsie. He began his career as a seedsman in 1873. About 20 years ago Mr. Grenell moved the business to Saginaw, Mich., and it will be continued under the present management, as it was the desire of Mr. Grenell that his business should be carried on by his grandson, who is now a lad at school. Besides his seed business, Mr. Grenell owned a large farm, comprising about 1,000 acres, near his home, and was a breeder of thoroughbred Holstein cattle. He had various business interests and was a director of the Citizens' National bank at Adams, N. Y. For 13 years he served as captain of Company A, Thirty-fifth regiment, New York State Guards. He was a member of the Masonic order, being affiliated with Rising Sun Lodge, Adams Chapter, with Watertown Commandery, K. T., and with Medinah Temple, Mystic Shrine, also of Watertown. As a young man he devoted much attention to music, being for many years leader of the village band. Throughout his life music gave him great pleasure. He was a democrat in politics.

Mr. Grenell was united in marriage with Adelaide E. Allen, who survives him, March 19, 1867. He is also survived by his daughter, Mrs. Matthew J. Huggins, his grandson, William Grenell Huggins, and his brother, Benjamin P. Grenell, all of Pierrepont Manor. The funeral was held at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, May 22, and was under the auspices of Watertown Commandery No. 11 K. T. About 80 knights in full uniform attended, with their band. It was the largest funeral ever held in that vicinity. The floral offerings were exquisite and very numerous, coming from all parts of the country. Interment was in the village churchyard, where several generations of his family have been laid to rest before him.

Mr. Grenell was an active member of the American Seed Trade Association and regularly in attendance at the annual meetings of that organization. At the Alexandria Bay convention in 1905 he was elected president of the association and the abounding hospitalities of that occasion will long be remembered by those who participated.

Diego, leaves Chicago 8:05 p. m., June 12. It is necessary that all those intending to take this train write at once to S. F. Leonard, 226 West Kinzie street, Chicago. Friends of members are invited to take this train. This will be a fine trip and members are urged to make every effort to make the special train a possibility.

"The side trip to San Diego may be omitted, if desired, and those requiring hotel accommodations in Los Angeles should write at once to M. L. Germain, care of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, Calif. It may be necessary to alter the trip from Los Angeles up the coast to San Francisco. Should there be 125 tickets assured we can have a special train up the coast, which will make side trips a possibility, otherwise it will be impossible to make more than one or two stops.

"Our arrangements with the Inside Inn necessitates visitors arriving either Saturday night, June 19, or Sunday morning, June 20. Reservations at the Inside Inn can be made by writing direct to the Inside Inn, Exposition Grounds, San Francisco, Calif. Rates are: Outside rooms, without bath, single, $2.50, $3; double, $3, $3.50, $4. Outside rooms with bath, single, $3, $4, $5; double, $4, $5, $7.

"Friday and Saturday the members and their families will be the guests of the local seed growers, who will bear all of the expense connected with railway fares, entertainment over night at Hotel Vendome, lunches, auto trips and barbecue at San Juan. This will be the first time the seed trade association has met west of Chicago and it will probably be many years before they come out to California again.

"We are planning to give our friends a good time and hope we will have a good attendance."

THE PROGRAMME.

Secretary Kendel has just issued the programme which includes papers as follows: "The Value of Technical Training to a Seedsman," by Prof. H. E. Truck Crops Report.

The conditions of truck crops on May 15, as received from a special list of growers, has been issued by the bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture. Conditions, as shown by reports from 16 states, indicate a shortage in both condition and relative production in all truck crops reported. New Jersey reports highest percentage of condition and probable total production in the list of states given, the majority of them being on the Atlantic seaboard.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, May 25.—Mushrooms, home grown, No. 1, 50 cents per pound; lettuce, 15 cents per box; radishes, 75 cents to $1.00 per 100 bunches; asparagus, 50 cents per dozen bunches; celery, 12 stalks, 25 cents; cucumbers, 75 cents per dozen.

New York, May 25.—Cauliflower, per dozen, $1.50 to $2.50; cucumbers, 75 cents to $1.00 per dozen; mushrooms, 25 cents to $1.25 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 20 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.00; lettuce, per dozen, 25 cents to 50 cents; rhubarb, per dozen bunches, 25 cents to 40 cents.

Staking the Outdoor Tomato Crop.

The controversy whether it pays or not to stake the outdoor crop of tomatoes goes on. If we were to take the opinion of experiment stations as final, the matter would have been settled long ago, for they have demonstrated that it does not pay in actual weight of fruit, nor in earliness. However, it is one thing to let the scales decide the matter and quite another to market the product. This truth was forced home to us recently when visiting a local grower who used to be an ardent champion of the "rough and tumble" method of growing tomatoes. We saw 10,000 poles in the ground for 10,000 tomato plants. Comment is unnecessary. What was all right 10 years ago will not do today and what will do in one place will not do in another. The fact remains that in our locality so many greenhouse tomatoes are sold that the public has become spoiled. The buyer has become used to the spotless greenhouse product and demands the same excellence clear through the season. So critical has the trade become that the smallest blemish or spot renders a product unsalable.

The objections to staking are many; cost of poles, cost of labor, often reduced yield; increased number of plants required. The advantages may be: Earlier fruiting; more perfect fruit, easier picking, less waste, closer planting, and finally, easier marketing, owing to attractiveness. In our locality one grower sets the pace for the others.

The general rule is to set a pole for each plant and run the rows four feet apart, with the plants from 24 to 30 inches apart. We have often used the greenhouse system outdoors with success; this means part strings. We set the stakes apart for four plants and run a wire over these stakes. The wire is fastened to stakes by a loop of binder twine; is neither nailed on nor wired on; just tied fast for easy removal in the fall. The strings (binder twine) are hitched directly to the plants below a strong leaf joint with a ½ knot and fastened to the wire. After this the plants are simply twisted around these strings, same as indoors. This system has the advantage that we can cultivate up to a late period and the drawback that careless workmen may injure the crop while putting up the support. The other method permits the planting of poles before setting out the plants. MARKETMAN.

Director of Farm Markets for Idaho.

As Idaho's first Director of Farm Markets, Governor Alexander has selected W. G. Scholtz, editor of the leading farm paper in that state, the man who prepared the measure creating the department, and mainly through whose efforts the bill became a law. Following the appointment, announcement was made at the governor's office that Mr. Scholtz was selected because of the strong endorsements he had received from the farmers in all sections of the state; the co-operative marketing associations and other organizations of farmers having strongly urged the governor to get Mr. Scholtz to organize the department and conduct the office during its first two years. The law in defining the powers of this new state official includes the following duties:

"To co-operate with producers and consumers in devising and maintaining economical and efficient systems of distribution, and to aid in whatever way may be consistent or necessary in accomplishing the reduction of waste and expense incidental to marketing.

"To help improve country life and to provide, as far as in his power, equality of opportunity for the farmers of the state.

"To ascertain, as far as possible, what conditions make for the success of the homeseeker and what conditions make for his failure, and to use all means within his power to remedy such of the conditions which make for failure as are capable of remedy.

"Upon request, or of his own motion, to investigate and obtain evidence in any case where he has reason to believe that fraud has been practiced upon or wrong done to a homeseeker in the sale or transfer of real estate sought for the establishment of a farm home.

"To receive applications for farm help, and applications from laborers desiring positions on farms, endeavoring thereby to bring the job and the man together, without expense to either the employer or employe.

"To receive from owners, descriptions of farm property for sale and maintain a properly classified list of such property for the inspection of prospective buyers."

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala., President; E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Secretary.

Fortieth annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June 23-25, 1915.

SHERIDAN, MICH.—The Sheridan Nursery will erect a packing house 30x80 feet.

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.—A house 20x100 will be added to the plant of the Poinciana Nursery Co.

BANGOR, MICH.—A. G. Hamilton, nurseryman, still carries on the business founded by his father forty years ago.

THE annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents will be held at Minneapolis, Minn., August 24-27.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.—The city park department is planting trees on the city streets and in parkings. About 200 trees will be set out.

EAST LANSING, MICH.—The forestry department of the Michigan Agricultural college reports a profit for the past 11 months. The department is unable to fill any more orders for nursery products, as the supply is exhausted at the present time.

THE annual report for 1914 of the Connecticut agricultural station, New Haven, states that the white pine weevil continues to do much damage to white pine plantations in that state. Cutting infested leaders in July and burning them is the remedy advised.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.—Through the efforts of the state highway department, the Commercial club has been offered 10,000 fruit trees which are donated to the club for the roads and public parks of this city by the Stark Nursery & Orchards Company of Louisiana, Mo.

CENTERVILLE, IND.—E. Y. Teas has sold his floral business and real estate to Fred S. Davis, late with the Davis Brothers Floral Co., who will continue the floral business at the old stand. Mr. Teas' son, Fred E. Teas, has taken over the nursery department, which will be continued in connection with his own business here. Mr. Teas, Jr., has been his father's assistant for years and is well qualified to assume the management of that line.

New Hedge Plants.

At Tachien-lu on the borders of Tibet, at about eight thousand feet above the sea, Mr. Wilson found hedges from six to eight feet high and so thick and spiny that a yak, an animal as strong as an ox, could not break through them. The plant of which these hedges were made, Ribes alpestre, var. commune, is now in flower in the collection of Chinese shrubs on Bussey Hill. This gooseberry has grown rapidly in the arboretum and appears to be perfectly hardy. There is little to recommend it as a garden shrub, for the flowers are small and inconspicuous, and the acid fruit is covered with prickles and has little beauty, but as a hedge plant it may prove valuable in the cold parts of the country.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, May 6, 1915.

Fresno, Calif., Parks.

The board of park commissioners consider certain changes necessary in the roads and walks to conform to the modern method of transportation. The superintendent has been instructed to draw plans for the elimination of sharp and reverse curves and also a general rearrangement of the planting. Stephen Child, landscape architect, has been called in to pass on the changes proposed.

New York Memorial Trees for Exposition.

Two oriental sycamores were shipped recently by the New York park department to the San Francisco Panama Exposition. One of them will be planted by Mayor Mitchel in front of the New York building on New York day, May 27. The second tree was sent for fear something might happen to the other one en route. Commissioner John Weier chose the oriental sycamore as the memorial tree after consultation with Chief United States Forester Henry S. Graves. The tree will be marked with a bronze tablet, and will keep company with a Norway maple which Governor Whitman is to plant near by in June.

TRADE SLOW IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

Business the past week has been practically at a standstill. With little call for design work, the call for cut flower stock was light, and as all home gardens are now filled with roses in bloom, there is little call for rose stock.

NOTES.

The annual "flower mart" held May 13 was an attractive and successful affair, being largely attended. Pot plants, cut flowers and shrubs were attractively arranged and with books on floriculture, garden tools, bird houses and other garden accessories, enjoyed a ready sale.

Samuel Feast & Son furnished part of the flowers used in decorations at the mayor's inauguration, but report that business has been dull otherwise.

The inauguration of Mayor Preston created a demand for cut flowers, the decorations being elaborate and beautiful.

Holliday Bros., Hamilton Floral Shop, and Chas. E. Smith & Co. report business at a standstill.

Edwin E. Seidewitz arranged several handsome pieces for Mayor Preston's inauguration.

J. Bolgiano & Son had a sale of rose plants May 24 and it is claimed that 25,000 were sold in four hours.

John Cook is cutting peonies in quantity, but reports business dull otherwise. R. J. B.

Rochester, Minn.

The Rochester Floral Co., Inc., is the successor to the Ross Bragg Floral Co. It is the intention of the company to sell the property on the east side of the city and erect a large range in the western part of the city. The two retail stores will be continued and an automobile delivery service installed. The officers are Ross Bragg, president; M. J. Kinney, vice-president; Gilbert C. Utz, secretary-treasurer.

The use of carnations instead of tags by the ladies of the Civil League of Rochester on May 15, the annual tag day, was the means of netting them $635. The idea was suggested by Ross Bragg, president of the Rochester Floral Co., and 3,800 carnations were disposed of. Flowers will be used hereafter instead of the untidy looking red tag.

Joseph Biehler, foreman at the Rochester Greenhouses, has resigned and gone to New York to accept a similar position. His successor will probably not be appointed until the new greenhouses immediately outside the city are ready for occupancy.

The contract for filling the flower boxes on the lamp posts of the "white way" in this city has been given to the Rochester Floral Co., the stock used being supplied by the company's green houses.

NASHUA, N. H. — August Gaedeke, florist, has disposed of his business, which he has conducted here for 30 years, to F. D. Sperry of Reading, Mass, but will remain with his successor.

TORONTO, ONT.—June 10 will be "Alexandra Rose day" in the city. The Independent Order of Daughters of the Empire will sell flowers and the proceeds will go to various childrens' hospitals and institutions.

GLADIOLUS.

FALL BLOOMING GLADIOLUS FOR JUNE PLANTING.

Avoid the late Fall vacancy in florists' flowers. Try June planting of Autumn Queen Gladiolus. This extra beautiful variety blooms late. Bulbs keep well for June planting after the rush is over. Splendid for florists' work. Extra good grower and bloomer. Fine foliage and spike, flowers all facing one way. Captures city trade. Color creamy white, with delicate pinkish tint on portion of petals.

Frank Winans, a Petoskey florist, says: "I have tried out Mr. Ward's Autumn Queen Gladiolus and think it well named. For floral work I find it fully equal to America and as to lateness, I used them from the field as late as November. It is a boom to florists."

SPECIAL TRIAL PRICE.

The regular price is $35.00 per 1,000.

Will send by parcel post, prepaid, for florists' test, First Size Bulbs:

25 bulbs for $1.00.
100 bulbs for $2.50.

JUNE ORDERS FILLED.

Cash with order. Local checks accepted.

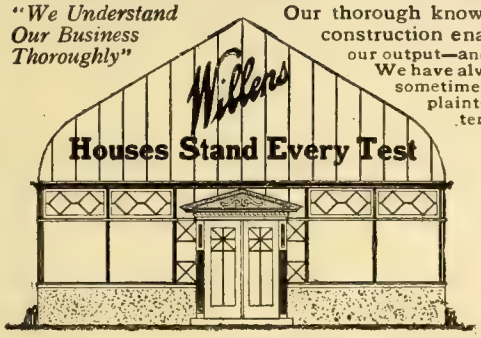
"We Understand Our Business Thoroughly"



Our thorough knowledge of the finer points in greenhouse construction enables us to save that much on the cost of our output—and we are giving you the benefit of this saving. We have always given 100 cents value for every dollar—sometimes more. As we have never yet had any complaints, we lose nothing by guaranteeing our material against defects.

Willens Personal Service

Every bit of the work is personally directed by one of the Willens'. If we do the erecting, one of the Willens' personally supervises the work. Careful attention is paid to the minutest details, each of which is conducive to longer life and better greenhouse service. If you have never tried us or are dissatisfied in your past dealings with others, begin now to benefit by our service and material. Write us today.

What They Say:

Willens Construction Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: The greenhouses you built for me last summer and with which I am so well pleased, received several severe tests within the last few days. During one cold spell of 30 degrees below, I easily maintained the desired temperature in the greenhouses.

I am well pleased with the material and also your pleasant business methods and am convinced that I have the finest greenhouses in Nebraska.

Yours very truly,

GOOD STOCK CLEANS UP DAILY.

The healthy demand for stock still continues. Everything that is rated as "A No. 1" sells up clean nearly every day; in fact, there is an actual shortage of some varieties. Carnations have been short of the demand nearly all week, and cleaned up entirely right along, the worst shortage being on Saturday, when not near enough carnations to fill orders could be obtained; especially was this true of red varieties. Long stemmed American Beauties have been in good demand all week; good stock was scarce and short and medium too are not abundant. Red roses have been scarce, especially in longer grades. Wards and Sunbursts are in good supply, with a good demand. Killarney are good color and quality fine. The warm weather the latter part of the week, however, brought stock in rather open, but the demand was good and stock cleaned up remarkably well. The call for Easter lilies is poor and callas are about done for. Lilac is a thing of the past. Sweet peas are in good supply, but mostly lavender. Pink and white, in the better grades, are in good demand. The demand for lily of the valley is fair, and stock is exceptionally fine. A few of the local, early red peonies have arrived, but most of the peonies sold on this market are of southern stock, and not quite up to local qualities when they arrive, which we hope will be before Memorial day next week. Baby gladioli have been plentiful with only a fair demand. Candytuft meets with a fair call. Swainsona is plentiful. Outdoor lily of the valley goes begging. Snapdragon and larkspur are in good demand at fair prices. Calendulas, daisies and forget-me-nots are used freely. String smilax has been in good demand, but is a rather scarce article just now, and what little does come in is short. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are equal to the demand, as is adiantum fern.

NOTES.

About 1,000 applications for vines, trees and shrubs have been received by Dr. Jean Dawson, chief of the bureau of fly extermination. "Live plants for dead flies" is the slogan, and by the number of plants and vines sent out the children of Cleveland are certainly "swatting the fly." Rose bushes lead as favorites.

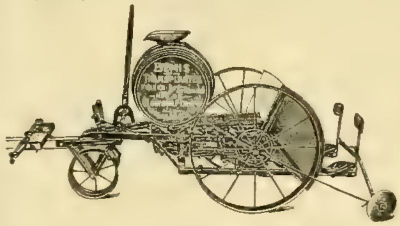
The Fuller & Johnson Bemis Transplanter has distinctive features which place it in a class by itself. Has been on the market for twenty-five years and fully 100,000 are in use. Buy only the original F. & J. Bemis and get entire satisfaction. The vital points of a perfect working transplanter are found only in the F. & J. Bemis, to-wit:

Floating shoe, independent of the frame. The pressure applied on the floating shoe and pressure plates by the weight of the droppers. Two absolutely exclusive features of this machine. Convenient device for regulating the quantity of water required. Perfect spacing device. Highly tempered and polished soft center steel pressure plates. Regulating of the furrow depth by varying depth shoes. Locking of front truck so that the machine runs straight on the row.



Hoopes & Sons, Muscantine, Iowa, probably the largest growers of vegetables in the United States, state that—

"It is the only practical setting machine now on the market. We, as well as all growers in this vicinity, have been using this transplanter for many years. Is simple in construction, no complicated parts to get out of order, will plant on level ground or on different height ridges any distance apart desired, will plant from four to seven acres per day. Plants are set better, thrive better and make better crops than when set by hand. Machine soon repays its cost in the labor saved and increase of crops. Will set all kinds of plants, sweet potatoes, cabbage, tomatoes, strawberries, etc. We also plant all of our peas, beans, melon seed, Irish potatoes, etc., with it. Fertilizer attachment deposits fertilizer just as desired."

the habit of coming about 4 o'clock in the morning usually leaves his carnations in boxes in front of the store, where they lay until the store opens, but not so on this Saturday morning. The empty boxes were found in the alley behind the store. Police located the carnations and also three small boys who stole them. But it seems some one "higher up" hired the boys to steal them, paying each of them a quarter. The dragnet is out for the older boys who engineered the job.

ALL STOCK SELLS AT FAIR PRICES.

The market for the past week has been very good with all stock selling at fair prices, a shortage of outdoor stock helping to keep the market firm. Tulips, and bulbous stock are gone. A recent snow helped to keep out the frost but peonies and irises suffered considerably and some of the earlier bedding stock will have to be replanted. Roses are selling at from 4 cents to 10 cents; carnations, 4 cents to 6 cents; lily of the valley, 4 cents; peonies, 4 cents to 8 cents; gladioli, 3 cents to 6 cents, and sweet peas range from 75 cents to $1.25 per 100. Several weddings in the near future will require a large amount of stock after Memorial day.

NOTES.

Several flower shops suffered loss from frost by not having room to bring in plants from the outside during the recent cold snap.

DULL BUSINESS IN ALL LINES.

The trade the last week has been quiet; very little doing in any line of business. The majority of the stores this year are not handling the artificial flowers that they have handled in former years. Geraniums are having a funny wholesale market; some of the greenhouses are asking $8 per hundred for them and selling them for $1 per dozen retail.

NOTES.

Crowle, the nursery man of Warwick, is drawing large crowds at his auction sales of nursery stock on Empire street. The crowds are large but the bids are very low. He is selling large quantities of fruit trees.

Sword ferns are scarce on the market here, and the demand for them is unusually heavy for this time of the year. There are plenty of Whitmani ferns but the public will pass them by for the sword variety.

The department stores are selling magnolia wreaths this year, each one saying that the other's wreaths are shoddy and that their wreaths are the best. The florists watch them with interest.

Bourgaize & Sons, of Hoxie, are cutting large quantities of outside tulips now that are finding a market in this city.

FT. WORTH, TEX.—Due to the original date conflicting with other state meetings, the annual convention of the Texas State Florists' Association will be held here, July 6-7, instead of a week later as originally planned.

The Florists' Convention Special

Leaving Chicago August 12 for San Francisco.

Chicago to San Francisco.

The transportation committee of the Society of American Florists announces the selection of the Chicago & Northwestern Ry., in connection with the Union Pacific R. R., Denver and Rio Grande R. R. and the Southern Pacific R. R. as the official route from Chicago to the S. A. F. & O. H. 1915 convention at San Francisco, Calif., August 17-19.

The official train will consist of all steel equipment, embodying all that is modern in railway travel of today, including luxurious Pullman sleeping cars, with open sections, compartments and drawing rooms. The official route selected as given in the schedule below has been selected not only on account of its scenic wonders, but because it will give each member the pleasure of combining his business trip with one of recreation at the least possible cost, and based upon time, safety, comfort and scenery.

A low round trip rate of $62.50, Chicago to San Francisco, with a return limit of three months, but not exceeding December 31, 1915, is in effect daily until November 30, and correspondingly low rates are in effect from other stations to Chicago. These tickets permit a wide choice of routes returning, with liberal stop-over and side trip privileges. It is the plan to stop over at Colorado Springs until 10:30 on the morning of August 14, which will allow time for an early morning auto tour to Crystal park, pronounced the wonder trip of the world. Rate, $3 per person. There are many other delightful trips around Colorado Springs: Pike's Peak, Garden of the Gods, Cliff dwellers at Manitou, Cheyenne Canyons, etc. A stop will also be made at Salt Lake City to permit a visit to the Mormon tabernacle for an organ recital; also a trip to Saltair Beach on Great Salt Lake. The balance of the trip will be arranged to cover the most interesting and scenic portions of the trip in the day time.

Members of the special train party may return east by such individual route as each individual may prefer, with date of departure and stop-over privileges as desired. The route must be selected, however, at the time tickets are purchased. The following routes returning are suggested:

FIRST. The direct route via the Chicago, Union Pacific and Northwestern line, viz.: Southern Pacific from San Francisco to Ogden; Union Pacific R. R., Ogden to Omaha; and Chicago & Northwestern R. R., Omaha to Chicago, the route of the famous "Overland Limited."

SECOND. Those who desire to visit the Grand Canyon on the return trip should purchase tickets to San Francisco via the route of the special train, thence Southern Pacific to Los Angeles (choice of Coast line or San Joaquin valley line); A. T. & S. Fe Ry. to Denver, Union Pacific to Omaha, thence Chicago & Northwestern Ry. to Chicago, or A. T. & S. Fe Ry., Los Angeles to Chicago. Via this route trip from Williams to Grand Canyon may be included at an additional cost of $7.50.

THIRD. For tickets to San Francisco, returning by way of Portland or Seattle, Wash., the charge is $17.50 higher. From San Francisco passengers have choice of rail or steamer routes. Via steamer meals and berth are included while at sea. From Portland and Seattle to Chicago a wide variety of routes is offered. Stop-overs may be included without extra charge on application at time ticket is purchased at Pocatello, Idaho, and Ogden, Utah, and the side trip made to Yellowstone Park. From Seattle, returning via the Canadian Pacific route through the Canadian Rockies, Field, Banff Glacier and Lake Louise may be visited. Or the Great Northern Ry. can be used to St. Paul, which allows a visit to Glacier National Park.

President Patrick Welch has appointed J. J. Hess, 1415 Farnham street, Omaha, Neb.; Harry A. Bunyard, 40 West Twenty-eighth street, New York; George Burton, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Pa., and H. H. Bartsch, Waverly, Mass., a committee to co-operate with the transportation committee of the Chicago Florists' Club, which is composed of Guy W. French, chairman, Union Grove, Wis.; Michael Barker, 440 South Dearborn street, Chicago, and Philip McKee, 902 Blackhawk street, Chicago.

As it requires 125 full fares to charter this special train, those in charge of the arrangements have requested that every member of the S. A. F. not only make an effort to join the special train party, but also reply promptly as to possibilities of making the trip.

Sleeping car reservations should be made at once, advising how many in the party, what space wanted and if any ladies are included in the party, addressing H. A. Gross. Gen. Agt., Chicago & Northwestern Ry., 148 South Clark street, Chicago.

The train schedule of the "Florists' Convention Special" and Pullman sleeping car rates follow:

Motor Delivery.

Paper by F. W. Beirn, delivered at a meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, June 1, 1915.

That the great bulk of the hauling and delivery work of the country, will in the near future be done by motor trucks, is an assumption that is justified by the rapid increase in the use of this type of vehicle the past few years. Just as surely as steam boats have replaced sail boats, and as extensively as wires have replaced men as carriers of messages, so will the motor truck supplant the horse in the field of hauling and delivery. The eternal movement toward better things, includes the use of motor vehicles, and they will be regarded as somewhat "antique" whose equipment does not include as an evidence of progress this modern system of delivery.

Our particular interest on this occasion, however, centers on the application of this type of vehicle to the florist. What are its advantages? The speed and ground covering ability of motor trucks are proving a big advantage to the florist. The swift moving power vehicle assures a rapid and punctual delivery of the fragile blossoms to weddings, dinners, banquets, funerals, etc. Representative florists of Philadelphia are making applications of motor trucks to their delivery, and are thus not only solving delivery problems, but are also opening the way to new business. One florist has been for four years a user of motor trucks. With these trucks he takes care of the varied needs of a general delivery of all kinds of flowers, plants, ferns, etc., for a variety of functions. The body of the machine has been built with a special regard to the service it must render. It is built high for plants, ferns, etc., so that they will not be crushed in transit. The fore door construction, which is built in and closed, protects the driver from the elements, and makes it possible for the decorator to go along on trips to places where his services may be needed.

The truck has been a big factor in developing a lucrative line of decorating work at distant points in the suburbs. Assuming, for example, a wedding. The flowers and plants can be packed into the wagon, and the decorator goes along. It is possible to make a twenty mile journey in a comparatively short time, and the work can readily be handled. The result of thus possessing an equipment capable of going the distances, has brought its return in the shape of many profitable orders.

In one respect the delivery of flowers presents a different problem from almost any other field where the truck is used. Weight is almost entirely absent from the calculation. Not many articles offered for sale carry less avoirdupois than the blooms used at weddings, funerals, banquets, and for decorative purposes of all kinds. Yet the motor truck is becoming the vehicle preferred for the florist, and it is not uncommon to see a vehicle of three thousand pounds capacity making a trip with ten pounds of blooms. This apparent contradiction is readily explained. The florist uses a motor truck because he is handling a commodity where speed and puctuality are vital considerations. If he cannot get to his customers on time, he might as well go out of business. There is no manner in which a wedding can be postponed until flowers are tardily delivered. Funerals cannot be made to wait, and the decorations for a banquet must be in place before the guests begin to assemble. Moreover, the fragile nature of flowers puts a premium on dispatch in handling them.

A prominent florist puts some of the more important arguments for the motor truck in the florist's business in the following words:

"We have to be ready for a rush at all times. There is no fixed demand in our line—no schedule of business as in the case of so many staples. A man has to have food every day, but he needs flowers only on certain occasions. A wedding, a banquet, a funeral, or several of them taking place in one day, can put a most severe stress on delivery facilities, and in order to cater to customers it is necessary to guarantee an absolute punctual delivery. In this rush work, the motor truck alone can rise to the situation. It is necessary to have the right kind of a car, right equipment, and intelligent direction. With this combination, it will be found that the truck cannot fail to give results.

"Trucks can be forced in a rush in a manner that would not be possible to horses. Trips that used to be very difficult for the horses, are the simplest things in the world for a truck. With a truck the florist is always in position to handle an emergency order and to make prompt delivery, no matter what the volume to be carried, or the distance to be covered. Weather conditions matter not. For this reason trucks are really an essential of the system."

This excellent summary is the experience of many prominent florists. Naturally all florists do a large amount of work in the suburbs, for it is in the suburbs that a large part of the city's wealth and social prominence are to be found, and these are the people who give a special regard to the handsome decorations in which flowers play so marked a part.

To send a pair of horses to Paoli, Pa., and back, is about the limit that could be expected of a pair of animals in one day. In fact, such a day's work is likely to leave them pretty well fagged out for the next day's toil. Such a trip is easy for a truck. It can make the run to Paoli in the morning and be back in the afternoon in time to run to Jenkintown, or even further. It is not uncommon for trucks in the service of Philadelphia florists, to go to points as far distant as Chester, Wilmington and Trenton. There are many fine residences in the suburbs, not situated along the railroad lines. These are often too remote to be reached by horses and wagon. Here is another application for the truck.

A special advantage in the use of trucks, is that it is possible to have the vehicle arranged to suit the particular needs of the florist's business. Mention has already been made of the elevation in the body to permit the carrying of tall plants. It is possible to have the bodies built so that they combine elegance and good taste with proper advertising value. Electric lights are installed so as to facilitate the handling of the flowers, so that the driver, or his helper, will not break or damage the flowers in removing them. Artificial heat in the interior of the vehicle is also feasible, and is a most helpful factor. This is especially valuable in cold weather to protect the more fragile blooms. A device something similar to the foot warmer more or less used in carriages, gives this safeguard against too low a temperature. Thermometers in the truck make it possible to regulate the temperature.

There is an undoubted advertising value in motor trucks for floral deliveries. People like to see a handsome power vehicle in front of their home, and it is nothing uncommon for a florist to get a request to have an order of flowers delivered by his truck rather than a horse and wagon. Moreover, the vehicles carry the name of the florist through the fashionable sections, and help to attract public attention to a firm that has the modern equipment to take care of its customers. Advertising is one of the great factors in business. Every business must advertise in one way or another, and the multiplicity of methods demands constantly more effective means of reaching the public attention. Good advertising is the creating of favorable public opinion for your store, your product, your service, or whatever you have to sell.

The motor truck is commonly considered only as a means for transporting things from place to place. But if one stops to consider, it is discovered that the motor truck is also an advertising factor of growing importance. The motor truck symbolizes progress—people think of it as one of the signs of the times, one of the things, which along with the wireless telegraphy, airships, skyscrapers, etc., separates the present from the past. When a business firm places its name and the name or illustrations of its products prominently upon its motor trucks it is an effective advertisement and creates prestige for the advertiser with the thousands who see it daily. The Philadelphia Public Ledger expresses the opinion that, "In a system of good book-keeping, a large portion of the cost of maintaining a motor truck delivery system would be charged to advertising. By this method justice would be rendered to the amount of profitable publicity that accrues from the possession of power vehicles. The motor truck, with the name of its owner prominently displayed, is a moving billboard that advertises a firm in all parts of the territory in which its business is located. A power vehicle is accepted by the public as a demonstration of the ability of the firm to make good its delivery promises, and to reach on schedule time sections inaccessible to other forms of transportation. This kind of advertising is invaluable. It is both a business-getter and a business-holder. Such advertising costs nothing in direct outlay. It is a bonus with the truck. It comes as an incident of an improved service.

Many firms have demonstrated by actual test, that every time a truck goes into an unexploited territory, it produces new customers. People see the vehicle pass. It is striking. They admire the enterprise it represents. Instinctively they figure that the firm that owns it must be modern, and must be selling high grade articles. The character of the medium is one of the important elements in any advertisement. The firm or the product represented by trucks advertises through a medium most potential in prestige creating value.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the great advantage of motor delivery in this line of business is efficiency. This efficiency, however, is not to be obtained in a haphazard manner. Much forethought and careful deliberation should be given to the selection of motor equipment, and the co-operation of transportation analysts (whose services are extended by most truck companies), should be obtained, so that the proper size and style of equipment will be the result.

There are many important points to be considered in the selection of a motor delivery vehicle. On many points of motor construction, manufacturers dispute and differ widely, and every truck on the market to-day has various good talking points which may, or may not, appeal to the prospective purchaser. But when all is said and done, the construction which gives the best results in actual operation, is the correct one, and all theoretical practice without the test of widely varied service, is of little consequence.

Your selection of a truck should be influenced by four factors. Simplicity of construction, accessibility, economy of operation and service. By simplicity, I mean that it should be of interest to you that your vehicle, going as it will into the hands of unskilled drivers, should be devoid of all unnecessary complications, and should have as few parts as is practical. All working parts should be accessible so that when adjustments and replacements become necessary, the amount of labor consumed in making said replacements and adjustments, is by this accessibility reduced to a minimum. The more accessible the machinery and parts of your vehicle, the less the mechanical upkeep will cost. Economy of operation is also important, and the mileage per gallon of gasoline and oil should be carefully looked into. While it may be true that gasoline does not cost much, and that a gallon per day more or less seems trivial, yet when this is multiplied by approximately 300 working days in the year, its value becomes more apparent. The cost of tires is an item to be strongly considered, and the vehicle selected should be well balanced with weight, so distributed as to give greatest life to the tires. The weight of the vehicle should also be considered, as it is poor economy to select any vehicle whose own weight is excessive for the load it is to carry.

Service is a most important factor to the prospective truck purchaser, and he must needs be assured that the delivery which supplants his horses, shall be continuous and uninterrupted. Assurance on this point can only be insured by investigation on the part of the prospective purchaser. He should be sure in the first place, that the company whose proposal he is considering, is big enough and healthy enough to live up to the promises it makes in this regard. He should ascertain whether a service station of said company is located in or near the town where he proposes to operate his truck, and whether the station is open at all times for his convenience. Also whether a complete supply of duplicate parts are kept on hand to meet the demands of all emergencies. This information can all be secured with very little trouble on the part of the purchaser, and the best way of securing it is from the present truck owners—the men who have had the experience and know whereof they speak.
